

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. STAT. 1 GEO.
4, c. 106.

XIII. STAT. 1 GEORGH 4, c. 106(1). A.D. 1820.

"An Act to enable Chaplains in the Navy presented to either of the Livings of Simonburn, Wark, Bellingham, Thorneyburn, Fallstone, or Greystead, in the County of Northumberland, to receive their Half Pay; and for other Purposes relating to the said Livings."

c. cxiv.

"Whereas by an act passed in the fifty-first year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act for erecting Five distinct Rectories and Parishes within the Rectory and Parish of Simonburn, in the County of Northumberland, and for separating the same from the Rectory and Parish Church of Simonburn; and for providing Parish Churches, Churchyards, and Parsonage Houses for the same; and for restraining the Commissioners and Governors of the Royal Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich, in the County of Kent, from presenting to the Rectory of Simonburn, or the said new Rectories, any other Persons than Chaplains in the Royal Navy,' it was enacted, that so soon as any chaplain of the royal navy should be presented to either of the rectories in the said act named, such chaplain should no longer receive or be entitled to half-pay, or any other bounty or allowances payable by government to chaplains in the royal navy: and whereas it is expedient to alter and amend the said act in manner hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that so much of the said act as extends to prevent chaplains of the royal navy, appointed to the said rectories, or either of them, from receiving half-pay or any other bounty or allowance payable by government to chaplains in the royal navy, be and the same is hereby repealed.

So much of recited act as excludes from half-pay, repealed.

Chaplains of the royal navy presented to Simonburn, &c. entitled to receive half-pay, &c.

"II. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for any chaplain in the royal navy, who shall be presented to either of the rectories of Simonburn, Wark, Bellingham, Thorneyburn, Fallstone, or Greystead, in the said county of Northumberland, or to the chapelry of Humshaugh, to receive during the time he shall hold either of the said rectories respectively, such half-pay, or any other bounty or allowances payable by government to chaplains in the royal navy, to which he may be entitled by virtue of his services performed in his majesty's navy, as the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being may direct.

Land tax chargeable on the rectories
deemed.

"III. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners and governors of the Royal Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich, in the county of Kent, to apply so much of the general funds of the said Royal Hospital as may be necessary for the purpose in the redemption of the land tax chargeable upon all or any of the said rectories of Simonburn, Wark, Bellingham, Thorneyburn, Fallstone, or Greystead, and upon the chapelries to either of the said rectories belonging.

First-fruits,
&c. to be apportioned by
Durham.

"IV. And whereas the amount of the first fruits, tenths, and other ecclesiastical dues chargeable upon the ancient undivided living of Simonburn has not been divided and apportioned upon the said several rectories, but is wholly charged upon the rector of Simonburn for the time being; be it enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Lord Bishop of Durham for the time being, by writing under his hand and seal, to declare what proportion of the said first-fruits, tenths, and other ecclesiastical dues now charged or chargeable upon the said living or rectory of Simonburn, shall hereafter be paid and payable by the respective rectors of Simonburn, Wark, Bellingham, Thorneyburn, Fallstone and Greystead, which said several sums so apportioned upon the said several rectors shall henceforth be paid by them respectively; and the said Lord Bishop of Durham shall in manner aforesaid, and he is hereby authorized to divide and apportion the sum heretofore payable as first-fruits upon the said living of Simonburn, amongst the said several rectories aforesaid, and the same shall hereafter be so set, divided, and apportioned in the proper books or records of the said first-fruits, and payable accordingly.

“V. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, it shall not be lawful for the rector for the time being of the parish of Simonburn, to nominate or present to the Lord Bishop of Durham for the time being any person to be licensed to the perpetual curacy of the chapel of Humshaugh, but the right of nomination shall henceforth be vested in the commissioners and governors of the Royal Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich, in the county of Kent, and the said commissioners and governors shall in such nomination be subject to the same restrictions, and have the same powers, as the rector of Simonburn would have had or been subject to in case this act had not been made.

STAT. 1 GEO. 4, c. 106.

Right of nomination to the chapel of Humshaugh vested in Greenwich Hospital.

“VI. And be it further enacted, that in case the presentation to the said rectories of Simonburn, Wark, Bellingham, Thorneyburn, Fallstone, or Greystead, shall lapse either to the Lord Bishop of Durham for the time being, or to the metropolitan, or to the crown, no spiritual person or persons whomsoever shall be capable of being presented, instituted, and inducted to the said rectories of Simonburn, Wark, Bellingham, Thorneyburn, Fallstone, or Greystead, save and except only such clerk or clerks, (being in priest's orders, who shall have taken a degree in one of the universities of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin,) as shall have been rated and served as chaplains of the said royal navy for seven years at the least, on board any of his majesty's ships actually employed in the service at sea, and who shall be on the list of chaplains of the royal navy; and in case no such sufficient clerk who shall have served as aforesaid shall be found, then a sufficient clerk, who shall have been rated and shall have served for ten years on board any ship or ships in his majesty's navy, and who shall be on the list of chaplains of the royal navy; and in case no clerk having so served shall be found, then, and in that case only, any other sufficient clerk who shall have been rated and served as aforesaid for any shorter period, provided he be on the list of chaplains of the royal navy: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall exclude from the benefit of this act any sufficient clerk, who in the discharge of his duty as chaplain in his majesty's navy shall have lost a limb, or suffered any wound or other injury equally prejudicial to the habit of body to the loss of a limb, provided he shall be on the list of chaplains of the royal navy.

Presentation to the rectories regulated in case of lapse either to the Bishop of Durham, the metropolitan, or the crown.

“VII. And be it further enacted, that in case the nomination to the said chapelry of Humshaugh shall lapse either to the Lord Bishop of Durham for the time being, or to the metropolitan, or to the crown, no spiritual person shall be capable of being licensed to the said chapelry, save and except a clerk being in priest's orders, who shall have taken a degree in one of the three universities of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin, and who shall have been rated and served as a chaplain in the navy during three years at the least on board any of his majesty's ships actually employed in service at sea, and who shall be on the list of chaplains of the royal navy; and if no such can be found, any other sufficient clerk who shall have been rated and served for six years on board any of his majesty's ships, and who shall be on the list of chaplains of the royal navy; and if no such can be found, then, and then only, any other sufficient clerk, who shall have been rated and served as aforesaid for any shorter period, provided he shall be on the list of chaplains of the royal navy; provided always, that in case no clerk or spiritual person who shall have served in the royal navy, and shall be on the list of chaplains as aforesaid, shall be found sufficient, proper, and willing to accept any of the said rectories, or the said perpetual curacy, then and in that case it shall be lawful for the said commissioners and governors, or in case of lapse, the said Lord Bishop of Durham, or the crown, to nominate a sufficient clerk or spiritual person to such vacant rectory or curacy who has not been a chaplain in the royal navy.”

"An Act to authorize the Exchange of Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, subject to Trusts for Charitable Purposes, for other Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments."

"Whereas lands, tenements, or hereditaments, subjected to trusts for charitable purposes, may be in some cases exchanged for other lands, tenements, or hereditaments, so as to benefit the objects of the charity: may it therefore please your majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons, body politic or corporate, in whom any lands, tenements, or hereditaments shall be vested, subject to any trust for any charitable purpose, to grant and convey to any person or persons, body politic or corporate, and to his, her, or their heirs, successors, and assigns, or otherwise, as he, she, or they shall direct or appoint, any such lands, tenements, or hereditaments in exchange for any other lands, tenements, or hereditaments, under and according to the several restrictions, declarations, and provisions hereinafter expressed, and not otherwise.

"II. And be it further enacted, that whenever it shall be thought advisable by the trustees or trustee of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, subject to any trust for any charitable purpose, to exchange the same, or any parts or part thereof, for any other lands, tenements, or hereditaments, application shall be made to the bishop of the diocese in which any such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, subject to any trust for charitable purposes, and so proposed to be exchanged, shall be situate, stating the objects of the charity, the manner in which such charity lands, tenements, or hereditaments are become vested in such trustees or trustee, and for what reasons it may be fit and proper that any such exchange should be made, and what benefit will be derived to the objects of the charity by means of such exchange, which statement shall be verified on oath before one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, or place where such lands shall be situate; and thereupon it shall be lawful for such bishop to direct such inquiries to be made as he may think proper, and to require such information to be given to him as he may think necessary, previous to his issuing such commission, as hereinafter mentioned; and in case such bishop shall be satisfied that reasonable ground has been laid before him to warrant his issuing such commission, then and in such case such bishop shall issue a commission under his episcopal seal, directed to four or more fit and proper persons, two of whom at the least shall be beneficed clergymen, and one of whom shall be a barrister at law of at least five years' standing, and by such commission the commissioners therein named, or any three of them, one of whom shall be a beneficed clergyman and one such barrister as aforesaid, shall be authorized and required to inquire whether such proposed exchange will be beneficial to the objects of the trust, to which the charity lands, tenements, or hereditaments so proposed to be exchanged shall be subject, and for what reason or reasons such exchange will be beneficial to the charity; and for the purpose of such inquiry, such commissioners shall examine upon oath (which oath they are hereby empowered to administer) all persons who may be brought before them for that purpose, and shall require the parties applying for such exchange to bring before them any other persons to be examined upon oath touching any matters which such commissioners may deem necessary for their information; and such commissioners shall also require all deeds, papers, and writings, which they may deem necessary for their information, to be also laid before them, and shall direct such surveys, maps, and plans to be made of the lands proposed to be given and taken in exchange, as they may think proper; and shall cause such lands, tenements, and hereditaments respectively, and the timber and trees on such lands respectively, and rights of common, and all other rights belonging thereto, to be valued, so as clearly to ascertain whether the proposed exchange will be perma-

Commissioners to take the following oath.

“III. And be it further enacted, that before such commissioners shall proceed to execute such commission, they shall respectively take the following oath:

“‘I, A. B., one of the commissioners named in a commission [describing the commission], do swear, that I will faithfully do and execute all the matters by the said commission required to be done by me, and a true report make to the best of my ability, as by such commission required. Geo. 4, c. 92.

“V. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that before any such commission shall issue to make inquiry touching any exchange intended to be made under the provisions of this act, three months’ previous notice shall be given of the intention to propose such exchange, by inserting the particulars, extent, and situation, and the tenure of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments respectively proposed to be given and taken in exchange, for three successive weeks in some one and the same newspaper generally circulating in that part of the country where the lands, tenements, or hereditaments proposed to be exchanged shall be situated; and also by affixing such notice in writing on a conspicuous part of the door of the church or chapel of each parish or chapelry wherein such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any part thereof, shall be situated, on three successive Sundays whereon divine service shall be performed, and shortly before the commencement of such service in each church or chapel.

Before issuing commission, three months notice to be given in newspapers, &c. stating particulars, &c.

“VI. And whereas in some cases where there were originally two or more trustees of charity lands, tenements, or hereditaments proposed to be exchanged under the authority of this act, the number of trustees may have been reduced by death or otherwise; be it further enacted, that in such cases the vacancies of trustees shall be filled up in the usual manner, prior to any application for an exchange pursuant to this act, except in such cases in which the number of trustees living and capable of acting shall be six or more, in which cases the majority in number of trustees living and capable of acting shall signify their consent to any proposed exchange in writing, by signing the application to the bishop to authorize such exchange as aforesaid; and when the original trustees shall have been fewer in number than six, and more than three, then the consent of not less than four of such trustees shall be so signified to the bishop; and if the original trustees shall have been only three or two, then the consent of all the trustees shall be signified by all of them; or if there shall have been originally only one trustee, then the consent of the sole trustee for the time being shall be so signified; and if any body politic or corporate shall be a trustee for any such charity lands, tenements, or hereditaments, then such consent shall be signified under the seal of the corporation, whether a corporation aggregate or sole, having a corporate seal, and such signatures, and the affixing of such seals respectively, shall be attested by two or more credible witness or witnesses.

“VII. And whereas in some cases it may not appear in whom lands, tenements, or hereditaments subject to charitable purposes may be vested, and there may be therefore no person capable of acting touching any such exchange as aforesaid, on behalf of the charity; be it further enacted, that in all such cases it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese in which such lands, tenements, or hereditaments shall be situate, upon sufficient proof of the fact, by instrument in writing under his hand and seal, to nominate proper persons to act as trustees on behalf of the charity, for the purposes of such exchange, before any other proceedings shall be had touching such exchange; which trust the person so nominated shall accept, by executing such instrument, before they shall act in such trust; and thereupon it shall be lawful for such trustees to do all things necessary for the purpose of such exchange, as if the lands, tenements, and hereditaments subject to such charitable purposes had been duly vested in them for such purposes, and to convey the charity lands proposed to be exchanged under the authority of this act; provided always, that if it shall at any time afterwards appear in whom such lands or hereditaments were actually vested at the time of such exchange, it shall be lawful for the person or persons, body politic or corporate, in whom the same shall be then vested by means of such exchange, to obtain, at his, her, or their own expense, a confirmation thereof by conveyance from the person or persons, or their heirs, in whom it shall appear the same were so vested at the time of such exchange; but the defect of title of the trustees so to be nominated by the bishop as aforesaid, shall not prejudice the title to the lands, tenements, or hereditaments received in exchange in trust for such charitable purposes as aforesaid, but the same shall be held and enjoyed for such charitable purposes, notwithstanding the lands, tenements, or hereditaments originally subject to such charitable purposes, and so given in exchange, were not vested, except by the authority of this act, in the persons who may have conveyed the same in exchange under the authority of this act.

Exchanges
may be effected though trustees may be proprietors of the lands to
exchange.

“VIII. And whereas doubts may arise whether under the provisions of this act an exchange might be legally effected where any trustee or trustees of charity lands, proposed to be given in exchange, should also be the proprietor or proprietors of the lands for which such charity lands should be so proposed to be given in exchange; be it therefore enacted, that under and according to the several restrictions, declarations, and provisions hereinbefore expressed, and subject thereto, but not otherwise, it shall and may be lawful for any trustee or trustees of any lands, tenements or hereditaments vested in him, her, or them, either alone or jointly with any other trustee or trustees for any charitable purpose or purposes, to convey or join in conveying, as the case may be, any such trust lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in lieu of and in exchange for any other lands, tenements, or hereditaments of which he, she, or they shall be seised in fee, to and for his, her, or their own use and benefit; provided always, that in every such case the bishop to whom application shall be made for any such exchange, shall, upon such application, and before any other proceedings touching such exchange, nominate and appoint some proper person or persons, having no interest in such exchange, to act as trustee or trustees on the behalf of the said charity, in the matter of such exchange, in the place and stead of the trustee or trustees who by reason of such interest as aforesaid shall be disqualified to act therein; and the concurrence of the person or persons so to be appointed to act as temporary trustee or trustees as aforesaid, shall be necessary in all subsequent proceedings relating to such exchange.

But the bishop,
in such cases,
shall appoint trustees who have no inter-lands.

Eviction in
ive title.

“IX. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in case the title of any person or persons, body politic or corporate, by whom any lands, tenements, or hereditaments shall be attempted to be conveyed in exchange for any charity lands, tenements, or hereditaments, shall at any time appear to be in any manner defective, so that such lands, tenements, or hereditaments shall in the whole or in part be recovered from the trustees or trustee, body politic or corporate, in whom the same shall have been vested or attempted to be vested in exchange under the authority of this act, or shall be in any manner charged or incumbered, then and in such case the trustees or trustee, body politic or corporate, in whom such lands, tenements, and hereditaments, or any part thereof, ought to have been vested indefeasibly for charitable purposes as aforesaid, shall enter on the original charity lands, tenements, or hereditaments conveyed in exchange as aforesaid, and hold the same according to the original right before the exchange, for the benefit of the charity, in case the lands, tenements, or hereditaments intended to have been vested by way of exchange for the purposes of the charity shall be wholly evicted, or in case the same shall be partially evicted, or in any manner incumbered, then to hold the same for the purpose of indemnifying the charity against the consequences of any such partial eviction or any such incumbrance, and until full satisfaction shall have been made to the charity for any defect of title in the lands, tenements, or hereditaments conveyed in exchange for the original charity lands, tenements, or hereditaments as aforesaid, and all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the charity in consequence thereof.

"X. And be it further enacted, that no part of the expenses attending any exchange to be made in pursuance of this act, shall be borne by or paid out of the funds of any charity, unless it shall be made appear to the bishop of the diocese, upon application for such exchange as aforesaid, that such exchange is solely intended for the benefit of such charity, and not for any other purpose, and is in respect of such convenience advantageous to the charity, notwithstanding any expense which may be incurred in effecting the same; and then so much of such expenses only shall be borne by and discharged out of the funds of such charity as such bishop shall find to be just and reasonable, and shall by instrument under his hand, allow and declare to be, in his opinion, an expense incurred for the benefit of the charity, and such as ought to be discharged out of the funds of such charity.

(2) Building and promoting the building of additional Churches.—By the general law and the constitutions of the church of England, no person has a right to erect a new public chapel, forming part of the ecclesiastical establishment of the church of England, whether as a chapel of ease or otherwise, without the concurrent consent of incumbent, patron, and ordinary, and without a provision for the indemnity or compensation of the future incumbent, perhaps in all cases; certainly if his pecuniary rights and interests are to be in any manner affected. The cure of souls of every parish or parochial district belongs to, and all its emoluments are by the original founder and endower set apart for the maintenance of, the incumbent and his successors, and become vested in the existing incumbent by his institution and induction. The principles upon which the consent of all these parties is required, are obvious. The consent of the ordinary is necessary, as the general guardian of the interests and order of the church, and as the conservator of its constituted establishment. The patron is a party, because the rights and value of his patronage may be affected. The incumbent himself is still more immediately affected, both in his pastoral duties and his pecuniary rights, both of which are committed to him when instituted and inducted. If chapels can be erected and ministers be placed in them at the nomination of others, not only will it deprive the incumbent of the means of directing the spiritual instruction of his parishioners which has been intrusted to him, and which he has solemnly undertaken; not only will it produce schisms and dissensions, and thereby exert an injurious influence upon the religious principles of the parish; but it must also necessarily affect in some degree the emoluments of the benefice, as well as the pastoral duties of the incumbent.

In Portland (Duke of) v. Bingham, (1 Consist. 161,) Lord Stowell says, "It is generally true, that the consent of the incumbent to the erection and use of a chapel is requisite." Kennett, in his Parochial Antiquities, vol. 2, p. 261, (ed. 1818,) states to this effect: The inhabitants of Piddington, within the parish of Ambrosden, had procured a chapel to be erected within their own village, with a mansion-house allotted for a chapellane to be provided and maintained by the successive vicars: this had occasioned some difference between the inhabitants and vicar, which was now composed by the joint consent of the patron, vicar, and the people, with confirmation of the diocesan, by virtue of an agreement, entitled, "Dotatio capellæ S. Nicholai in villulâ de Piddington," and from this deed, dated the 14th of October, 1428, it appears, that Piddington was divided from Ambrosden, and invested with distinct in populous Parishes :’ and whereas another act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his late majesty, intituled, ‘An Act to amend and render more effectual an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament, for building and promoting the building of additional Churches in populous Parishes :’ and whereas it is expedient and necessary that some of the provisions of the said recited acts should be amended, and other provisions thereof explained and enlarged, and that further and additional provisions should be made for rendering the said two recited acts more effectual ; be it therefore enacted by the king’s most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall be lawful for the master general and principal officers of his majesty’s ordnance, and also for the comptroller of the barrack department, and also for the principal officers of any other public department, having or holding any messuages or buildings, or any lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments, for and on behalf of his majesty, for the public use of any such department, by any grant or conveyance, signed by the master general or any two of the principal officers of the ordnance department ; or by any grant or conveyance signed by the comptroller of the barrack department ; or by any grant or conveyance, signed by any one or more of the principal officers of any such other public department as aforesaid, and countersigned, as to all such last-mentioned grants or conveyances, by any three or more of the commissioners of his majesty’s treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland ; and it shall also be lawful for any and every body politic, corporate, and collegiate, and corporation aggregate or sole, or for any trustees, guardians, commissioners, or other persons having the control, care, or management of any hospital, schools, charitable foundations, or other public institutions, by any grant or conveyance signed by or under the seal of such body or corporation respectively, to give, grant, and convey any messuages, buildings, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments respectively ; and if any such messuages, buildings, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments respectively, shall be copyhold at the time of any such gift, grant, or conveyance, in any case in parochial rights ; that the inhabitants were to provide, at their own cost and expense, and to have the nomination of a resident chapellane, who was to receive all and singular the fruits, tithes, mortuaries, and emoluments, within the chapelry, and hitherto paid to the vicar, and to occupy the mansion-house ; he was to pay due obedience to each successive vicar ; and the vicar released all tithes, excepting the reserve of 20*s.* in money, and one quarter of wheat, to be yearly paid to him and his successors : and the repairs of the chapel, chancel, and manse, were for the future to be on the inhabitants, and in no wise on the vicar, patron, or the successors, with a provision, that if the chapel was void for a year, the tithes, &c., should be paid to the vicar. This was not a newly erected chapel ; for Kennett says, pp. 298-9, “I have met with no records nor tradition, that assign the time when this chapel was erected. . . . Whenever it was first built, I believe it was not consecrated till ten years before this composition in 1418 ; . . . which seems to be clearly implied by this expression in the present instrument, ‘in eadem capellâ et ejus cœmeterio jam tandem de novo ritè dedicatis.’”

Remarking on this deed of composition, Kennett, pp. 268-9, says, “Here is the triple league or joint consent of the diocesan, patron, and incumbent, whose suffrages were all required, if the church were full, to authorize an alteration of this kind. In a synod at London, convened by Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury, in 3 Hen. 1. the 15th Constitution provides, Ne nova capella fiat sine consensu episcopii. So when an oratory or chapel was allowed at the grange of the abbey of Waverley, in the parish of Aultun, com. Southampt. A.D. 1250, it was done by the permission and consent of the bishop of Winchester, diocesan, and patron, and the rector of Aultun. So when the chapel of St. James, in the parish of Oakley, was constituted, A.D. 1418, the ordination of it, was by authority of the Bishop of Lincoln, diocesan, de consensu et assensu prioris et conventus, &c., the proprietors and patrons, cum voluntate et assensu vicarii. And if the lord of any manor, or inhabitants, presumed to erect a chapel without such due permission and assent, such act was neither just nor valid. Therefore, when a chapel was founded within the parish of Watlington, com. Oxon. by the lord of that manor, for the greater conveniency of his family and tenants, the abbot and canons of Osney, patrons of the parish church, entered a protest against it ; and in 1182, appealed to Richard, archbishop of Canterbury, and from him soon after, to Pope Urban the Third, who sent over a commission to the abbots of Abingdon and Missenden, and the prior of Kenilworth, who, upon inquiry and judicial process, dissolved the said chapel, because illegally built, without consent of the parties concerned.”

which the lord is willing to enfranchise the same; to be used as sites for churches or chapels, or for enlarging sites of churches or chapels; or for church or chapel yards or cemeteries, or for enlarging sites for church or chapel yards or cemeteries; or for parsonages or residences for ecclesiastical persons; and all such gifts, grants, and conveyances shall be made to the commissioners, or such other person or persons as shall be specified by the said commissioners, under the said recited acts and this act, to be used for the purposes thereof; and all such gifts and grants may be made and given without any valuable consideration whatever; and all conveyances and assurances made for carrying any such gifts or grants into effect shall be valid and effectual in the law to all intents and purposes whatsoever, any law, statute, usage, or custom to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding; and all bodies politic, corporate, or collegiate, and all persons whosoever, so giving, granting, and conveying as aforesaid, are hereby indemnified for or in respect of any such gift, grant, conveyance, or enfranchisement which he, she, or they, or any of them, shall respectively make or convey, by virtue of or in pursuance and for the purposes of the said recited acts and this act.

“IV. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which any lands, tenements, hereditaments, or any interest in or arising out of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, shall be given up, sold, or surrendered by, or taken, under the provisions of the said act or this act, from any body politic or corporate or person, and which any such body politic, corporate, or person shall be entitled to take any fine or fines upon the renewal of any life or lives, or of any lease or leases upon or of any such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, the amount of the value of the interest of such body politic or corporate or person which would arise out of the renewal of such life or lives or lease or leases, if the same were renewed at the time of such lands, tenements, or hereditaments being so given up, sold, surrendered, or taken, shall be paid to the body politic, corporate, or person entitled thereto, out of the principal sum ascertained under the provisions of the said recited acts as the value of such lands, tenements, or hereditaments; and the remainder of such principal sum shall be applied under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act.

“V. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the commissioners under the said recited acts and this act to lend and advance to any parish or place any such sum as to the said commissioners may appear to be required and expedient to lend and advance, for building of any additional church or chapel or churches or chapels, or rebuilding or in aid of building or rebuilding any church or chapel, or for or towards completion of the building or rebuilding of any church or chapel already commenced or in part built or rebuilt, or for the payment or part payment of any expenses, or sums due or to become due upon any contract heretofore made, or which may hereafter be made, for any such building or rebuilding, or for the completion of any such building or rebuilding, or for enlarging or in aid of the enlarging or improving any church or chapel in any parish or place, or for the purchase or in aid of the purchasing of any land or ground for any site for any church or chapel, or church or chapel yard or cemetery, or enlarging any site of church or chapel yard or cemetery, or for carrying into execution any other purposes of the said recited acts or this act, for any such period or term as the commissioners shall think fit, upon payment for any such loan or advance of such annual interest, not exceeding five pounds per centum per annum, or without any interest, if under special circumstances they shall think it expedient and fit, either for any part or for the whole of the term or period for which such loan or advance shall be made, as the said commissioners shall, under all the circumstances, judge proper; and such loans and advances shall be repaid at such times and in such manner and by such instalments as shall be settled by the commissioners in that behalf, and shall be charged and chargeable upon the church rates of the parishes or places, or upon rates to be made for that purpose, as is provided in the said recited acts in relation to advances authorized by the said recited acts; and the amount of all such advances, when repaid, and of all interest paid upon any such advances to the said commissioners, shall be applied to the purposes of the said recited acts and this act, anything in the said recited acts or either of them to the contrary notwithstanding; and it shall be lawful for the church or chapel wardens of any such parish or place, and they and each of them are hereby empowered, authorized, and required, to declare any such loan or advance, and also every other loan or advance made under the authority of the said recited acts and this act, to be applied to any of the purposes thereof, to be chargeable and charged upon the church rates of such parish or place, by any instrument in the form hereinafter mentioned, or in such other form, being as near thereto as the nature of the case will admit or the circumstance of the case shall require:

“XI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners in every case in which they shall be of opinion that it will be expedient to divide, or in which the said commissioners shall have divided any parish or place into two or more distinct and separate parishes, district parishes or chapelries, for ecclesiastical purposes, under the provisions of the said recited acts, to apportion, if the commissioners shall in their discretion think it expedient, among such separate divisions of any such parish or place so made separate or district parishes or chapelries, for ecclesiastical purposes, any charitable bequests or gifts which shall have been made or given to any such parish or place, or the produce thereof ; and in any such case to direct that the distribution of the proportions of such bequests or gifts, or the produce thereof, as shall be so apportioned to any such separate divisions of any such parish, shall be made and distributed by the spiritual person serving the church or chapel of any such separate divisions, or the church or chapel wardens or select vestry of any such separate divisions, either jointly or severally, as the commissioners may in their discretion, (regard being had to the nature of the bequest or gift, and the application thereof,) think expedient ; and also to apportion among such separate divisions any debts which may have been before the period of such apportionment contracted or charged upon the credit of any church rates in such parish or place, regard being had in all such apportionments to the circumstances of such parish or place, and of the respective divisions thereof so made separate and distinct for ecclesiastical purposes as aforesaid ; and all such apportionments shall be registered in the registry of the diocese in which the parish or place shall be locally situate, and duplicates thereof shall be deposited with the churchwardens of each such separate districts as aforesaid, in respect of or in relation to which any such apportionments as aforesaid shall have been made.

Commissioners may, in case of division of parishes, apportion charitable gifts and debts.

“XII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, in every case in which any parish or place shall be divided, under the provisions of the said recited acts, into district parishes or places for ecclesiastical purposes, with distinct district churches for each of such divisions, to order and direct, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, that all or any proportion of the fees, dues, and emoluments, arising and accruing from the publication of banns and celebration of marriages, and from churchings and burials, and the making, opening, or using any catacombs, vaults, or ground for burials, in all or any the several districts and divisions of such parish or extra-parochial place, shall remain with and continue to belong to, and to be received by or for and on account of, and to the use of, and to be accounted for, wholly or in part, as the case may require, to the incumbent of the original church or chapel, anything in the said recited acts or either of them, or in this act, contained to the contrary notwithstanding ; and every such order shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, and a duplicate copy thereof deposited and kept in the respective chests of the churches and chapels respectively of such parish or place : provided always, that it shall be lawful for the commissioners, with such consent as aforesaid, at any time within five years after the making of any such original order or direction, to annul or in any manner to alter any such order or direction, or the appropriation made thereby ; and such Commissioners may direct that fees for marriages and burials, in case of division into district parishes, shall continue to belong to the incumbent of original church of the parish.

STAT. 3 GEO.

In cases in which the rectorial tithes, &c. shall be surrendered by impropriators, &c. for the purpose of converting vicarages into rectories, the commissioners shall direct the same to be done accordingly.

new order or direction or alteration, when made, shall be registered in manner aforesaid.

“ XIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to convert any vicarage of any parish or place, or the separate divisions of any vicarage of any parish or place, divided under the said recited acts or this act, into a rectory or rectories instead of a vicarage or vicarages, in any case in which the owner or owners entitled in fee-simple to the rectory or tithes, if an impropriate rectory, or the patron entitled in fee-simple of a sinecure rectory, and also the incumbent of the sinecure rectory, of any such parish or place, if the same shall not be void at the time of any such conversion, and the person or persons, (if any,) entitled to the absolute interest in any lease granted of the sinecure rectory or glebe or tithes thereof, shall be willing to restore and release and re-unite the tithes and glebe and all other rectorial rights, dues, and emoluments of any such parish or place, or of any such proportion of any such parish or place, as shall be satisfactory to such commissioners, to the incumbent or incumbents of such parish or parishes, or place or places, and his or their successors for ever; and in every such case such surrender, restoration, or release, shall be made in such form and by such instrument as the commissioners shall direct; and the said commissioners shall, by an instrument in writing under the seal of the said commissioners, direct such alteration to be made, and conversion of any such vicarage or vicarages into a rectory or rectories, from the period specified in such instrument, and upon the conditions as to the transfer, restoration, or re-uniting of tithes, glebe, or other rectorial rights, dues, and emoluments therein mentioned; which instrument shall be registered in the registry of the diocese in which the parish shall be locally situate, and enrolled in the high court of Chancery; and such parish or parishes, place or places, shall for ever therefrom be deemed and taken to be, to all intents and purposes, a rectory or rectories, without prejudice nevertheless to the rights and interests of any other persons; and the incumbent or incumbents of any such vicarage or vicarages shall thereupon become and be deemed to be the rector or rectors of such parish or parishes, or divided parishes, or place or places, without any new induction or proceeding whatever, and shall be entitled to have and use, and exercise, all such remedies for the recovery of their tithes, glebe, and all other rectorial rights, dues, and emoluments, as rectors of such parishes or divided parishes, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if such parishes had been rectories, and such incumbents respectively had been in due form of law inducted as rectors therein; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners in every such case, immediately after the passing of this act, and before any such transfer and division can be finally arranged, made, and completed, to accept and confirm any such restoration or release and re-union of any such tithes, and accept and record the consents or engagements in relation thereto, of any such impropriator, patron, or sinecure rector and incumbent, (if there shall have been any incumbent to consent at the time of such conversion,) and tenant or tenants, if any, and to proceed to the completing of any such transfer or division upon such consent, for the purpose of converting any such vicarage into a rectory or rectories; and all such consents shall in any such case be valid and binding upon the heirs and successors, and executors and administrators, respectively, of any such impropriator, patron, or sinecure rector and incumbent, tenant or tenants, if any death or changes shall thereafter occur in any such patronage or incumbency, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the consent had been given and transfer made by the impropriator, patron, or sinecure rector and incumbent, tenant or tenants, for the time being, when the arrangement and division shall be finally completed: provided always, that no incumbent shall in any such case become liable to the maintenance or upholding or repair of more than one house of residence in any such parish or place; and when in any such parish or place there shall be more than one house belonging to the church or chapels thereof, the bishop of the diocese shall decide, order, and declare, which shall thereafter be deemed the house of residence, and be upheld and maintained and repaired as such; and the order of the bishop in relation thereto shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, and a duplicate copy of such order deposited and be kept in the chest of the church or chapel of such parish or place.

4, c. 72.

“XIV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in case the said commissioners shall think proper to convert into a rectory or rectories the vicarage of any parish or place, or separate division of a parish or place which shall be divided, or in which a new church shall be erected by virtue of the provisions contained in the said recited acts or this act, and the possessor or possessors of the sinecure rectory of such parish or place for two or more lives, by virtue of a lease granted thereof by a rector with the consent of the patron and ordinary, shall be desirous of retaining any manor or other hereditaments, being the glebe or part of the glebe of the said rectory, and shall be willing to surrender and release all his, her, or their estate and interest in the tithes, and the residue (if any) of the glebe of the said rectory, on condition that such manor and other hereditaments shall be vested in him, her, or them in fee simple, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized and empowered if they shall think proper, with the consent of the patron of the said rectory being entitled thereto in fee simple, and the incumbent thereof, by any instrument under the seal of the said commissioners, and sealed and delivered by the said patron and incumbent, (if any,) upon the execution by such possessor or possessors of the said rectory, together with the patron and incumbent (if any) thereof, and of the said commissioners, of such instruments as are hereinbefore mentioned or referred to, for surrendering, releasing, and investing all the rectorial tithes and glebe, (except the manor and other hereditaments to be retained as aforesaid,) to release and convey the said manor and other hereditaments to such possessor or possessors, or such other person or persons as he, she, or they shall in that behalf direct, his, her, or their heirs and assigns for ever; and such instruments in writing shall be enrolled in the high court of Chancery, and upon the execution thereof the manor and other hereditaments comprised therein, with their appurtenances, and the fee simple and inheritance thereof, shall be absolutely vested in the person or persons to whom the same should be thereby released and conveyed, his, her, or their heirs and assigns for ever, but shall be subject to tithes in the same manner as if the same had never been part of the glebe of the said rectory.

Sinecure rector may release part of rectorial glebe, &c. and retain the remainder in fee simple, for the purpose of converting any vicarage into a rectory by the commissioners.

“XV. (1) And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for all bodies politic, corporate, or collegiate, corporations aggregate or sole, tenants for life or in tail, husbands, guardians, trustees, and feoffees in trust, committees, executors, and administrators, and all other persons and trustees whomsoever, not only for or on behalf of themselves, their heirs and successors, but also for or on behalf of cestuique trusts, whether infants, issue unborn, lunatics, idiots, femes covert, or other person or persons, and to and for all femes covert who are or shall be possessed of or entitled to or interested in their own right, and for every other person whomsoever who shall be possessed of or entitled to or interested in any right of patronage or of presentation or appointment to any benefice, donative, perpetual curacy, or of any spiritual person to any church or chapel, or the performance of any ecclesiastical duties in any church or chapel, or for the trustees of any endowments or emoluments for the use of any church or chapel, or the incumbent thereof, or spiritual person serving the same, to surrender any such right of patronage, presentation, or appointment, endowments or emoluments, or to enter into or make any agreement relating thereto with the said commissioners and the bishop of the diocese, and to attach any contiguous division of any parish or place, with consent of the patron and incumbent of the parish or place, to any such chapel for the purpose of better enabling the said commissioners to convert any such church or chapel into the church or parochial chapel or chapel of ease of a district parish or chapelry, and to convert any chapelries or other divisions into districts or separate parishes for ecclesiastical purposes; anything contained in any act or acts of parliament, or in any deed or deeds, or any trusts relating thereto, respectively, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Bodies politic, &c. may give up rights of patronage and endowments, and emoluments held by them in trust, to enable the commissioners to establish district churches.

(1) Vide Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 15.

4, c. 72.

Commissioners may, with consent of ordinary, &c. convert district chapelries into district parishes, where suitable residences, &c. can be obtained for incumbent, and fees compensated for.

Where marriages are allowed to be celebrated in district chapelries, the banns of marriage shall be published in the chapels of the districts.

All acts relating to publishing banns of marriage and to marriages, &c. to apply to churches and chapels of extra-parochial places and districts.

When banns may be published and marriages celebrated in any churches and chapels, the bishop of the diocese to certify the same.

Marriages not to be invalid for want of such certificate, if had in the churches authorized by the acts.

“XVI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby empowered, with the consent of the ordinary and the patron and of the incumbent of the parish for the time being, or in case of the refusal of any incumbent, then with the consent of the ordinary upon the next avoidance, to convert any district chapelry made under the provisions of the said recited acts into a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes, or into a district parish under the said acts, in any case in which a suitable house of residence, and such maintenance as the said commissioners shall deem competent, can be procured and established for the use of the minister of such separate and distinct or district parish so to be made, and his successors, and in which a compensation shall be provided to the satisfaction of the commissioners and the then incumbent of the parish, for all fees, oblations, offerings, and other ecclesiastical dues which may by such conversion be transferred to the minister of such separate and distinct or district parish so to be made; and every such conversion shall be made under the seal of the said commissioners, and registered in the registry of the diocese in which the parish shall be locally situate, and enrolled in the high court of Chancery, and duplicate thereof shall be lodged in the chest of the original parish church, and in the church or chapel of the separate and distinct or district parish.

“XVII. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which marriages are allowed, under any of the provisions of the said recited acts or either of them, to be solemnized in any chapel of a district chapelry, and in which the parties, or either of them, contracting such marriage, shall reside in the district of the chapelry, or in any other district of any chapelry, the banns of marriage shall be published in the chapel or chapels of each of the districts in which such parties respectively reside, and no publication of such banns in any other church or chapel shall be legal, valid, or effectual for the purposes of such marriage; anything in the said recited acts or either of them, or any other act or acts of parliament, contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

“XVIII. And be it further enacted, that all acts of parliament, laws and customs relating to publishing banns of marriage, and to marriages, christenings, churchings, and burials, and the registering thereof, and to all ecclesiastical fees, oblations, or offerings, shall apply to all extra-parochial places, and to all divisions and districts of any extra-parochial places in and for which any churches or chapels shall be built or appropriated, under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, and to the churches and chapels thereof, and to the ecclesiastical persons having the cure of souls therein, or serving the same, in like manner, in every respect, as if the same respectively had been ancient, separate, and distinct parishes and parish churches by law, to all intents and purposes.

“XIX. And be it further enacted, that when and so soon as banns of marriage may be published, and marriage celebrated and solemnized, in any church or chapel under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, the bishop of the diocese within which such church or chapel shall be locally situate, whether in any parish or extra-parochial place or otherwise, shall certify the same, and such certificate shall be kept in the chest of the church or chapel with the books of registry thereof, and a copy thereof shall be entered in the books of registry of banns and marriages, and a duplicate of such certificate shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, and such certificate shall be deemed and taken to be conclusive evidence in all courts, and in all questions relating to any banns published or marriages celebrated or solemnized in any such church or chapel, that the same might, according to law, respectively be published and celebrated and solemnized in such church or chapel; and that all banns published, and marriages celebrated, solemnized, and had in any such church or chapel, according to the laws and canons in force within this realm in that behalf, shall, after the granting of such certificate, be good, valid, legal, and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever: provided always, that no banns of marriages respectively published, celebrated, solemnized, or had, according to the laws and canons in force within the realm in that behalf, in any church or chapel in which the same are authorized to be respectively published, celebrated, solemnized, and had by the said recited acts or this act, or either of them, shall be or be deemed or taken to be invalid or illegal, or void or voidable, by reason of any such certificate not having been duly given, or registered or entered as hereinbefore required.

4, c. 72.

“XX. And whereas doubts may arise as to the repairs of churches or chapels acquired and appropriated, or built or enlarged or improved in aid of the churches of parishes or places, under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act; for remedy and prevention thereof, be it enacted, that all chapels acquired and appropriated, or built or enlarged and improved under any of the provisions of the said recited acts, or under any local acts, in cases in which no provision is made relating thereto in such local acts, in aid of the churches of the parishes or places in which they shall be situated, (whether any districts of any such parishes shall have been assigned or not to such chapels as belonging thereto for ecclesiastical purposes,) shall be repaired by the respective parishes or places at large to which such chapels shall belong, and rates shall be raised, levied, and collected for that purpose in like manner in every respect as for the repair of the churches of such parishes and places, and all the laws in force for making, raising, levying, and collecting rates for the repair of churches, shall be applied and put in force for the raising, making, levying, and collecting such rates for the repair of such chapels, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same were severally, separately, and specially repeated and re-enacted in this act for that purpose, as to the repairs of such chapels; anything in the said recited acts, or any other act or acts of parliament, to the contrary notwithstanding.

All chapels belonging to parishes with or without districts assigned, to be repaired by the parishioners at large, in the same manner as the church of the parish.

“XXI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, in any case in which any division of any parish already divided, or which may hereafter be divided under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, shall be again divided, and on which any church or chapel shall be built or acquired and appropriated, for the use of any such new division, by any instrument under the seal of the said commissioners, to declare that all liability to any repairs of the church or chapel of the division from which such new division shall be so made as aforesaid shall cease from the period specified in any such instrument; and thereupon, from and after such period, the new division in which any such church or chapel shall be built, acquired, and appropriated, shall be liable only to the repairs of such church or chapel, and to the repairs, for whatever period shall remain of the twenty years under the said recited act, of the church of the original parish; anything in the said recited acts to the contrary notwithstanding.

Commissioners may exonerate any new subdivision of division of any parish already divided, or which may hereafter be divided, from repair of church of such division.

“XXII.(1) And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, with the consent of the bishop and patron entitled in fee-simple, in cases where the said commissioners may not deem it expedient to divide any parish for ecclesiastical purposes, or create separate districts for ecclesiastical purposes therein, either to make a permanent rent charge on or to apportion any portion not exceeding a moiety of the glebe lands, tithes, moduses, or other emoluments, for the benefit of the incumbent of or person serving any such chapel or chapels in any such parish, as in their discretion they may think expedient: provided always, that the presentation of every such endowed chapel shall be vested in the patron of the church to which such chapel or chapels may appertain.

Commissioners may apportion glebe, tithes, &c. or make permanent charge thereon for benefit of persons serving any chapel in the parish.

“XXIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to transfer any rights to any pews, with the consent of the owners thereof, in any existing church or chapel, belonging to any person residing in any division of any parish or place in which any new church or chapel shall have been or shall be built, acquired, or appropriated under the provisions of the said recited acts, to the church or chapel of the division in which any such person or persons shall reside, for the purpose of enabling the said commissioners to make or increase the number of free seats in the church or chapel from which such rights shall be transferred; and the persons from whom any pews shall be so taken for such purpose as aforesaid, and to whom any pews in lieu of their former pews shall be assigned by the said commissioners in any other church or chapel, shall have, hold, and enjoy the same respective rights and titles to the pews so assigned, as they respectively had, held, and enjoyed in their former pews, or such right and title as shall be directed and set forth in such assignment in lieu thereof, without any faculty, instrument, or other process than such assignment as aforesaid; and every such assignment shall be registered in the registry of the diocese in which the church or chapel shall be, and a duplicate thereof deposited in the chest of the church or chapel in which any such pew shall be so assigned as aforesaid: provided always, that no larger or greater or other right shall be given to any pew in any new church or chapel, upon any such transfer, than belonged to the owner, proprietor, or occupier of the pews in the existing church or chapel, in the pews in respect of which any such transfer shall be made.

"XXIV. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which rents shall have been fixed upon the pews in any church or chapel under the provision of the said recited acts for the purposes therein specified, notice shall be given for six successive weeks at the end of each year of all the pews which are vacant, or which will become vacant at the commencement of the next year, by affixing the same in writing upon the doors of the church or chapel and vestry room thereof respectively; and all such pews as shall not be taken at the rent respectively fixed thereon within fourteen days after the commencement of the ensuing year, shall in every such case be let to any inhabitant of any adjoining parishes or places in which there shall not be sufficient accommodation in the churches and chapels of the parish or place for the inhabitants thereof, at the rent respectively so affixed upon such pews, for any term not exceeding the end of the year; and at the expiration of the year, and also of every succeeding year in which any such pews shall be rented by inhabitants of any adjoining parishes, such pews shall be inserted in the list of vacant pews, to be taken in preference by the inhabitants of the parish or place to which the church or chapel shall belong; and all such pews as may not be so taken by any inhabitant of the parish or place may again be let and so on from year to year, to any inhabitants of any adjoining parish or place; anything in the said recited acts to the contrary notwithstanding.

"XXV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in case any inhabitant to whom any lease or demise of any pew, seat, or sitting, in church or chapel, of the parish or place or division or district of which he shall be an inhabitant, shall be granted for any longer term than one year, shall cease to be an inhabitant of the said parish, place, division, or district, or shall discontinue his or her attendance at the church or chapel for the space of any one year, then and in every such case his, her, or their lease, demise, term, estate, and interest in such pew, seat, or sitting respectively shall, at the end or expiration of the then current year of the said term or period, cease and determine to all intents and purposes whatsoever; and such pew, seat, or sitting, shall and may be again let in like manner hereinbefore mentioned.

"XXVI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to authorize and empower any parish, chapelry, township, or extra-parochial place, which shall be desirous of procuring a burial ground, or adding to any existing church or chapel yard or cemetery, to procure and purchase any such land or ground as may in the opinion of the commissioners be sufficient and properly situated for a church or chapel yard or burial ground, or as an addition to any existing church or chapel yard or cemetery, (whether such land or ground shall be situated within the parish or place for the use of which the same shall be intended,) and to make, raise, levy, and collect rates for purchase thereof, or for the repayment with interest of any money borrowed for the making such purchase, at such times and in such proportions as shall be agreed upon with the person or persons advancing any such money and approved of by the said commissioners; and the churchwardens or chapelwardens or persons authorized under the said recited acts to make rates for any of the purposes of the said recited acts, of any such parish, chapelry, township, or extra-parochial place, may and shall in every such case use and exercise all the powers and authorities in the said recited acts for the purposes of making and completing such purchases, and also all the powers and authorities in the said recited acts specified as to making, raising, and levying any rates for any of the purposes of the said recited acts; and when any such land or ground so purchased shall be situate out of the bounds of the parish or place for which the same is intended, the same shall after consecration become and be deemed part of such parish or place; anything in any act, law, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

“XXVII. And whereas provision is made in the said recited act of the fifty-ninth year aforesaid, for authorizing the remitting and allowing of duties of customs and excise upon materials used in the building of churches or chapels under the provisions of the said recited acts; and doubts may arise as to the allowing or remitting of such duties in cases of rebuilding or enlarging or increasing the accommodation of churches and chapels; for remedy and prevention thereof be it therefore further declared and enacted, that it shall be lawful for the commissioner of customs and excise of England, Ireland, and Scotland respectively, with the consent and under the authority in writing of the lord high treasurer of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or of any three or more of the commissioners of his majesty's treasury for the time being respectively, to remit all or any proportion of the duties of customs or excise respectively, or to order the same to be drawn back or repaid, for, upon, or in respect of any stone, slate, bricks, timber, or other materials which shall have been or shall be bond fide procured for, and have been or shall be used in the rebuilding, or enlarging or increasing the accommodation of any churches or chapels under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, or which have been built or enlarged or increased with the approbation of the commissioners; (and which approbation may be at any time certified under their seal;) and such duties shall, in every such case, be remitted, drawn back, or repaid, as the case may be, under such rules, regulations, and restrictions, and in such manner as shall be ordered and directed by the lord high treasurer, or any three or more of the commissioners of his majesty's treasury, in that behalf; anything in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding.

“XXVIII. And whereas by the said recited act of the fifty-ninth year aforesaid, the commissioners for managing the duties upon stamped vellum, parchment, and paper, are authorized to allow the full amount of stamp duties upon instruments made in relation to the said recited acts; and it is expedient to make other provisions in relation to such stamp duties; be it therefore enacted, that no deed of gift, or grant, security, contract, agreement, deed, or conveyance, or other instrument, made for any of the purposes in the said recited acts mentioned, or for any other of the purposes or under any of the provisions in the said recited acts or either of them, or of this act, or for the carrying into execution any of the powers, authorities, regulations, purposes, or provisions thereof, or therein mentioned respectively, shall be subject to any of the duties upon stamped vellum, parchment, or paper; anything in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding.

“XXIX. And be it further enacted, that from and after the expiration of five years after the transfer or conveyance of any messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments, to the said commissioners, or to any person or persons, for the use of any parish or place, as a site for any church or chapel, or any church or chapel yard or cemetery, whether such transfer or conveyance shall have been by gift or grant, or upon or in pursuance of any sale or purchase under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, although no church or chapel shall have been before the expiration of the said five years erected or built and consecrated upon such site, the said messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments, shall become and be and remain absolutely vested in such commissioners, or the person or persons to whom the same was conveyed for the purposes of the said acts and this act, free from all demands or claims of any body politic or corporate, or person or persons whatever, and without being thereafter subject to any question as to any right, title, or claim thereto, or in any manner affecting the same.

“XXXI. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which the commissioners shall build or grant any sum of money in aid of the building of any new church or chapel, in any parish or place in which the patronage of or nomination or appointment of the ecclesiastical person to serve such church or chapel shall not belong to his majesty, or to any body politic or corporate or collegiate, or any corporation sole or aggregate, or to any trustees, commissioners, directors, or other persons having the charge, care, or management of any public or charitable institution, or to any trustees of any church or chapel, or to any private person, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by any instrument under seal, to declare that such patronage, nomination, or appointment shall, either for ever, or for such time and in such manner as the said commissioners shall direct, go to or be exercised by the bishop of the diocese within whose jurisdiction as diocesan such parish or place shall be, or if exempt from such jurisdiction, then by the bishop of the diocese in which such parish or place shall be locally situate; anything contained in any act or acts of parliament, or law or laws, or any usage or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.

“XXXII. And whereas doubts have arisen whether the commissioners are empowered to use, exercise, and enforce certain of the provisions of the said recited acts and this act in aid of the parishes and places in certain cases not within the limitations of the said recited acts, with respect to the population or extent of such parishes or places, or which may not come within any of the regulations of the said recited acts or this act, in respect of any advances or loans in aid of such parishes, or in which parishes or places cannot comply with the regulations and restrictions contained in the said recited acts or this act; be it therefore declared and enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, in any case in which they shall, under the special circumstances of any parish or place which shall not be within any of the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, deem it expedient, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to use, exercise, and put in execution, all or any of the provisions of the said recited acts or this act relating to the procuring or taking of any land or ground for the purpose of procuring for any such parish or place, or of aiding in the procuring for any such parish or place, any land or ground for any of the purposes of the said recited acts or this act, or for the purpose of carrying into execution any of the provisions of the said recited acts or this act with respect to the division or consolidation of any parish or district: provided nevertheless, that the commissioners shall in every such case enter in their proceedings the nature of the special grounds and circumstances under which they shall deem it expedient so to act.

“XXXIII. And whereas doubts have arisen and may arise as to grants made by the said commissioners, in cases in which trusts have been created by acts of parliament or otherwise, in relation to the churches or chapels for which such grants have been or may be made, and whether the making such grants may, under the provisions of the said recited acts and this act, interfere with such trusts; for remedy and prevention whereof, be it therefore declared and enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to make any grant or grants in relation, or confirm any grant or grants heretofore made for any church or chapel in relation to which any trusts have been created by any act or acts of parliament, or any deed or deeds, or instrument of consecration, which may not in all respects concur with the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, and to declare at the time of making or confirming any such grant that any such trusts shall notwithstanding remain and continue in full force: provided always, that the commissioners shall, in any such case, enter in their proceedings the special grounds upon which every such grant has been made and confirmed; and in every such case such trusts shall remain and continue in full force; anything in the said recited acts or this act, or in the said trusts and regulations, to the contrary notwithstanding.

“XXXIV. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which any grant shall have been or shall be made of any land or ground, for any of the purposes of the said recited acts or this act, as a gift, or without any pecuniary consideration being paid for the same, and in which the commissioners shall determine not to apply such land or ground to any of the purposes of the said recited acts or this act, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to exchange any such land or ground for any other land or ground which may, in the judgment of the said commissioners, be more eligible for the purpose for which the same was given; or with the consent of the grantor or grantors thereof, or their heirs or successors, to apply such land or ground to any

This act not to affect the powers of acts relating to any particular parish.

“XXXV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to repeal or alter, vary or affect, any powers, authorities, clauses, or provisions contained in any act or acts of parliament passed in the last session of parliament, or which may be passed in this present session of parliament, relating to any particular parish or place, or to authorize or empower the commissioners under the said recited acts or this act to make or enforce any order, direction, or regulation under the provisions of the said recited acts or this act, so as to alter or affect any such powers or authorities as aforesaid, or otherwise contrary to any clause or provision contained in any such act or acts of parliament relating to any particular parish or place; and that all the powers, authorities, clauses, regulations, and provisions in such local acts contained shall remain in full force, and be used, enforced, and applied in the same manner and by the same persons as if this act had not passed; anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Powers of bishops, &c. not to be invalidated;

“An Act to amend certain Provisions of the twenty-sixth of George the Second, for the better preventing of Clandestine Marriages.”

26 Geo. 2, c. 33.

“Whereas it is, amongst other things, provided, by an act passed in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Second, intituled, ‘An Act for the better preventing of Clandestine Marriages,’ that all marriages solemnized by licence after the twenty-fifth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, where either of the parties, (not being a widower or a widow,) shall be under the age of twenty-one years, which shall be had without the consent of the father of such of the parties so under age, (if then living,) first had and obtained, or, if dead, of the guardian or guardians of the person of the party so under age lawfully appointed, or one of them, and in case there shall be no such guardian or guardians, then of the mother, (if living and unmarried,) or if there shall be no mother living and unmarried, then of a guardian or guardians of the person appointed by the court of Chancery, shall be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever; and whereas great evils and injustice have arisen from such provisions; for remedy hereof, be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that so much of the said statute as is hereinbefore recited, as far as the same relates to any marriage to be hereafter solemnized, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

"II. And be it further enacted, that in all cases of marriage had and solemnized by licence before the passing of this act (1), without any such consent (2) as is required by so much of the said statute as is hereinbefore recited, and where the parties shall have continued to live together as husband and wife (3) till the death of one of them, or till the passing of this act, or shall only have discontinued their cohabitation for the purpose or during the pending of any proceedings touching the validity of such marriage, such marriage, if not otherwise invalid (4), shall be deemed to be good and valid (5) to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

"III. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained

Certain parts of 26 Geo. 2, relating to consent, repealed.

Marriages solemnized by licence without consent, as required by recited act, &c. if not otherwise invalid, shall be deemed good.

Act not to render valid

(1) Before the passing of this act:—The retrospective operation of Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, is not repealed by Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76. Rose v. Blakemore, R. & M. 382.

(2) Consent:—In Duins v. Donovan, (3 Hagg. 305,) Dr. Lushington observed: "The 3rd Geo. 4, c. 75, s. 2, (pleaded in the libel,) generally and practically speaking, may be said to render valid, with certain exceptions, all marriages of minors previously solemnized by licence without the consent of the parent or guardian, thus far restoring the general law as to the validity of such marriages, which the former act declared absolute nullities."

(3) Continued to live together as husband and wife:—To have constituted a living together of persons as man and wife, under a marriage, whilst minors, without consent, &c. within Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, s. 2, so as to give the marriage legal effect, notwithstanding the provisions of the statute, the parties must either have cohabited till the death of one of them, or be separated by deed recognising their character as husband and wife, or a separate maintenance must have been allowed to the wife as such.

In King v. Sansom, (3 Add. 277,) a marriage by licence which was null and void, by reason of minority, and want of legal consent, under Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, was held to be rendered a good and valid marriage by the retrospective operation of Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, it being held, that the parties, though not actually cohabiting up to the time of the passing of Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, did still "continue to live together as husband and wife," in legal construction, within its true intent and meaning, up to that time, sufficiently to render the retrospective provisions of Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, applicable to such their marriage.

But in Poole v. Poole, (2 C. & J. 66,) where it appeared that, in February, 1816, a marriage took place between two minors, by licence, without consent; that they cohabited until June, 1816, when, from the misconduct of the husband, he was obliged to leave the house where they had been residing; that they then lived separate until October, 1817, when the husband died; that, after the separation in June, 1816, he, on various occasions, insisted that she was not his lawful wife, and gave that as a reason for not living with her again; but there was some slight evidence of small sums supplied to the wife, being allowed in the rent of a farm held under the husband, but under what circumstances did not appear:—it was held, that these parties did not live together as man and wife, until the death of the husband, within the meaning of Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, s. 2.

In Bridgwater v. Crutchley, (1 Add. 473,) a marriage by licence was deemed null and void, under Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, by reason of minority and want of legal consent, and not to be cured by Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, s. 2, there not having been a subsequent cohabitation.

(4) If not otherwise invalid:—Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, did not render good and valid marriages had by banns, prior to the passing of that act, such marriages being in themselves null and void by reason of undue publication of banns; but only such as, being had by licence prior to that period, were, in themselves, null and void by reason of minority and want of legal consent. A marriage, therefore, prior to the 1st of September, 1822, had in virtue of banns unduly published, is still a nullity; and must be so pronounced, upon proof made, in a suit instituted for that purpose.

Thus, in Stayte v. Farguharson, (3 Add. 282,) a marriage had in virtue of false banns, (the wife, de facto, personating, at the time of the marriage, the female as for whose marriage with the husband, de facto, the banns had been published,) was pronounced null and void under Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, a statute still in force, as to the particular marriage under Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, and Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76.

(5) Good and valid:—A marriage which would have been void by Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, and had once been rendered valid by Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, s. 2, could not, subsequently, be rendered invalid by the marriage of either of the parties, during the life of the other, with a third person. Ras v. St. John Delpike, 2 B. & Ad. 226.

shall extend or be construed to extend to render valid any marriage declared invalid by any court of competent jurisdiction, before the passing of this act, nor any marriage where either of the parties shall at any time afterwards, during the life of the other party, have lawfully intermarried with any other person.

"IV. Provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall be taken or deemed to render any marriage valid, the invalidity of which has been established before the passing of this act, upon the trial of any issue touching its validity, or touching the legitimacy of any person alleged to be the descendant of the parties to such marriage.

"V. Provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall be taken or deemed to render valid any marriage, the validity of which, or the legitimacy of any person alleged to be the lawful descendant of the parties married has been duly brought into question in proceedings in any causes or suits in law or equity in which judgments or decrees, or orders of court, have been pronounced (1) or made, before the passing of this act, in consequence of or from the effect of proof in evidence having been made in such causes or suits of the invalidity of such marriage, or the illegitimacy of such descendant.

"VI. Provided further, and be it further enacted, that if at any time before the passing of this act any property, real or personal, has been in any manner possessed, or any title of honour has been in any manner enjoyed by any person or persons whomsoever, upon the ground, or upon the pretence, or under colour of the invalidity of any marriage, by reason that it was had and solemnized without such consent as aforesaid, then and in such case, although no sentence or judgment has been pronounced in any court against the validity of such marriage, the right and interest in such property or title of honour shall in no manner be affected or prejudiced by this act, or anything herein contained, but shall remain and be the same to all persons, and to all intents and purposes, as if this act had never been made.

"VII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to affect or call in question any act done before the passing of this act under the authority of any court, or in the administration of any personal estate or effects, or the execution of any will or testament, or the performance of any trust.

"VIII. And be it further enacted, that no licence for any marriage shall, from and after the first day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-two, be granted by any person having authority to grant the same, until oath shall have been made by the persons and to the effect required by this act; and if such licence shall be required for the marriage of parties, both or either of whom shall be alleged to be of the age of twenty-one years, such parties shall respectively make oath that they are respectively, and that each of them believes the other to be, of the full age of twenty-one years or upwards; and if both parties shall be under the age of twenty-one years, but shall be alleged to be a widower and widow, then each of such parties shall make oath accordingly, as to himself and herself, and as to his and her belief with respect to the other party; and if one of the parties shall be of the age of twenty-one years, but the other party shall be under that age, and a widower or widow, both parties shall make oath accordingly, as to himself and herself, and as to his and her belief with respect to the other party; and if both or either of the parties shall be under the age of twenty-one years, not being a widower or widow, both of such parties shall make oath accordingly, as to himself and herself, and as to his and her belief with respect to the other party; and in such case both parties shall also make oath that the person or persons whose consent shall be required by law to the marriage of such parties has been given, and has been signified in the manner required by this act;

(1) Judgments or decrees, or orders of court, have been pronounced:—An appeal only suspends the sentence appealed from, and does not render it a nullity. Hence, the Stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, which passed after a sentence of the Consistory court of London pronouncing a marriage null and void by reason of minority and want of consent under Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, though pending an appeal from that sentence, was held, in no degree, to affect the question of such marriage. Blyth v. Blyth, 1 Add. 312.

and if both or either of the parties shall be alleged to be of the age of twenty-one years, such licence shall not be granted until there shall be produced, to the person from whom such licence shall be required, an extract or extracts from the register of the baptism of such parties or party so alleged to be of the age of twenty-one years, if such register shall be in England, and can be found; and each of such extracts shall be proved upon oath, by some other person or persons, to be a true extract from such register, and to relate to the baptism of the party to whom the same shall be alleged to relate, or according to the belief of the person making such oath; but if such register shall not be in England, or cannot be found, then such licence shall not be granted unless such fact shall be proved upon oath to the satisfaction of the person from whom such licence shall be sought, and unless some person or persons, having knowledge of the party or parties so alleged to be of the full age of twenty-one years, shall make oath of the fact that such party or parties is or are of that age to the knowledge or belief of such person or persons so making oath as aforesaid, stating the grounds for such knowledge or belief; and in all cases except cases of special licences to be granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury and his officers, according to the proviso for that purpose in the said act of the twenty-sixth year of King George the Second, oath shall also be made, by each of the parties for whose marriage a licence shall be sought, of the residence of such parties for the space of four weeks immediately before the granting of such licence, according to the said act of twenty-sixth year of King George the Second.

“X. And be it further enacted, that all such oaths as are required by this act for the purpose of obtaining any licence shall be respectively sworn and taken before a surrogate of the person from whom any such licence as aforesaid shall be sought, or before a surrogate of some other person having power to grant licences of marriage; and if any person or persons in any oath to be made and taken in pursuance of this act, for the purpose of obtaining any licence of marriage, shall knowingly and wilfully swear any matter or thing which shall be false or untrue, every person so offending shall, on conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall suffer the like pains and penalties, and incur the same disabilities, as persons guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject to and incur; and if any person shall knowingly and wilfully obtain any licence for the marriage of such person, or of

"XVI. And be it further enacted, that before the publication of banns of matrimony in any church or chapel, pursuant to the provisions for that purpose in the said act of the twenty-sixth year of the reign of his said late majesty

King George the Second, there shall be delivered to the proper minister of the said church or chapel an affidavit or affidavits in writing, sworn before such minister or one of his majesty's justices of the peace, by the parties for whose marriage such banns shall be required to be published, stating truly the christian and surnames of such parties respectively, and the house or houses of their respective abode within such parish or chapelry, or within an extra-parochial place adjoining to such parish or chapelry, if both shall abide therein, or of one of such parties if one only shall abide therein, and the time during which such parties respectively, or one of them, if one only shall abide therein, shall have dwelt in such house or houses, as occupier or occupiers thereof, or as lodger or lodgers therein; and such affidavit or affidavits shall also state, either that both the parties for whose marriage such banns shall be required to be published have attained the age of twenty-one years, or if both of them shall be under such age then such affidavit shall state that both of them are under such age, and if one of them only shall be under such age then such affidavit shall state that such party is under such age; and such affidavit or affidavits shall be delivered to such minister before the publication of such banns; and in case any person shall in any such affidavit wilfully swear falsely in any matter contained therein, such person shall be deemed guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury, and, being thereof convicted by due course of law, shall suffer the pains and penalties of wilful and corrupt perjury, and shall forfeit and lose to the king's majesty all estate, benefit, profit, and advantage, which such person shall derive from the marriage of such person, in consequence of the publication of banns of matrimony in pursuance of such affidavit, to be disposed of by his majesty as he shall see fit; any grant of forfeitures or other matter or thing to the contrary notwithstanding.

"XVII. And be it further enacted, that such banns shall not be published until the true Christian and surnames of the said persons, and the house or houses of their respective abodes within such parish or chapelry, or extra-parochial place as aforesaid, as stated in such affidavit, shall be affixed on the principal door of the church or chapel, and in some conspicuous place within the said church or chapel, in which such banns shall be published as aforesaid, and shall remain so affixed until the expiration of the three Sundays on which such banns shall be published.

"XVIII. And be it further enacted, that every minister to whom any such affidavit shall be delivered, for the purpose of obtaining the publication of banns of matrimony, shall deliver such affidavit to the churchwarden or chapelwarden of the church or chapel in which such banns shall be published, and the same shall be deposited by such churchwarden or chapelwarden in a chest to be provided for that purpose, and kept in the church or chapel in which such banns shall be published.

"XIX. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that after the solemnization of any marriage, under a publication of banns, it shall not be necessary, in support of such marriage, to give any proof of any such affidavit, nor shall any evidence be received to prove that such affidavit was not made and delivered as required by this act, in any suit touching the validity of such marriage; nor shall such marriage be avoided for want of or by reason of any defect in any such affidavit, or on account of the true name or names of either party not being used in the publication of such banns, or for such name or names not having been affixed as aforesaid; but it shall be lawful in support of such marriage to give evidence that the persons who were actually married by the names specified in such publication of banns were so married, and such marriage shall be deemed good and valid to all intents and purposes, notwithstanding false names or a false name, assumed by both or either of the said parties in the publication of such banns, or at the time of the solemnization of such marriage.

"XX. And be it further enacted, that whenever a marriage shall not be had within three months after the complete publication of banns, no minister shall proceed to the solemnization of the same until the banns shall have been republished on three several Sundays, in the form and manner prescribed in this act, and in the years, not exceeding twenty-one years, to any person or persons seised or possessed of the lands out of which such tithes shall be issuable respectively, having any freehold title or interest, or any interest for a certain term of years, in such lands, or to the person or persons having a reversionary interest of the like nature in such lands expectant on any term not exceeding seven years, or expectant on any freehold interest not exceeding one life, or to such persons jointly, or to any person or persons having any freehold interest, or any interest for a certain term of years, vested and in possession jointly with any person or persons having a reversionary interest immediately expectant upon such interest vested and in possession, all and every or any tithes or portions of tithes, predial or mixed, payable or belonging to such ecclesiastical dignitaries, persons or bodies corporate respectively, by virtue and in right of their ecclesiastical dignities, preferments, or benefices respectively, or payable, to any such lay impropiator respectively, in manner and under the regulations, restrictions, and conditions hereafter specified and set forth; any thing in any act or acts in Ireland to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

Lease shall be made by indenture. The patron of a benefice to be a party consenting.

"II. And be it further enacted, that every such lease or demise shall be made by indenture; and that where such lease shall be made by the incumbent of any benefice, presentative or donative, the patron of such benefice, or the committee or guardian of the estate of such patron, and if such patron shall be a minor or lunatic, or the king's attorney-general if the king shall be the patron, shall be a party consenting thereto, such consent to be signified before the execution of such indenture or the counterpart thereof, by indorsement on such indenture and counterpart subscribed by such patron, or by such committee, guardian, or attorney-general respectively, with the day and year on which such consent shall be signified; and that every such indenture shall be signed and sealed by all the parties thereto, and that a counterpart of such indenture shall be signed and sealed in like manner; and that in every such indenture and counterpart there shall be contained a full and sufficient description, by metes and bounds, of the lands subject to the tithes thereby demised, and a statement of the pariah and county; and if in a county at large, then of the barony or half barony in which such lands shall lie; and to every such indenture and counterpart there shall be annexed a map or terre chart, or ground plan of the said lands so subject to the said tithes so demised; and that the rent reserved and made payable in and by every such lease shall be made payable during the whole term of such lease, and shall be the best annual value of such tithes that can be had or gotten for the same at the time of making such lease, without fraud or covin, and without any fine, premium, or foregift being taken or received by or paid to the lessor of such tithes.

Indenture and counterpart shall be signed and sealed, with description and map of lands chargeable with tithes.

Rent best annual value without fine.

Consent of the ordinary to be indorsed before execution, on all leases by deans or inferior dignitaries, or ecclesiastical corporations. A memorial of every such lease shall be registered with the registrar of the diocese.

"III. And be it further enacted, that every such lease which shall be made by any dean or other ecclesiastical dignitary, or parson or incumbent of lower rank, or by any ecclesiastical body corporate, shall be made with the consent and approbation of the ordinary of the diocese; and that before the execution of such indenture of demise, or the counterpart thereof, the consent and approbation of the said ordinary shall be indorsed on such indenture and counterpart, and shall be subscribed by such ordinary with his name and the day and year on which such consent and approbation shall be signified.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that a memorial of every such indenture of lease, with such map or terre chart or ground plan thereto annexed, shall be lodged in the registry of the diocese within which the lands out of which the tithes demised by such lease shall be issuable, shall lie and be situate, within six calendar months next after the date and execution of such lease; and that such memorial shall be written upon vellum or parchment, and directed to the registrar of such diocese, and shall be under the hand and seal or hands and seals of some one or more of the parties to such indenture of lease, and shall be attested by one of the witnesses to such indenture of lease, and such witness shall, by affidavit at the foot of such memorial, made before the said registrar, (who is hereby empowered and required to administer the same,) prove the signing and sealing of such memorial, and the execution of such indenture and counterpart, by one at least of the parties thereto respectively, and also the signature of the patron and ordinary respectively indorsed on such indenture and counterpart, in all cases where such indorsements or either of them shall be necessary under this act; and such indenture and counterpart shall be produced, together with such memorial, to such registrar, who shall thereupon certify on the back of such indenture and counterpart the registration thereof, and the day whereon the same shall be so registered, and shall make an entry of such memorial in a book to be kept for that purpose, with a sufficient index for the purpose of reference, and shall deposit the said memorial amongst the archives of such diocese; and every such registrar shall be entitled to receive a fee of two shillings and sixpence and no more, for or in respect of such registration; and every person shall be entitled to inspect such registry, and to have a copy of any such entry, or of any such memorial, on paying for the same respectively a sum of two shillings and sixpence and no more; and such indorsement of registry upon such indenture and counterpart as aforesaid, shall to all intents and purposes be good and sufficient evidence of the registration thereof, according to the terms of such indorsement.

“V. And be it further enacted, that no such lease or leases, or counterpart or counterparts, or memorial or memorials, shall be liable or subject to the payment of any duty in respect of any stamp or stamps thereon; nor shall any stamp or stamps be required to be imposed thereupon; any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding.

“VI. And be it further enacted, that from and after such registry, every such lease so registered shall be good, valid, and effectual during the continuance of such lease, not only against the parties thereto, for and during the continuance of the interest of such parties in the said lands, but also against all persons claiming under them, and the successor or successors of all such ecclesiastical dignitaries and persons and bodies corporate respectively, on the one part; and on the other part, against all and every person or persons who shall succeed to the ownership or possession, or be or become occupiers or proprietors of the lands out of which such tithes shall be payable, either by assignment or other title from or under the original lessee of such tithes, or by reason or means of any forfeiture or breach of any covenant or condition for payment of rent or otherwise; and such lease shall, from and after such registry thereof, be deemed and taken to be, and to amount in law and in fact, to a suspension of the right of claiming or taking the tithes thereby demised, or of any payment in respect of the same, other than the rent reserved in such lease, for and during the continuance of such lease; and the occupier or occupiers of such land, and every part thereof, shall from time to time, during the continuance of such lease, hold such land freed and discharged of and from all tithes, and of and from all payment in respect of tithes, other than the rent reserved in and by such lease, if made to the occupier of such lands at the time of the execution of such lease, except in cases hereinafter specially provided for.

“VII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that if any spiritual dignitary or person, or body corporate, who shall make any lease of tithes under this act, shall receive or take any fine, foregift, grant, or compensation, or any sum of money or consideration whatever, other than the rent reserved by such lease pursuant to this act, then and in such case such lease shall be absolutely void and of no effect; anything in the said lease or demise to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

“VIII. Provided also, and be it enacted, that no lease of tithes which shall be made to any tenant for years of any land out of which such tithes shall be issuable, shall be valid or effectual beyond the term of years for which such tenant or his assigns shall hold such land under or by virtue of a lease of such land in existence at the time of the making the lease of such tithes, or of some renewal of such lease of such land; and that no lease of tithes which shall be made to any tenant or occupier of any land out of which such tithes shall be issuable, at any time after any declaration in an action of ejectment at the suit of the landlord of such tenant shall have been duly served upon such tenant, shall be valid or effectual after final judgment against such tenant in such action of ejectment; but in such cases, or either of them, every such lease of tithes shall become and be deemed to be expired and determined; anything in this act contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

"IX. And be it further enacted, that the amount of the rent reserved in and by every such lease of tithes, and all arrears thereof from time to time, not exceeding the amount of one whole year's such rent, shall be a charge on the lands specified in such lease during the continuance of such lease; and that it shall be lawful for the lessor in every such lease to levy the amount of such rent, or to cause the same to be levied on and from such lands, in preference to any other charge thereon, whether for rent of the said lands, or for any taxes or assessments, parliamentary or other; and it shall and may be lawful for such lessor to appoint the collector of the grand jury cess for the barony in which such lands shall be situate, or any other person or persons, to collect and levy such rents so reserved in and by any such lease of tithes, from time to time as the same shall come due; and every such collector or other person or persons so appointed shall collect and levy, and is and are hereby authorized, empowered, and required to collect and levy, all and every sum and sums of money which shall become due from time to time in respect of such rent, with the like powers and authorities, and in like manner, to all intents and purposes, as the collectors of grand jury cess are empowered to levy any money under the presentment of a grand jury, and under the warrant of the treasurer of the county, and with all the like remedies in case of nonpayment thereof, or of any part thereof, as are prescribed by law with respect to any money to be levied under any presentment of a grand jury; and such money, when so levied, shall be paid over to the lessor or his successors, who shall be entitled to the same under such lease, deducting only such reasonable charges as shall be agreed between such lessor or his successors, and such collector or other person appointed to collect and levy such rent, to be paid for the collecting and levying the same.

"X. Provided always, and be it enacted, that the lessors of all such tithes as shall be demised or leased under this act, shall and may have such remedies by suit at law, against the lessees in such lease, and their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns respectively, as the lessors of any land may have against their lessees; and that it shall and may be lawful for the lessors of such tithes to distrain on the lands out of which such tithes shall be issuable, or any part thereof, for such arrears of rent as shall at any time remain due and unsatisfied, not exceeding the amount of one year's rent; and such distress shall be subject to all such rules, regulations, and provisions, as distresses for the rent of land under any act or acts, or law or laws, in force in Ireland, relating to such distresses.

"XI. And be it further enacted, that whenever, under the provisions of this act, any tithes shall be demised to any person having a freehold or leasehold interest in the land out of which such tithes shall be issuable, and such person shall afterwards let, set, or demise such land, or any part thereof, to any other person or persons, such lease or demise of such land shall be made free from the payment of tithes during the continuance of the lease of such tithes; and in such case it shall and may be lawful for the lessee or occupier of such land to pay the amount of the rent of such tithes as shall be due from time to time to the lessor of such tithes, or to the person employed to collect the rent of such tithes, and it shall be lawful for such lessee or occupier of such land to deduct the amount of all such payments from time to time out of the amount of rent payable by such lessee or occupier of such land to his immediate landlord, and the receipt or acquittance of such lessor of such tithes, or of such collector, shall be a good and sufficient discharge to the lessee or occupier of such land for so much of the rent payable by such lessee or occupier to such landlord, as the sum specified in such receipt shall amount unto; and every such landlord shall accept such receipt in payment of so much of the rent payable by the lessee or occupier to him: provided nevertheless, that such deduction shall not be held to be a discharge of any portion of any gale or quarterly or other payment of rent, due by such lessee or occupier of such land, so as to prejudice the right of such landlord to recover the possession of such land by ejectment for nonpayment of the rent thereof, in any case where the remaining portion of such gale shall be unpaid, but that it shall and may be lawful for such landlord to proceed for the recovery of such land by ejectment, as effectually as if the entire gale of rent, out of which such deduction is hereby allowed, had remained wholly due and unpaid to such landlord.

4, c. 125. [1R.]

"XII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that whenever any agreement for a lease or demise of tithes shall be entered into between any person or persons beneficially interested in such land as aforesaid, out of which such tithes shall be issuable, not being the actual occupier of such land, and any ecclesiastical person or body corporate or impropiator hereinbefore mentioned, pursuant to the provisions hereinbefore mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for such person or persons so beneficially interested in such land to serve or cause to be served, a notice in writing personally on the occupier or occupiers of such land, or any part thereof, having an interest therein for any term not exceeding seven years, or for one life only, requiring such occupier or occupiers to become a party or parties to such lease or demise, and such notice so served shall contain the particulars of such lease or demise with respect to the lands out of which such tithes shall be issuable, and the rent reserved for the tithes thereof, and shall specify the place where such person or persons so beneficially interested reside, or at which the answer to such notice shall be required to be given; and in case such occupier or occupiers shall not, within the space of fourteen days next after being served with such notice, signify his, her, or their consent in writing to become party to such lease or demise, and cause the same to be duly served at the place specified for that purpose in the notice from the person or persons so beneficially interested in such land, or if such occupier or occupiers after signifying such consent shall refuse to become party or parties to such lease or demise, or shall refuse to sign the counterpart of such lease on being required so to do, and the same being tendered for such purpose, it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons so beneficially interested in such land, having duly executed the counterpart of such lease of the tithes issuing out of such land, pursuant to the provisions of this act, and his or their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, having paid the rent reserved by such lease, at all times during the continuance of such lease, and of the interest of such occupier or occupiers aforesaid, to have, use, and exercise all such rights and powers for the recovery of the tithes issuing out of the lands holden by any such occupier or occupiers, during the period for which such rents shall have been paid, as the owner of such tithes had for the same previous to the making of any such lease of such tithes; and such person or persons so beneficially interested in such land shall and may sue for, levy, and recover such tithes accordingly, to all intents and purposes, as if no such lease had been made; any thing in this act contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

Owner of land having agreed for lease of tithes shall give notice to occupier, not having more than a seven years' term, or for one life only, to be a party to such lease; and on his refusal, the owner being lessee, may recover the tithes against such occupier.

"XIII. Provided always, that in every such case the person so beneficially interested in such land shall, from the time of his executing the counterpart of such lease as aforesaid, be answerable for the rent reserved in and by such lease, as fully, to all intents and purposes, as if he were in the actual occupation of the lands out of which such tithes shall be issuable.

Persons beneficially interested on executing counterpart of lease answerable for rent.

"XIV. Provided also, and be it enacted, that whenever any tithes shall be demised to any person beneficially interested in the land out of which such tithes shall be issuable, not being the actual occupier of such land, the occupier or occupiers of such land, or of any part thereof, shall not in any case be liable to the payment of the rent, or any part of the rent of such tithes, to the lessor of such tithes, nor to any distress for the same, beyond the amount of the rent payable by such occupier or occupiers respectively, for the land actually holden by such occupier or occupiers; and that no occupier or occupiers of land shall be liable to any person beneficially interested in such land, and being lessee of such tithes, for the payment of the tithes of any lands not actually holden by such occupier; anything contained in this act, or in any lease or demise of such tithes, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

Occupier not liable to lessor of tithes for rent of tithes beyond the amount of rent paid for land occupied by him; nor to lessee for tithes of any land not held by such occupier.

"XV. And be it further enacted, that the possession and enjoyment of the lands out of which such tithes shall be issuable by the occupier of such lands, discharged from the payment of such tithes, for the continuance of the lease of such tithes, or the receipt of such tithes by the landlord of such occupier in the case hereinbefore provided for, during any part of the term of the lease of such tithes, shall be deemed and taken to be, in law and in fact, tantamount to and to be the actual possession and enjoyment of such tithes by the lessor or lessors of such tithes, and of his or their successor or successors, and shall and may be so alleged and insisted upon in all and every or any proceedings and proceeding in law and equity, in all cases whatsoever.

“XVI. And be it further enacted, that if at any time during the three years next preceding the end, by effluxion of time, of the term demised by any lease or demise of tithes to be made under the regulations of this act, the lessee or lessees of such tithes under such lease, or the executors, administrators, or assigns of such lessee or lessees, shall be or become possessed of an interest in such lands, which may continue longer than the term remaining in the lease of such tithes, whether such longer term or interest in such lands shall be a part of the original interest of such lessee, or shall be held or obtained by virtue of any new lease or otherwise, and such lessee or lessees of such tithes shall be disposed to obtain a renewal or new lease of such tithes, then and in any such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the parties interested in such lease of tithes respectively, to grant and receive a renewal or new lease of such tithes, either alone or together with any other tithe or tithes, in like manner and under all such and the same restrictions, qualifications, conditions, and requisites, as are hereinbefore required with respect to every such lease of tithes; and every such new lease shall commence and take effect from the making thereof; and when such new lease of such tithes shall be complete in all respects, and duly registered in manner required by this act, the same shall not be avoided or impeached by reason of the existence of such former lease, but from the registration of such new lease, the former lease shall cease and determine to all intents and purposes, except only as to the recovery of any rent then due under the same: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to authorize the surrender or renewal of any lease of tithes made under this act, at any time more than three years distant from the end of the term originally demised by any such lease; and that any lease, made at any time more than three years distant from the end of such original term, by effluxion of time, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

“XVII. And to prevent doubts and disputes as to the form of the lease of such tithes, be it enacted, that every such lease shall be in the form here following, or in some other form of words of that or the like effect ; that is to say,

“ This indenture, made the _____ day of _____ between A. B. (the lessor of the tithes) of _____ of the one part; and C. D. [or, C. D. and E. F.] (the person or persons beneficially interested in the land, as the case may be, to whom the said lease is to be made) of the other part: whereas the said C. D. [or, C. D. and E. F. as the case may be] is [or are] entitled to all that and those [here describe the lands] situate, lying, and being in the parish of [if any] barony of [if any] and county of _____ for the term of _____ years, or for and during the life [or lives] of [here set out the lessee's interest]: and whereas the said lands are subject to the payment of tithe, or, half or other portion of tithe, to the said A. B. and his successors [here set out in what right they are entitled to the said tithe, or half or other portion of the tithe]: and whereas the said A. B. (with the consent of G. H. patron, &c., and I. K. ordinary, &c. (as the case may be) testified by indorsement on this present indenture) hath agreed to demise the said tithe, or, half or other portion of tithe of the said lands, according to the statute in such case made and provided, on the terms hereinafter contained: now this indenture witnesseth, that the said A. B., for and in consideration of the rents and covenants hereinafter contained, hath demised, granted, and set, and by these presents doth demise, grant, and set, all and every the said tithes, or, half or other portion of tithes, so payable to the said A. B. and his successors, out of the said lands and every part and parcel thereof, to have and to hold the same to the said C. D. [or, to the said C. D. and E. F. as the case may be] as aforesaid; the said yearly rent or sum to be paid and payable by two equal half-yearly payments, on every first day of November and first day of May during the said term; and further, the said C. D. [or C. D. and E. F. as the case may be] doth [or do, and each of them doth] grant and agree, to and with the said A. B. and his successors, that in case the said yearly rent, or any gale or part thereof, shall at any time be due and unpaid by the space of three calendar months after any of the said days of payment thereof, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the said A. B. and his successors, unto the said lands and tenements, or any part or parts thereof, to enter and distrain, and the distress and distresses there found to take, lead, drive, carry away, sell, and dispose of, according to law, for the recovery of the sum or sums to them due, and the reasonable costs of so recovering the same; and it is hereby further agreed, by and between the said parties, that in case the said rent, or any gale thereof, shall be due, behind, and unpaid, for the space of three calendar months next after any of the said gale days respectively, then and in every or any such case, the said demise hereinbefore contained, and every part thereof, shall, at the election of the said A. B. and his successors, but not otherwise, be and be deemed and taken to be null and void, to all intents and purposes, from the said gale day; and in such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the said A. B. and his successors, to take and receive all and every tithe, or, half or other portion of tithe, of the growth, produce, or increase of the said lands, or of any part thereof, which shall have been severed since the said day from which such lease shall be so void, or to proceed for or in respect of the subtraction thereof, in the same manner in all respects as if this lease had not been made; and the said C. D. for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, doth hereby covenant, promise, and agree, to and with the said A. B. and his successors, that he the said C. D. his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, or some of them, shall and will from time to time hereafter, well and truly pay or cause to be paid, unto the said A. B. and his successors, the said yearly rent or sum of at the days and times hereinbefore mentioned for the payment thereof, by even and equal portions as aforesaid; [or, the said C. D. and E. F. do respectively for themselves, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, covenant, promise, and agree to and with the said A. B. and his successors, that they will respectively, from time to time hereafter, when and so long as their interest shall continue to be, or shall become vested in possession, well and truly pay or cause to be paid, to the said A. B. and his successors, the said yearly rent or sum of by equal and even portions as aforesaid:] in witness whereof the parties aforesaid have hereunto set their hands and seals, the day and year first above written.

"XVIII. And be it further enacted, that no action or other proceeding whatsoever shall be had or taken, by any person whomsoever, for the avoiding or defeating of any lease of tithes made under the provisions of this act, unless such person shall give notice in writing of such his intention, six calendar months at least before the expiration of some year, reckoning from the commencement of such lease, to the party or parties against whom such action or proceeding shall be intended to be had or brought; and such notice shall particularly specify and set forth the cause or causes for which such lease is sought to be avoided or defeated."

And be it further enacted, that no clergyman so nominated shall officiate in any prison until he shall have obtained a licence for that purpose from the bishop of the diocese wherein the prison is situate, nor for any longer time than while such licence shall continue in force; and notice of every such nomination shall, within one month after it shall take place, be transmitted to the bishop by the clerk of the peace or town clerk.

"XXX. And be it further enacted, that every such chaplain shall on every Sunday, and on Christmas Day and Good Friday, perform the appointed morning and evening services of the church of England, and preach at such time or times, between the hours of nine and five of the day, as shall be required by the rules and regulations to be made as directed by this act; and shall catechize or instruct such prisoners as may be willing to receive instruction; and shall likewise visit the prison on such other days and perform such other duties as shall be required by the rules and regulations to be made as directed by this act; and shall administer the holy sacrament of the Lord's supper to such prisoners as shall be desirous, and as such chaplain may deem to be in a proper frame of mind to receive the same; and such chaplain shall also frequently visit every room and cell in the prison occupied by prisoners, and shall direct such books to be distributed and read and such lessons to be taught in such prison as he may deem proper for the religious and moral instruction of the prisoners therein; and he shall visit those who are in solitary confinement; and it shall be his particular duty to afford his spiritual assistance to all persons under warrant or order for execution; and he shall have free access to all persons convicted of murder, any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding; except to such persons as shall be of a religious persuasion different from that of the established church, who shall have made a request that a minister of such persuasion shall be allowed to visit them; and every such chaplain shall communicate from time to time to the visiting justices any abuse or impropriety which may have come to his knowledge; and he shall further keep a journal, in which he shall enter the times of his attendance on the performance of his duty, with any observations which may occur to him in the execution thereof, and such journal shall be kept in the prison, but shall regularly be laid before the justices for their inspection at every quarter sessions, and shall be signed by the chairman of the sessions, in proof of the same having been there produced; and if it shall appear to the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, that any chaplain is incompetent to the due performance of his duties, or is unfit to be continued in his office, or shall have refused or wilfully neglected to perform the duties required of him by the rules and regulations to be made as directed by this act, they are hereby empowered to remove him from such office.

"XXXI. And be it further enacted, that if any prisoner shall be of a religious persuasion differing from that of the established church, a minister of such persuasion, at the special request of such prisoner, shall be allowed to visit him or her at proper and reasonable times, under such restrictions imposed by the visiting justices as shall guard against the introduction of improper persons, and as shall prevent improper communications.

"XXXII. And be it enacted, that in case any chaplain shall, from confirmed sickness, age, or infirmity, become incapable of executing the office in person, the justices of the peace, at any general or quarter sessions of the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place respectively, shall take the circumstances of the case into their consideration; and if such justices shall deem it expedient, they are hereby empowered to grant to such chaplain such annuity as they in their discretion shall think proportionate to the merits and time of his services, and may order the payment out of the rates lawfully applicable to the building and repairing such gaols and prisons; provided always, that the amount so paid by way of superannuation or allowance to any retired chaplain of any one prison shall not exceed the amount of two-thirds of the salary fixed for the succeeding chaplain of such prison.

"II. And whereas by the said act of the fifty-third year of the reign of his said late majesty King George the Third, provision was made for granting certain pensions to the Bishop of Calcutta, and the Archdeacons of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay respectively, who should have exercised in the East Indies, or parts in the said act mentioned, for fifteen years, the office or offices of bishop or archdeacon; and it is expedient to shorten the period during which such bishops and archdeacons respectively are required to hold their said offices before such pensions could be granted to them respectively, and to make other provisions respecting such pensions; be it enacted, that so much of the said act as relates to such pensions shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

"III. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for his majesty, his heirs, and successors, in manner in the said act mentioned, to grant to any such bishop who shall have exercised in the East Indies, or parts aforesaid, for ten years, the office of bishop or archdeacon, and to any such archdeacon who shall have exercised in the East Indies or parts aforesaid, for ten years, the office of archdeacon, pensions not exceeding such sums respectively as his majesty by the said act of the fifty-third year of the reign of his late majesty is empowered to grant to any such bishop or archdeacon.

"IV. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that if any person residing any time in the East Indies or parts aforesaid, as one of the chaplains of the said united company, shall have been or shall be appointed to the office of such archdeacon as aforesaid, and shall have resided in the East Indies or parts aforesaid as such archdeacon seven years, the period of residence of such person as chaplain shall be accounted and taken as and for a residence as such archdeacon, in the proportion of three years' residence as such chaplain, to two years' residence as such archdeacon: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to prejudice the right of any person being or having been a chaplain of the said united company, to any benefit he may be entitled to as under or by virtue of any regulation now in force, or hereafter to be made by the said united company or their court of directors, nor to prejudice or affect the right of the said united company, or their court of directors, to make, repeal, vary, or alter, any regulation or regulations respecting the chaplains of the said united company, or the pay or allowances, pensions, or retirements, of such chaplains which the said united company or their court of directors may now lawfully make, repeal, vary or alter.

"V. And whereas it is proper that a suitable house of residence should be provided for the said bishop, and that the expenses of his visitations should be defrayed by the said company; be it therefore further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said company, and they are hereby required to provide a suitable house at Calcutta for the residence of the said bishop, and that the expense of the visitations to be made by the said bishop from time to time shall be defrayed by the said company, out of the revenues of the British territory in India: provided always, that no greater sum on account of providing such house, or of such visitations, be at any time issued, than shall from time to time be defined and settled by the court of directors of the said company, with the approbation of the commissioners for the affairs of India, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding.

"VI. And whereas doubts have arisen whether the Bishop of Calcutta, in conferring holy orders, is subject to the several provisions and limitations established by the laws of this realm or canons ecclesiastical, as to the titles of the persons to be ordained, and as to the oaths and subscriptions to be by such persons taken and made; be it further declared and enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Bishop of Calcutta for the time being to admit into the holy orders of

(2) Solemnization of Marriages:—In Davis v. Black (Clerk), (1 Q. B. 900,) the declaration, which was in case, stated that the plaintiff (a man) and Mary Ann Hogg, were desirous to intermarry; that a licence was granted to the end that the marriage might be solemnized in the parish church of Blaisdon, by the rector, vicar, or curate thereof, without banns, within three months from the date, Mary Ann Hogg's usual place of abode having been in Blaisdon for fifteen days immediately before the granting of the licence; provided there should appear to be no impediment by reason of former marriage, consanguinity, &c., nor any suit depending by reason thereof; and that the celebration should be in the said church between eight and twelve in the forenoon: the declaration also averred, that the defendant was rector and sole minister of the church of Blaisdon, that there was no impediment by reason, &c., nor any suit, &c.; and that, by reason of the premises, and by force of the licence, it became the defendant's duty, as rector, &c., on notice of the licence, to solemnize the marriage in the manner and time specified in the licence, when thereunto requested; that the defendant had notice of the licence, and afterwards, viz., on, &c., and on several other days between that day, and the death of Mary Ann Hogg, was requested by the plaintiff to solemnize the marriage in the manner and time specified in the licence:—yet the defendant, not regarding his duty, but contriving wrongfully and illegally to harass, oppress, and injure the plaintiff, would not, on the said, &c., or at any time afterwards, solemnize the marriage, but wrongfully and illegally refused so to do; that, while he continued so to refuse, Mary Ann Hogg died; and that by reason, &c., the plaintiff lost the benefit of the licence, and the marriage, and had been put to expenses which were rendered useless, had been injured in his good name, and had suffered anxiety of mind:—it was held to be bad after verdict, for not averring a request from Mary Ann Hogg, or notice to the defendant that Mary Ann Hogg was willing that the marriage should take place:—

Lord Deasman observing, "I am by no means prepared to say, that such an action as that, might not be maintained, upon the declaration making a proper complaint of a public officer neglecting his public duty to the temporal, and it might be to the very great damage of an individual. Such a neglect of the duty of a clergyman may be actionable, if it be malicious and without probable cause. But there is no great danger in saying, that an action can hardly be maintained against an officer not required by law to perform the duty at any particular time, without allegation of malice, or of the time at which he refused, being a reasonable time for the performance. Allowing fully that the action is maintainable on principle, the declaration is essentially defective. Hardly any of the objections made can be got over. One is clearly fatal. At the time when the clergyman is supposed to have acted wrongfully, it does not appear, that he had notice, that both the parties were willing to be married. It is alleged that, at the time of the grievance, they were in fact willing; but it is not averred that the woman joined in the request. This is quite fatal. For you charge the minister with having improperly refused to marry; yet the whole declaration might be proved, although he had no reason to believe the woman to be willing. It would be going far beyond all limits within which we allow defective declarations to be cured by verdict, if we suffered this. Nothing can be supplied beyond that of which the proof is necessarily involved in the proof of what is alleged."

Mr. Justice Patteson: "It is not necessary to determine generally whether such an action will lie; and I own that I feel great difficulty on that point. At common law, parties might marry anywhere. It is true, however, that Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, ss. 1, 4, [vide Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, ss. 2, 10,] confines them to the church of the parish where one of them has been resident for a certain time. And, as a clergyman of the church might prevent any other clergyman from performing the marriage service in his church, it may perhaps be said that the duty is now cast on him. Here, however, the question arises on the declaration. Now suppose (which seems very doubtful) the duty here to be properly alleged; the duty is to marry on request. Suppose, also, that the request was made in the time pointed out by the licence, and that this is sufficiently averred by the words, 'in the manner and time specified;' (though the licence gives three months from the date;) still, by whom is the request made? One party might wish to be married, the other not; the request must be by both. Here is no averment that the woman joined in the request, or that the plaintiff's request was made with her knowledge and consent; and that alone shows, that the declaration is insufficient. And this cannot be cured by verdict; for nothing is so cured except that without the proof of which the judge could not have allowed the verdict to pass. Jackson v. Peaked, (1 M. & S. 234,) shows, that we cannot intend a finding upon what is not averred directly, or by implication; and we cannot say that an averment of a request by the woman is included in that of a request by the man. Nor can we say that a judge must have required proof of this before he allowed the verdict to be taken. The other objection, arising from the licence allowing three months, seems also fatal. And the declaration does not even allege, that the licence was in force at the time of the request."

Argar v. Holdsworth, (2 Lee (Sir G.), 515,) seems to support the proposition, that an action for damages may be sustained against a clergyman for a neglect of his duties, but clearly lays down, that a clergyman may be prosecuted by any one for neglect of his clerical duty. As this question is of importance, the case of Argar v. Holdsworth is given at length, and which is reported in the following language:

Dr. Simpson, for Argar. "William Argar promoted articles in the court of the Archdeacon of Totness, against Henry Holdsworth, vicar of St. Saviour's in Dartmouth, for neglecting or refusing to solemnize marriage between the said Argar and Jane How, both of the parish of St. Saviour's, and having a licence to be married from the Chancellor of Exeter. On 18th September, 1756, the articles were admitted at Totness, pleading, 1st, that Holdsworth is a clerk and vicar of St. Saviour's in Dartmouth; 2nd, that by canons, &c., every minister is to obey his ordinary's licence, &c.; 3rd, that, every minister is obliged by law to marry such of his parishioners as have resided a month in his parish; that the parties named in the licence are his parishioners, and have resided a month, and have obtained a licence to be married together; 4th, that Argar had a proper licence to marry How, and acquainted Holdsworth therewith, and desired him to marry them, but he refused; 5th, that he has thereby incurred ecclesiastical censures; 6th, that he is subject to the jurisdiction of the court at Totness; 7th, pray he may be censured, &c. From admitting these articles, Holdsworth appealed to the Chancellor of Exeter. On 4th March, 1757, the chancellor pronounced for the appeal for admitting the 3rd and 4th articles, as not concludent, &c. and rejected such articles, but admitted the rest, and retained the cause, with costs. Argar appealed to the Arches from rejecting the 3rd and 4th after the first day of November next ensuing the passing of this act, so much of an act passed in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of King George the Second, inti-articles, and retaining the cause, and condemning him in costs, and Holdsworth did not adhere to the appeal."

Dr. Bettesworth, for Holdsworth, said, "that Argar should have brought a suit at law for damages, or if any suit lay in the spiritual court, it should have been brought before the Chancellor of Exeter, who granted the licence; that the licence was not exhibited, without which the articles were not concludent; that a minister is not obliged by law to marry by licence, but is only permitted so to do, and if he has reason to think it was fraudulently obtained, he ought to refuse to marry in consequence of it, which was the case with Holdsworth, and, therefore, the judge ought to have rejected all the articles."

Judgment — Sir George Lee: "I said, that possibly Argar might have no action for damages, but, nevertheless, the clergyman might be prosecuted by any one for neglect of his clerical duty; that the suit for such neglect might be brought in order to his being admonished or suspended in the archdeacon's court, notwithstanding the licence was granted by the chancellor; that the licence might be exhibited at any time before conclusion of the cause; that I was of opinion a licence was a legal authority for marriage, and that a minister was guilty of a breach of his duty who should refuse to marry pursuant to a proper licence from his ordinary. If Holdsworth had reason to believe the licence was obtained fraudulently, and only delayed to gain time for inquiry, that would be proper matter for his defence; but surely the chancellor had acted strangely in rejecting the articles which alone pleaded the facts relative to this cause, and admitting these articles which pleaded only the general law. I, therefore, pronounced for the appeal, and remitted the cause to the archdeacon's court at Totness, and condemned Holdsworth in 25*l.* costs."

Respecting fees for the solemnization of marriages, it was held in Patten v. Castleman, (1 Lee (Sir G.), 387,) that the claim of a vicar for a fee on the wedding of one of his parishioners in the church of another parish, was not substantiated; the general principle of law being, that where no service is done, no fee can be due.

Sir George Lee observing, "I was of opinion that no fee was due by law where no service was done; anciently no fee was demandable for marriage, but only a voluntary offering was made of what sum the party married thought fit to give, which appears from Lyndwood, lib. 3, tit. 16, cap. 'Quia quidam,' in these words: 'Quia quidam maledictionis filii in nubentium solemnibus, purificationibus mulierum, mortuorum exequiis, et aliis in quibus ipse Dominus in ministrorum suorum personis solebat oblationum libamine populariter honorari ad unius denarii vel alterius modice quantitatis oblationem, populi devotionem prestringere moliti sunt, residuum oblationis fidelium suis pro libito vel alienis usibus multoties applicantes;' therefore excommunicating the instigators; and Lyndw. Gloss. verb. Nubentium solemnibus, sets forth the times when it was lawful to marry, and when not; and therefore the Constitution must speak of offerings for marriages actually performed. If then no law has established a fee for actual marriage, it can be demandable only by custom, and accordingly, Watson's Clergyman's Law, chap. 52, p. 572, says, 'Accustomary payments for marriages, christenings, churchings, and burials, properly belong to the parson or vicar of the church where they are made, and are recoverable by law, where there is a custom for the payment of certain sums upon the performance of these several duties;' and in chap. 53, p. 575, 'under offerings, called also oblations and obventions, are comprehended all customary payments for marriages, christenings, churchings, and burials, and have been, and yet are recoverable in the ecclesiastical court, as is notorious.'

"And notwithstanding the Statute of Circumspecte agatis, and of 2 & 3 Edw. 6, if the custom is denied, a prohibition will go to try it at common law, and it must be immemorial; and so it was held by the whole court of King's Bench, Hill. 7 Geo. 2, Read v. Dealtary, which case I argued, and a prohibition was granted to stay a suit in the ecclesiastical court for customary Easter offerings, and the custom was denied; but if the custom is admitted, then the spiritual court may proceed, and in the present case, if a prohibition had been prayed, it would certainly have been granted; and therefore, as this was a matter subject to the cognizance of the common law, I thought myself bound to determine agreeably to that law, that there may not be a diversity of judgments in different courts; and clearly by the common law this custom is not proved, for it is not sufficiently proved, even by the ecclesiastical law, which requires a usage for forty years to be proved; but here no instance has been given of paying the fee demanded for above twenty-one years; and therefore I thought the custom was not proved, but if it had been proved, the custom would be unreasonable, for no ecclesiastical law warrants a demand of a fee where no service is done, and though I could not find in the Common Law Reports any determination upon the particular point now before me, yet, in similar cases, the temporal courts had determined, that a custom to pay a fee where no service was done, was unreasonable, as appeared from the cases cited by the counsel for Patten, in the cases of burials, christenings, and churchings, which are thus reported:

"Hobart, 175. 'Edward Topeall and others v. Ferrers. Edward Topeall, clerk, parson of St. Botolph's Without, Aldersgate, and the churchwardens of the same, libelled in the court Christian, against Sir John Ferrers, Knight, and alleged, that tuled, 'An Act for the better preventing of Clandestine Marriages,' as was in force immediately before the passing of this act, and also an act passed in the present session of parliament, intituled, 'An Act to repeal certain Provisions of an Act passed in the third year of His present Majesty, intituled, "An Act to amend certain Provisions of the twenty-sixth of George the Second, for the better preventing of Clandestine Marriages,"' shall be and the same are hereby repealed; save and except as to any acts, matters, or things done under the provisions of the said recited acts, or either of them, before the said first day of November, as to which the said recited acts shall respectively be of the same force and effect as if this act had not been made; save also and except so far as the said recited acts or either of them repeal any former act, or any clause, matter, or thing therein contained.

"II. And be it further enacted, that from and after the first day of November all banns of matrimony shall be published (1) in an audible manner in the parish Banns, where, when, and there was a custom within the city of London, and especially within that parish, that if any person die within that parish, being man or woman, and be carried out of the same parish, and be buried elsewhere, that there ought to be paid to the parson of this parish, if he be buried elsewhere, in the chancel, so much, and to the churchwardens so much, being the sums that they alleged were by custom payable unto them for such as were buried in their own chancel, and then alleging, that the wife of Sir John Ferrers died within the parish, and was carried away and buried in the chancel of another church, and so demand of him the said sum; whereupon, for Sir John Ferrers, a prohibition was prayed by Serjeant Harris, and upon debate it was granted; for this custom is against reason, that he that is no parishioner, but may pass through the parish, or lie in an inn for a night, should be forced to be buried there, or to pay as if he was, and so upon the matter, to pay twice for his burial.'

"1 Salk. 332. 'Burdeaux v. Lancaster (Dr.) and others, Hill. 9 Will. 3, B. R. Burdeaux, a French protestant, had his child baptized at the French church in the Savoy, and Dr. Lancaster, vicar of St. Martin's, in which parish it is, together with the clerk, libelled against him for a fee of 2s. 6d. due to him, and 1d. to the clerk. A prohibition was moved for, and Levinas urged this was an ecclesiastical fee due by the canon.—Holt, C. J. Nothing can be due of common right, and how can a canon take money out of a layman's pocket? Lyndwood says it is simony to take anything for christening or burying, unless it be a fee due by custom, but then a custom for any person to take a fee for christening a child when he does not christen it, is not good; like the case in Hobart, where one dies in one parish, and is buried in another, the parish where he died, shall not have a burying fee. If you have a right to christen you should libel for that right, but you ought not to have money for christening when you do not.'

"Lord Raymond's Reports, 2nd vol. fo. 1558. 2 Geo. 2 Regis, B. R. 1729. 'Naylor qui tam v. Scott. In a prohibition granted to stay a suit in the spiritual court by the vicar of Wakefield, grounded upon a custom for a due for churching women, which was alleged to be this, viz. 'That every inhabitant keeping a house, and having a family in Wakefield, in Yorkshire, and having a child or children born in that parish at the time of churching the mother of the child, or at the usual time after her delivery, when she should be churched, have time out of mind paid ten pence to the vicar of that parish, for or in respect of such churching, or at the usual times when the mother of such child should be churched.' Issue was taken upon the custom, and a verdict found for the defendant, that there was such a custom; and upon motion made to the court by Mr. Filmer for the plaintiff, in arrest of judgment, to prevent the granting a consultation, the court being of opinion, that it was a void custom; 1st, Because it was not alleged, what was the usual time the women were to be churched, and therefore uncertain. 2nd, Because it was unreasonable, because it obliged the husband to pay; if the woman was not churched at all, or if she went out of the parish, or died, before the time of churching, judgment was arrested. Mr. Crowle, counsel for the defendant in the prohibition.'

"As to the clause in the marriage licence, I was of opinion, it was only a general saving of such right as the minister might have, but if he had none by law, the licence neither did or could give him any. Upon the whole, I was of opinion, the fee demanded was not due by any law, that the custom was not proved, but if it had been proved, it would be an unreasonable custom by the ecclesiastical as well as the common law, and void, and therefore I pronounced no fee to be due in this case to the vicar, and dismissed Patten, but did not give costs, because it was a new case, and because the clergy did generally imagine a fee was due, and in fact it had been paid in many instances to Mr. Castleman and his predecessors, and likewise to his neighbouring clergy, and therefore he could not be said to be litigious."

D. & R. 348; Cloves v. Cloves, 3 Curt. 185. In Tongue v. Allen, the suit of nullity of marriage under Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, by reason of undue publication of banns, was sustained, both parties "having knowingly and wilfully intermarried after such undue publication;" and in Wright v. Elwood, the suit of nullity of marriage under Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, by reason of undue publication of banns, was rejected.

The facts of such cases, and the reasons upon which such judgments were given, will appear from the following abridged judgments.

In Tongue v. Allen, (1 Curt. 41,) Sir Herbert Jenner observed:

"... The result then is this, that at the marriage the minor was between seventeen and eighteen years of age, the woman thirty-four or thirty-five, and a widow, or representing herself as such, and the sister of the master of the school where he was placed; that the marriage was clandestine, and continued secret and unknown to the family of the minor, for nearly twelve months; that the name of baptism, by which alone he was generally known, was omitted in the publication of banns; and that this was done for the purpose of concealment, in fraud of the father's rights, there can be no doubt.

"The question therefore is, whether a marriage under such circumstances is good and valid according to the existing marriage law of this country; for under the original marriage act, (the 26 Geo. 2, c. 33,) the marriage would have been clearly void, it having been repeatedly held, that the omission of the name of general repute in the publication of banns, when for the purpose of fraud, rendered the marriage void, as in the case of Jaeger v. Probst, 2 Coomb. 142, in which Lord Stowell observed, 'That all parts of a baptismal name ought to be set forth, as comprising altogether the name and legal designation of the party, yet he would not go the length of deciding, that in all cases the omission of a name would be fatal, where no fraud was intended, nor any deception practised, and where the suppression was only of a distant name.'

"The present statute, the 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, does not require the true names of both parties to be published, but in order to obviate the inconveniences, and to prevent the crying abuse which arose out of the law as it formerly stood, and the fraud in cases to which innocent parties were exposed, it has provided that in order to avoid a marriage on the ground of the banns having been unduly published, the parties must have knowingly and wilfully intermarried without due publication of banns. The construction which has been put upon the twenty-second section of the 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, in the two cases as yet determined, seems to be that such parties must be ignorant of the undue publication. This indeed seems to arise necessarily from the words of the act itself: the 'parties' are spoken of in the plural number, and there would have been no necessity for any enactment at all upon the subject, if the knowledge of one party would have been sufficient to render the marriage void, as there can hardly be a case, in which one of the parties must not be cognizant of the fact.

"But, however this may be, the same construction has been put upon this section of the act in the courts of common law as in these courts; the cases have been referred to in the argument, and the court will notice them hereafter; at present it will be enough to say, that it entirely agrees in the soundness of that construction; and it only remains to be seen, whether there is a sufficient proof in the present case to justify the court in coming to the conclusion, that both parties were cognizant of the undue publication of banns, before the marriage was solemnized; for I also agree with the decisions before adverted to, that the knowledge must be shown to have existed before, and not after the marriage. The manner in which this knowledge is to be proved, must vary according to the circumstances of each case; that may be quite sufficient in one which would not suffice in another, and although it may be true, that in construing the law, the favourable or unfavourable nature of the transaction in question ought not to be taken into consideration, yet circumstances may give a greater or less effect to the evidence of the facts to which the law is to be applied, and may furnish a clue to guide the court to the proper conclusion to be drawn from them. It cannot be required, that in every case direct and positive proof should be adduced; if so, I am inclined to agree with the observations of Dr. Addams, that in most cases the fraud would be successful, the parties would have nothing to do but to keep their own secret. The court must therefore take all the circumstances into consideration, and deduce its conclusion from them. It was indeed hardly denied, that circumstantial evidence would be sufficient, but it was said, it must be such as to leave no reasonable doubt on the mind of the court. It is necessary then to consider, what the circumstances are.

"In all cases of this kind, three questions naturally arise.

"First, Whether a marriage has been had between the parties to the suit?

"Secondly, Whether there has been an undue publication of banns?

"Thirdly, Whether both parties were cognizant of the undue publication before the marriage was solemnized?

"Now here there can be no doubt of the fact of marriage between these parties, nor of their identity.

"Secondly, There can be no doubt from what has been observed, that there was an undue publication of banns, it would be a waste of time to enquire further on this point, and it is equally clear that concealment was the object of both parties. The third point, whether both parties were cog-

nizant of the undue publication, remains to be considered. Now, that Mrs. Allen knew cannot be denied; she in fact, although it is otherwise pleaded in the libel, gave the instructions for the publication of the banns; it was said, that the evidence as to this fact was irregularly introduced, and perhaps it was so, but if it were not true, it might have been contradicted even after publication, but no attempt of that kind was made either here or in the court below; I must therefore take that fact as proved. There is certainly no direct proof of concert between the parties, but there is a pretty strong presumption of it; both were living in the same house, having daily communication with each other; both must have known of the necessity for concealment, and neither could well have been ignorant of the means to be used from the very nature of the transaction; but it does not rest here; the proceedings at the time of the marriage are material; it is sworn, that it is the practice in this parish to show the banns book to both parties, and to inquire whether they are correctly described or not, and Sarah Haynes, the sextoness, says, 'she is sure it was done on the present occasion.' Now, was the fact so or not? The witness deposes positively to the practice, and that it was observed on this occasion; if the fact were not so, it might have been counterpleaded, and the minister and clerk might have been brought to contradict the sextoness; there is no reason to believe, that she deposes falsely, and there can be no reason assigned why the usual practice should not have been adhered to at this marriage. Again, during the ceremony the minor must have answered to the name of Edward, and there is no evidence to show, that he evinced any surprise at being so addressed. And after the ceremony was concluded, he signed that name to the entry in the register, without hesitation. This latter circumstance standing alone, might not perhaps have been sufficient to fix him with a knowledge of the undue publication of banns, but taken in conjunction with all the other circumstances, it goes a considerable way to satisfy me of his previous knowledge of the intended fraud.

"These facts then taken altogether, form a strong body of evidence upon which the court, had this been the first case arising under the statute, might, and would, have felt itself justified in pronouncing this marriage to be void, as having been knowingly and wilfully by both parties contracted without due publication of banns.

"But cases have been referred to, which the court must now proceed to consider, in order to see, whether they at all interfere with the impression it has stated itself to entertain, as to the effect of the evidence here produced.

"The first, that of Wiltshire against Prince, (3 Hagg. 332,) in the Consistory court of London, was a suit brought by the father of a minor, for the purpose of setting aside the marriage of his son with a woman servant in the family; wrong names had been used in the publication of the banns, and there was clear proof that both parties knew it, and that it was for the purpose of fraud; there was no doubt of the fact of both parties being cognizant of the undue publication of banns before the marriage, and the court accordingly pronounced it void; that case therefore is important only, as showing the construction put upon the words of the act of parliament, by the learned judge of that court, namely, that both parties must be cognizant of the undue publication of banns; nothing was there determined as to the nature of the proof required.

"The second case cited, was that of The King against The Inhabitants of Wroston, (4 B. & Ad. 640,) which was a question sent by the quarter sessions for the opinion of the court of King's Bench. The facts were found by the justices, and the court was bound by them; on what evidence the justices came to the conclusion of the fact does not appear; but they stated, that the woman was ignorant of the false publication, although the names used were very different from the true names.

"The decision of the King's Bench, on the facts found by the justices was, that as the woman did not know of the false publication of banns, the marriage was good; in fact, it goes no further than to adopt and confirm the construction which had been put upon the statute in the case of Wiltshire v. Prince. (3 Hagg. 332.) These cases, therefore, prove nothing more than that in order to render a marriage null and void, by reason of undue publication of banns, both parties must be shown to have been cognizant of the undue publication before the celebration of the marriage.

"But the case more particularly relied upon, as applicable to the case now before the court, was that of Hadley v. Reynolds, which occurred in this court, but has not yet been reported. The circumstances of that case were extremely different from the present; there the husband, after a cohabitation of three years and a half, and the birth of a child, sought to set aside his own marriage, he himself having caused the banns to be published;—it was so pleaded on his part. He was a clergyman of twenty or twenty-seven years of age, the woman twenty-two, both were therefore at full liberty to contract marriage: no rights of third parties were invaded. The woman having no occasion to have recourse to fraudulent concealment, nor having any reason to suppose, that fraud was to be committed, there was no evidence to show, that she was at all acquainted with the intention as to false names; the banns were published at Birmingham, she was at Worcester: there was not any ground to presume, that there was any previous knowledge on her part of the undue publication: that it was not answered, during the ceremony, to the wrong name, and also after the marriage, against

to be solemn-

that name in the register; those were the only circumstances from which her knowledge could be inferred, and the court rightly holding, that in such a case the strictest proof was necessary, was of opinion, that those circumstances alone were not sufficient evidence of the fact.

"But what is the present case? A woman, situated as I have described, persuades, for so I must presume, a boy not half so old as herself, to marry her; she knowing that he had a father, who would disapprove of the marriage, gives instructions for the publication of the banns, omitting that, which must be considered as the only real baptismal name of the minor, and this for the purpose of fraud, the parties being in constant and daily communication with each other; they proceed to Bristol on the morning of the marriage, and return to school the same day, when they resume their usual occupations, she superintending her brother's pupils, he continuing his education; no one of his schoolfellows nor any one else suspecting that any connexion existed between them. It is precisely the case against which the legislature must have intended to provide; the maxim semper præsumitur pro matrimonio, strongly applies to Hadley's case, but not to this, where fraud was meditated by both parties, and which it may not unjustly be presumed, that both were acquainted with the means by which that fraud was to be carried into effect.

"On the whole, I cannot bring my mind to doubt, that both parties knowingly and wilfully intermarried without due publication of banns, and I therefore pronounce for the appeal, retain the principal cause, and declare the marriage to be null and void."

In Wright v. Elwood, (1 Curt. 669,) Sir Herbert Jenner stated, "... It has been maintained, that the publication of banns of a woman who is already married, and whose husband is alive, is a mere nullity; that it is not properly an undue publication of banns, but it is no publication at all, and that it would be contrary to the policy of the law if the court were to uphold a marriage not preceded by any publication of banns, nor by a licence; and it has been also stated, that such was the case, even before the passing of the first Marriage Act, (26 Geo. 2, c. 33.) in 1754. But I confess I do not feel very strongly the force of that argument; for, as far as I can understand the principle upon which marriages are made null and void, on these grounds, under the act, it is, that where false names are used intentionally, with a view of deceiving the public, it is no publication at all. So that in the case of the publication of false names, the publication is a mere nullity. In Pouget v. Tomkins, (2 Consist. 146,) Lord Stowell said, 'The clear intention of the act is, that the true names of the parties should be published, and if they are not so published, it is no publication: no notice is given, and no opportunity is afforded to any one to allege an impediment. It has been constantly held, therefore, since the case of Early v. Stevens,' which was in 1785, and I believe the earliest case under the Marriage Act, 'that a publication in false names is no publication.' 'And on no other principle could such a case have been brought under the provisions of that act, where the terms made use of are, "without publication of banns;" it does not speak of "undue publication;" but that statute required that a marriage should be preceded by publication of banns, or by licence. It seems to me, that a marriage was void under that statute only where there had been no publication; undue publication was not sufficient, unless it amounted to the absence of all publication.'

"This was the state of the law under the 26 Geo. 2, c. 33. Before that statute, marriages, without publication of banns or any religious ceremony, contracts per verba de præsentibus, might be good and valid, though irregular; the parties and the minister might be liable to punishment, but the vinculum matrimonii was not affected. After the passing of the act 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, marriages were placed on a different footing, as to banns and licences; a certain degree of regularity was essential to the validity of the marriage contract, and marriages not preceded by banns or licence, were null and void. In that act, however, there was no provision for the protection of innocent parties, and many cases are in the recollection of the court in which it had produced very injurious consequences. Parties even guilty of actual fraud having obtained a separation without the possibility of doing justice to the party not cognizant of the fraud.

"This state of things continued many years, but at length the legislature interfered to prevent the mischievous effects resulting from the provisions of this act, and to soften the rigour of the existing law.

"I pass by the act 3 Geo. 4, which existed but for a short time, and I proceed to the act 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, which was in force at the time of this marriage, and is the law which is applicable to it.

"This act begins by repealing all the former acts then in force. Part of the act 26 Geo. 2 had been repealed by the act 3 Geo. 4, but still part remained in force, and the remainder of that act, as well as the 3 Geo. 4, was repealed, so that, at that time, if the legislature had done no more, the common law and general law, as it existed before the marriage, would have been good and valid without any publication of banns or licence. But the legislature did not stop here; it went further, and declared, in the 22nd section, that where parties shall intermarry, knowingly and wilfully, without due publication of banns or licence, the marriage shall be null and void. It has not adopted the terms of the former act, declaring that marriages shall not be solemnized 'without publication of banns,' but the legislature has said: 'If any persons shall knowingly and wilfully in such church or chapel upon the Sunday upon which such banns shall be so published,) immediately after the second lesson; and whensoever it shall happen that the persons to be married shall dwell in divers parishes or chapelries, the banns shall in like manner be published in the church or in any such chapel as aforesaid belonging to such parish or chapelry wherein each of the said persons shall dwell; and that all other the rules prescribed by the said rubrick concerning the publication of banns and the solemnization of matrimony, and not hereby altered, shall be duly observed; and that in all cases where banns shall have been published, the marriage shall be solemnized in one of the parish churches or chapels where such banns shall have been published, and in no other place whatsoever.

“III. And be it further enacted, that the bishop of the diocese, with the consent of the patron and the incumbent of the church of the parish in which any public chapel having a chapelry thereunto annexed may be situated, or of any chapel situated in an extra-parochial place, signified to him under their hands and seals respectively, may authorize by writing under his hand and seal, the publication of banns and the solemnization of marriages in such chapel for persons residing within such chapelry or extra-parochial place respectively; and such consent, together with such written authority, shall be registered in the registry of the diocese.

“IV. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in every chapel in respect of which such authority shall be given as aforesaid, there shall be placed in some conspicuous part of the interior of such chapel a notice in the words following: ‘Banns may be published and Marriages solemnized in this Chapel.’

“V. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that all provisions now in force, or which may hereafter be established by law, relative to providing and keeping marriage registers in any parish churches, shall extend and be construed to extend to any chapel in which the publication of banns and solemnization of marriages shall be so authorized as aforesaid, in the same manner as if the same nized where banns published.

Bishop, with consent of patron and incumbent, may authorize publication of banns in any public chapel.

Notice to be placed in such chapel.

Provisions relative to marriage registers extended to chapels so intermarry without due publication of banns, or licence, from a person or persons having authority to grant the same, first had and obtained, the marriages of such persons shall be null and void, to all intents and purposes whatsoever;’ thereby, as I have stated, softening the rigour of the former law, under the 26 Geo. 2. And according to the construction put upon this section by the Consistory court of London, (Wiltshire v. Prince, 3 Hagg. 332,) by this court during the time of my predecessors, (Hadley v. Reynolds, not reported,) as well as in my own time, (Tongue v. Allen, 1 Curt. 38,) by the court of King’s Bench, (Rex v. Wroston (Inhabitants of), 4 B. & Ad. 640,) and I think I might say by the judicial committee of the Privy Council, (Tongue v. Tongue, 1 Moore’s P. C. Ca. 90,) (though, perhaps, the point has not received an actual and direct decision of the latter tribunal,) where the parties are not both cognizant of the false name, the marriage cannot be declared void. It is necessary, that both the parties should be accessory to the fraud; the act of one will not operate to the prejudice of the other, unless a participator.

“The question then is, as the act speaks of marriages ‘without due publication of banns,’ what is the consequence, where there is no publication of banns? For, according to Lord Stowell, in the case to which I have adverted, the publication of banns, in a false name, is equivalent to no publication. The court can see no difference between the cases, which stand precisely on the same grounds; nor does there seem a reason why there should be a difference; the fraud is the same in both; the remedy is the same in both.

“It is, however, contended that the words, ‘without due publication of banns,’ used in the statute 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, do not extend to cases of marriage not preceded by any publication of banns, as there are no words in the act to that effect; but if that were so, the former Marriage Act being repealed altogether, upon its repeal, the general law was revived, and came into operation, and continues to be in operation, except so far as it is qualified and restrained by the 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, the only act now in operation; and unless this act extends to cases of marriage not preceded by any publication of banns, as distinguished from undue publication, a marriage, where a false name was used, would be a good and valid marriage. But I have no doubt, that a marriage, which has not been preceded by any publication of banns at all, is a marriage within the meaning of the terms, that is, a marriage without due publication of banns. Marriages without due publication of banns, are declared null and void, and I should be glad to know how it is possible, that that can be a due publication of banns, which is no publication at all, and how it can be contended with any effect, that marriages, where the publication of banns is a mere salaried act, are distinguished from marriages where a due publication of banns.”

It may be here remarked that in James v. Aldrich (Clerk), 2 Wils. 71, a curate was granted to a curate in the parish of St. Martin for marrying without banns or licence, because it was a matter of conscience to him.

(1) Register book of marriages:—In Parson's case, (1 Irish Circ. Rep. 800,) it was held, that the entry of a marriage in a parish register may be proved by the production of a copy, proved to have been made by the clergyman from the book which he called the register, and which the witness examined with him, without producing the clergyman, or otherwise proving the register. The prisoner was indicted for bigamy, and it appeared, that he had been married, in 1812, in Ireland, to Martha Grey, who was still living; and, in 1832, he was married, at Southampton, in England, to Thompson Halsey. The indictment averred that he had been apprehended at Glenreagh, in the county of Donegal. At the time of the first marriage, the prisoner was a member of the established church, and Martha Grey was a presbyterian; and they had been married by the presbyterian minister of the congregation of Letterkenny, in the county of Donegal. The second marriage had been performed in the parish church of Southampton, by the vicar of the parish.

In order to prove the second marriage, the father of Thompson Halsey, who was present at it, and Thompson Halsey herself, were produced and examined. They proved that the prisoner had been married at the time alleged, and in the parish church of Southampton, by the Rev. Mr. Shrubb, to Thompson Halsey. A document was then produced, which Thompson Halsey swore was copied by the said Mr. Shrubb, in her presence, from a book in his possession, which he stated to her, was the register of marriages for the parish of Southampton, and that such copy was compared with the register, by Mr. Shrubb's reading the book while she read the copy, and that it was a correct copy, and was signed by Mr. Shrubb. He was not produced, nor was any other evidence given of the register. The counsel for the crown were about reading that copy; when the counsel for the prisoner, objected that it could not be read; because there was not sufficient evidence, that it was an examined copy of the extract from the register. It should be shown, that the book from which it was copied was, in fact, the register; but the evidence as to that, was only hearsay of hearsay. The counsel for the crown contended, that it was sufficient, if the book were produced by the proper officer as the register.

Upon such facts and arguments, Mr. Serjeant Warren observed: "... This point has been already decided in the case of Walker v. Buchanan, (6 C. & P. 552,) upon the principle, that where the law authorizes a person to give extracts from a book in his custody, the law presumes that he will do his duty, and give correct extracts. I therefore think, that the document produced is sufficiently proved to be an examined copy of the register, and I accordingly admit it."

(2) No parson, vicar, minister, or curate shall be obliged to publish the banns of matrimony between any persons whatsoever:—This language is an adoption of that, which is embodied in Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, s. 2, (ante 848,) upon which Lord Chancellor Eldon, in Nicholson v. Squire, (16 Ves. 260,) made the following observations:—"With regard to the clergyman, a notion seems to prevail, that everything is correct, if a paper describing the parties, between whom banns are to be published, being handed up to the clergyman in the usual manner during the service, he publishes them, without more. It is true, that a marriage by banns is good; though neither of the parties was resident in the parish: but, if a clergyman, not using due diligence, marries persons, neither of whom is resident in the parish, he is liable at least to ecclesiastical censure; perhaps to other consequences. It has been uniformly said, especially as to marriages in London, that the clergyman cannot possibly ascertain, where the parties are resident: but that is an objection, which a court, before whom the consideration of it may come, cannot hear. The act of parliament, (Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33,) has given the means of making the inquiry: and, if the means provided are not sufficient, it is not a valid excuse to the clergyman, who has not used those means, that he could not find out where the parties were resident, or either of them. If he has used the means given to him, and was misled, he is excusable; but he can never excuse himself, if no inquiry was made. The habit of taking the description of the parties in this loose way makes it very excusable in the individual clergyman; but that is not the notice, intended by the act of parliament; which has a clause, (sect. 2,) expressly requiring, that no parson, vicar, minister, or curate, shall be obliged to publish banns, unless the persons to be married shall, least before the time required for the first publication of such banns respectively, deliver or cause to be delivered to such parson, vicar, minister, or curate, a notice in writing, dated on the day on which the same shall be so delivered, of their true Christian names and surnames (1), and of the house or houses of their respective

seven days at least before the time, required for the first publication of such banns, respectively deliver or cause to be delivered to such parson, &c., a notice in writing of their true Christian and surnames, and (not of the parish, but) of the house or houses of their respective abodes within such parish, &c.; and of the time, during which they have dwelt, inhabited, or lodged, in such house or houses respectively. The clergyman, therefore, has only to repair to the house, in which they are represented to have lived; and to inform himself whether the statement is true. The explanation given by this gentleman, satisfies me, that he did not mean ill; but, recollecting the extreme difficulty Lord Thurlow had to avoid committing Dr. Markham, I did not think, I ought to permit this subject to come to a conclusion without stating publicly the law upon it." Vide Priestley v. Lamb, 6 Ves. 421. Millet v. Rowe, 7 Ibid. 419. Bathurst v. Murray, 8 Ibid. 74; and 1 Ves. 155 in not.

(1) True Christian names and surnames:—Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, s. 2, (ante 848,) contains in effect similar words. In Rex v. Billinghurst (Inhabitants of), (3 M. & S. 250,) where a person whose baptismal and surname was Abraham Langley, was married by banns by the name of George Smith, having been known in the parish where he resided, and was married, by that name only, from his first coming into the parish, till his marriage, which was about three years, it was held, that the marriage was valid:—Lord Ellenborough observing, "All that the law requires on this subject is, that marriages shall be solemnized either by licence, or publication of banns, otherwise the Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, s. 8, declares, that they shall be void. The statute does not specify what shall be necessary to be observed in the publication of banns; or that the banns shall be published in the true names; but certainly it must be understood, as the clear intention of the legislature, that the banns shall be published in the true names, because it requires, that notice in writing shall be delivered to the minister, of the true Christian and surnames of the parties, seven days before the publication; and unless such notice be given, he is not obliged to publish the banns. The question then is, has there been in this case, that which is required, a due notification by the minister, on a Sunday, in time of divine service, of one of the persons intending to contract marriage. Now it appears, that such notification has been made by the name of George Smith, by which name alone the party was known in the place where he resided, and which he had borne for three years prior to the celebration of the marriage, in that place, and that he was not known there by any other name. It would lead to perilous consequences, if in every case an inquiry were to be instituted, at the hazard of endangering the marriage of a woman, who had every reason to think she was acquiring a legitimate husband, whether the name by which the husband was notified in the banns were strictly his baptismal name, or whether at the period of his baptism, he may not have received some other name. What the consequences might be of encouraging such inquiries, as to the avoiding of marriages, and bastardizing the issue of them, it is not very difficult to imagine. The object of the statute in the publication of banns was to secure notoriety, to apprise all persons of the intention of the parties to contract marriage; and how can that object be better attained, than by a publication in the name by which the party is known? If the publication here had been in the name of Abraham Langley, it would not of itself have drawn any attention to the party, because he was unknown by that name, and its being coupled with the name of the woman, who probably was known, would perhaps have led those who knew her, and knew that she was about to be married to a person of another name, to suppose, either that these were not the same parties, or that there was some mistake. Therefore the publication in the real name, instead of being notice to all persons, would have operated as a deception; and it is strictly correct to say, that the original name in this case would not have been the true name within the meaning of the statute. On these grounds, I think that the act only meant to require, that the parties should be published by their known and acknowledged names, and to hold a different construction would make a marriage by banns a snare, and in many instances a ruin upon innocent parties. The court, therefore, cannot lend itself to a construction, which would be pregnant with such consequences." Vide etiam M'Anerney's case, 1 Irish Circ. Rep. 270.

In Clowes v. Clowes, (3 Curt. 190,) Sir Herbert Jenner Just observed, "... Where there has been no error as to the person, and no fraud practised in obtaining the licence, that is, such fraud as, if known, would have prevented the granting of the licence, the marriage cannot be voided. This I consider as the result of the decisions in Cope v. Burt, (1 Consist. 434,) and Cockburn v. Garnault, (cit. Ibid. 435.) ... The only fraud that can be relied upon in this case, consists in the substitution of the name of 'Terry' for that of 'Jones.' I can find no fraud in the mode of obtaining the licence. ... There was no error de personâ, although there may have been error nominis. But in point of fact, in all these cases, the distinction has been established between a marriage by banns and a marriage by licence. The publication of banns is a notice to all the world, that the two parties intend to contract a marriage, and the words of the act of parliament are direct, 'That the true Christian and surname of the parties must be used,' and, therefore, if the banns are published in

(1) And it is hereby further enacted, that no licence of marriage shall from and after the said first day of November be granted by any archbishop, bishop, or other ordinary or person having authority to grant such licences to solemnize any marriage in any other church or chapel than in the parish church or in some public chapel of or belonging to the parish or chapelry within which the usual place of abode of one of the persons to be married shall have been for the space of fifteen days immediately before the granting of such licence.

"XI. And be it further enacted, that if any cessat be entered against the grant of any licence for a marriage, such cessat being duly signed by or on the behalf of the person who enters the same, together with his place of residence and the ground of objection on which his cessat is founded, no licence shall issue till the said cessat, or a true copy thereof, be transmitted to the judge out of whose office the licence is to issue, and until the judge has certified to the register that he has examined into the matter of the cessat, and is satisfied that it ought not to obstruct the grant of the licence for the said marriage, or until the cessat be withdrawn by the party who entered the same.

"XII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that all parishes where there shall be no parish church or chapel belonging thereto, or none wherein divine service shall be usually solemnized every Sunday, and all extra-parochial places whatever, having no public chapel wherein banns may be lawfully published, shall be deemed and taken to belong to any parish or chapelry next adjoining, for the purposes of this act only; and where banns shall be published in any church or chapel of any parish or chapelry adjoining to any such parish or chapelry where there shall be no church or chapel, or none wherein divine service shall be solemnized as aforesaid, or to any extra-parochial place as aforesaid, the parson, vicar, minister, or curate publishing such banns shall, in writing under his hand, certify the publication thereof in the same manner as if either of the persons to be married had dwelt in such adjoining parish or chapelry.

"XIII. (2) Provided always, and be it further enacted and declared, that if the church of any parish, or chapel of any chapelry, wherein marriages have been usually solemnized, be demolished in order to be rebuilt, or be under repair, and on such account be disused for public service, it shall be lawful for the banns to be proclaimed in a church or chapel of any adjoining parish or chapelry in which banns are usually proclaimed, or in any place within the limits of the parish or chapelry which shall be licensed by the bishop of the diocese for the performance of divine service during the repair or rebuilding of the church as aforesaid; and the false names of both parties, the marriage is invalid. A licence is a dispensation from the necessity of publication of banns, and is granted on such terms and conditions as the ordinary is willing to accept; in this case, the terms are contained in the affidavit to lead the licence, and on the oath of the party, the licence was granted, and the parties married;—a marriage so solemnized, is not to be set aside on slight grounds."

the marriage of such party so under age, unless there shall be no person authorized to give such consent.

"XVII. And be it further enacted, that in case the father or fathers of the parties to be married, or of one of them, so under age as aforesaid shall be non compos mentis, or the guardian or guardians, mother or mothers, or any of them whose consent is made necessary as aforesaid to the marriage of such party or parties, shall be non compos mentis, or in parts beyond the seas, or shall unreasonably or from undue motives refuse or withhold his, her, or their consent (1) to a proper marriage, then it shall and may be lawful for any person desirous of marrying, in any of the before-mentioned cases, to apply by petition to the lord chancellor, lord keeper, or the lords commissioners of the great seal of Great Britain for the time being, master of the rolls, or vice-chancellor of England, who is and are respectively hereby empowered to proceed upon such petition in a summary way; and in case the marriage proposed shall upon examination appear to be proper, the said lord chancellor, lord keeper, or lords commissioners of the great seal for the time being, master of the rolls, or vice-chancellor, shall judicially declare the same to be so; and such judicial declaration shall be deemed and taken to be as good and effectual, to all intents and purposes, as if the father, guardian or guardians, or mother of the person so petitioning, had consented to such marriage.

"XVIII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that from and after the said first day of November no surrogate hereafter to be deputed by any ecclesiastical judge, who hath power to grant licences, shall grant any such licence until he hath taken an oath before the said judge, or before a commissioner appointed by commission under the seal of the said judge, which commissioner the said judge is hereby authorized to issue, faithfully to execute his office according to law, to the best of his knowledge, and hath given security by his bond in the sum of one hundred pounds to the bishop of the diocese, for the due and faithful execution of his said office.

quired for the marriage of such party so under age, unless there shall be no person authorized to give such consent." The language of this section is merely to require consent; it does not proceed to make the marriage void, if solemnized without consent. Then the twenty-second section declares, that certain marriages shall be null and void, and a marriage by licence without consent is not specified. Thus far, therefore, the question depends upon the direction in the sixteenth section; and if there were any doubt upon the construction of that section, it would be removed by the twenty-third, which enacts, that "if any valid marriage solemnized by licence shall be procured by a party to such marriage to be solemnized between persons, one or both of whom shall be under age, by means of falsely swearing to any matter to which such party is required personally to depose," not that the marriage shall be void, but that all the property accruing from the marriage shall be forfeited, and shall be secured for the benefit of the innocent party, or the issue of the marriage. This is a penalty for disobeying the direction of the legislature given in the sixteenth section, and is calculated to prevent fraudulent and clandestine marriages, by depriving the guilty party of the pecuniary benefit, which is most commonly the inducement moving to the fraud. For these reasons it appears to us that the marriage in this case is valid, and the order of sessions right."

(1) In case the father . . . shall be non compos mentis, or in parts beyond the seas, or shall unreasonably or from undue motives refuse or withhold his . . . consent:—

In Exp. I. C. an infant, (3 M. & C. 471.) it was holden, that the foregoing language did not apply to the case of a father who is beyond the seas, or unreasonably withholds his consent, but only to a case in which he is non compos mentis:—Lord Chancellor Coltenham observing, "that, in his opinion, the words 'any of them whose consent,' &c., referred to the persons named in the immediately preceding member of the sentence, viz., 'the guardian or guardians, mother or mothers,' and that the discretionary power of consent vested in the judges of this court, in case the consent should be withheld unreasonably, or from undue motives, applied exclusively to the case of such guardian or mother so acting. As, however, the point had been under the vice-chancellor's consideration, he should take an opportunity of conferring with his honor upon it." Upon a subsequent day, the lord chancellor said, "he had seen the vice-chancellor on the subject of the construction to be put on the Marriage Act in this case. They had looked at the act together; and they were clearly of opinion that its provisions did not extend to the case of a father beyond seas, or unreasonably withholding his consent, but solely to the case of a father who was non compos. There could be no doubt, that the order in Exp. Cooper would not have been made, if the act had been properly brought under his honor's attention at the time. The date of the order, being the 19th of August, afforded a very sufficient explanation of the circumstances under which that order was obtained."

"XIX. And be it also enacted, that whenever a marriage shall not be had within three months after the grant of a licence by any archbishop, bishop, or any ordinary or person having authority to grant such licence, no minister shall proceed to the solemnization of such marriage until a new licence shall have been obtained, unless by banns duly published according to the provisions of this act.

"XX. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be construed to extend to deprive the Archbishop of Canterbury and his successors, and his and their proper officers, of the right which hath hitherto been used, in virtue of a certain statute made in the twenty-fifth year of the reign of the late King Henry the Eighth, intituled, 'An Act concerning Peter Pence and Dispensations,' of granting special licences to marry at any convenient time or place.

"XXI. (1) And be it further enacted, that if any person shall, from and after the said first day of November, solemnize matrimony in any other place than a church, or such public chapel wherein banns may be lawfully published, or at any other time than between the hours of eight and twelve in the forenoon, unless by special licence from the Archbishop of Canterbury, or shall solemnize matrimony without due publication of banns, unless licence of marriage be first had and obtained from some person or persons having authority to grant the same; or if any person, falsely pretending to be in holy orders, shall solemnize matrimony according to the rites of the church of England; every person knowingly and wilfully so offending, and being lawfully convicted thereof, shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and shall be transported for the space of fourteen years, according to the laws in force for transportation of felons: provided that all prosecutions for such felony shall be commenced within the space of three years after the offence committed.

"XXII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that if any persons shall knowingly and wilfully intermarry in any other place than a church, or such public chapel wherein banns may be lawfully published, unless by special licence as aforesaid, or shall knowingly and wilfully intermarry without due publication of banns, or licence from a person or persons having authority to grant the same (2), first had and obtained, or shall knowingly and wilfully consent to or acquiesce in the solemnization of such marriage by any person not being in holy orders, the marriages of such persons shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

"XXIII. And be it further enacted, that if any valid marriage solemnized by licence shall, after the said first day of November next, be procured by a party to such marriage to be solemnized between persons, one or both of whom shall be under the age of twenty-one years, not being a widower or widow, contrary to the provisions of this act, by means of such party falsely swearing as to any matter or matters to which such party is hereinbefore required personally to swear, such party wilfully and knowingly so swearing; or if any valid marriage by banns shall, after the said first day of November next, be procured by a party thereto to be solemnized by banns between persons, one or both of whom shall be under the age of twenty-one years, not being a widower or widow, such party knowing that such person as aforesaid under the age of twenty-one years had a parent or guardian then living, and that such marriage was had without the consent of such parent or guardian, and knowing that banns had not been duly published according to the

(2) Licence from a person or persons having authority to grant the same:—The marriage of parties under a licence from "a person not having authority to grant the same," is not void by Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 22, unless both parties knowingly and wilfully intermarry by virtue of such licence: thus, in Dormer v. Williams, (1 Curt. 870,) Dr. Lushington observed, "Now with respect to the words in the clause in question, 'a licence from a person or persons having authority to grant the same,' the following considerations arise: whether they mean authority to grant a licence at all, or authority to grant the particular licence required on the occasion. I am willing, for the present purpose, to take it, that they mean the particular licence required on the occasion; then, in my judgment, the whole question turns upon this; whether the facts and circumstances are such as to prove that both parties knowingly and wilfully intermarried without a licence from a person having authority to grant that licence."

provisions of this act, and having knowingly caused or procured the undue publication of banns, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for his majesty's attorney-general (or for his majesty's solicitor-general in case of the vacancy of the office of attorney-general) by information in the nature of an English bill in the court of Chancery or court of Exchequer, at the relation of a parent or guardian of the minor, whose consent has not been given to such marriage, and who shall be responsible for any costs incurred in such suit, such parent or guardian previously making oath as is hereinafter required, to sue for a forfeiture of all estate, right, title, and interest in any property which hath accrued or shall accrue to the party so offending by force of such marriage; and such court shall have power in such suit to declare such forfeiture, and thereupon to order and direct that all such estate, right, title, and interest in any property, as shall then have accrued or shall thereafter accrue to such offending party, by force of such marriage, shall be secured under the direction of such court for the benefit of the innocent party, or of the issue of the marriage, or of any of them, in such manner as the said court shall think fit, for the purpose of preventing the offending party from deriving any interest in real or personal estate, or pecuniary benefits from such marriage; and if both the parties so contracting marriage shall, in the judgment of the court, be guilty of any such offence as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said court to settle and secure such property, or any part thereof, immediately for the benefit of the issue of the marriage, subject to such provisions for the offending parties, by way of maintenance or otherwise, as the said court, under the particular circumstances of the case, shall think reasonable, regard being had to the benefit of the issue of the marriage during the lives of their parents, and of the issue of the parties respectively by any future marriage, or of the parties themselves, in case either of them shall survive the other: provided also, that no such information as aforesaid shall be filed, unless it shall be made out to the satisfaction of the attorney or solicitor-general before he files the same, by oath or oaths sworn before one of the masters in ordinary in Chancery, or before one of the barons of the Exchequer, and which they are hereby respectively empowered to administer, that the valid marriage to be complained of in such information hath been solemnized in such manner, and under such circumstances, as in the judgment of the said attorney or solicitor-general are sufficient to authorize the filing the information under the provisions of this act, and that such marriage has been solemnized without the consent of the party or parties at whose relation such information is proposed to be filed, or of any other parent or guardian of the minor married, to the knowledge or belief of the relator or relators so making oath; and that such relator or relators had not known or discovered that such marriage had been solemnized more than three months previous to his or their application to the attorney or solicitor-general.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all agreements, settlements, and deeds, entered into or executed by the parties to any marriage, in consequence of or in relation to which marriage such information as aforesaid shall be filed, or by either of the said parties, before and in contemplation of such marriage, or after such marriage, for the benefit of the parties or either or them, or their issue, so far as the same shall be contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions of such security and settlement as shall be made by or under the direction of such court as aforesaid, under the authority of this act, shall be absolutely void, and have no force or effect.

Provided always, and be it further enacted, that any original information to be filed for the purpose of obtaining a declaration of any such forfeiture as aforesaid, shall be filed within one year after the solemnization of the marriage by which such forfeiture shall have been incurred, and shall be prosecuted with due diligence; and in case any person or necessary party to any such information shall abscond, or be or continue out of England, it shall be lawful for the court in which such information shall be filed, to order such person to appear to such information, and answer the same, within such time as to such court shall seem fit; and to cause such order to be served on such person at any place out of England, or to cause such order to be inserted in the London Gazette, and such other British or foreign newspapers as to such court shall seem proper; and in default of such person appearing and answering such information within the time to be limited as aforesaid, to order such information to be taken as confessed by such person, and to proceed to make such decree or order upon such information as such court might have made if such person had appeared to and answered such information: provided always, that in case the person at whose relation any such suit shall have been instituted shall die pending such suit, it shall be lawful for the court of Chancery, if such court shall see fit, to appoint a proper person or proper persons at whose relation such suit may be continued.

"XXVI. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that after the solemnization of any marriage under a publication of banns, it shall not be necessary in support of such marriage to give any proof of the actual dwelling of the parties in the respective parishes or chapelries wherein the banns of matrimony were published; or where the marriage is by licence, it shall not be necessary to give any proof that the usual place of abode (1) of one of the parties, for the space of fifteen days as aforesaid, was in the parish or chapelry where the marriage was solemnized; nor shall any evidence in either of the said cases be received to prove the contrary in any suit touching the validity of such marriage.

"XXVII. And be it further enacted, that in no case whatsoever shall any suit or proceedings be had in any ecclesiastical court in order to compel a celebration of any marriage in facie ecclesie, by reason of any contract (2) of matrimony whatsoever, whether per verba de presenti, or per verba de futuro, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

"XXVIII. (3) And in order to preserve the evidence of marriages, and to make the proof thereof more certain and easy, and for the direction of ministers in the celebration of marriages and registering thereof, be it enacted, that from and after the said first day of November all marriages shall be solemnized in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, besides the minister who shall celebrate the same; and that immediately after the celebration of every marriage an entry thereof shall be made in the register book provided and kept for that purpose as by law is now directed, or as shall be hereafter directed; in which entry or register it shall be expressed that the said marriage was celebrated by banns or licence, and if both or either of the parties married by licence be under age, not being a widower or widow, with consent of the parents or guardians, as the case shall be; and such entry shall be signed by the minister with his proper addition, and also by the parties married, and attested by such two witnesses; which entry shall be made in the form or to the effect following; that is to say,

“Whereas it is expedient to relieve the minds of all his majesty's subjects from any doubt concerning the validity of marriages solemnized by a minister of the

(1) Marriages solemnized Abroad.—The validity of a marriage, celebrated in a foreign country, must be determined in an English court, by the lex loci where the marriage is solemnized. Lacon v. Higgins, D. & R. N. P. C. 38. 3 Stark. N. P. C. 178.

Thus, the articles of the law of France, which prescribe the forms essential to marriage, but which do not annul a marriage in fact, for non-observance of such forms, are, to be considered as merely directory. But parol evidence is admissible to show, that by the law of France, a marriage in fact, without observance of the requisites prescribed by the law of France, is void. Ibid.

A marriage between two protestant British subjects, solemnized by a Portuguese Roman catholic priest at Madras, according to the rites of the Roman catholic church, followed by cohabitation, but without the licence of the governor, which it had been uniformly the custom to obtain, was in Lautour v. Teesdale, (8 Taunt. 830,) held to be a valid marriage.

A marriage between an Englishman and a domiciled French lady at the house of the British ambassador at Paris, by the chaplain to the embassy, is a valid marriage under Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 91. Thus, in Lloyd v. Petitjean, (2 Curt. 259,) Dr. Lushington observed, “In considering the admissibility of this libel, I think it most convenient to direct my attention, in the first instance, to the second marriage, pleaded to have taken place in the house of the British ambassador at Paris.

“The validity of this marriage must be supported, either by the law as it existed previous to the act of 1823, or by the law as affected by that statute. With respect to this act, I am not aware, that it has re-

church of England in the chapel or house of any British ambassador or minister residing within the country to the court of which he is accredited, or in the chapel

ceived, after discussion and deliberation, any judicial construction. I have taken some pains to ascertain, whether, in any court, this question has been judicially determined, namely, whether a marriage in the house of a British ambassador, one of the parties so married only being a British subject, is or is not excluded from the operation of the act? All I can find is, that a case (that of O'Connor v. Ommamney), occurred in the court of Chancery in 1837, in which the payment of a sum of money depended upon the validity of a marriage between a British subject and a native of Switzerland, solemnized in the house of the British ambassador at Naples, and the master reported, that a valid marriage had taken place; which report was not objected to, and being confirmed by the court, a decree passed accordingly. But I do not find that the point of law underwent any discussion or consideration, and I cannot, therefore, regard this case as a ruling decision. I begin by considering the words of the statute itself, without reference to any other in pari materid, and I may first observe, that it is a remedial statute, intended for the redress of what, in the judgment of the legislature, was a grievance and hardship, and according to all rules of legal construction, it is to receive such an interpretation as will meet the evil intended to be remedied; such a statute must have an extended, not a restricted construction. It is to relieve the minds of all her majesty's subjects from any doubt concerning the validity of these marriages; words which must be construed in an ample, not a confined sense. The statute certainly is not expressed in very satisfactory terms, because not a word is said as to whether it applies to marriages between British subjects alone, or in which one party only is British, or whether it comprehends all marriages solemnized in a British ambassador's chapel. On the other hand, there are no words of exclusion showing it was the intention of the legislature to confine the act exclusively to British subjects; it declares, that all marriages shall be valid, without exception, and I cannot see on what principle I can put a construction upon the act, which should exclude a marriage where one of the parties is a British subject, and the other a foreigner. If I were to do so, I should not carry the act into full effect, for I should not relieve the minds of all her majesty's subjects from doubt. I am, therefore, clearly of opinion, that, provided one of the parties be a British subject, a marriage under the circumstances of the present case, is valid under the act. This is the conclusion I have formed, from the statute itself; but another statute had been passed in pari materid that very year, (Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 67,) to render valid, marriages had at St. Petersburg, in the chapel of the Russia company, and in private houses, in which it is expressly enacted, that such marriages shall be good, whether both or one of the parties be British subjects; and it has been strongly and fairly contended, that if the legislature had intended the same thing in the subsequent act, in pari materid, it would have used the same terms. But although it be undoubtedly a principle of law, that, in the construction of an act of parliament, you are to look at other statutes in pari materid, yet it is a dangerous doctrine to push too far, especially on the subject of marriage. I find, for instance, in a statute passed in the late reign, (Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 45,) 'to declare valid marriages solemnized at Hamburg, since the abolition of the British factory there;' the same purpose is intended, as in the St. Petersburg act, but the wording is not the same. I am not unaware of the very great danger that may arise from legalizing in England, marriages had in foreign countries; that the consequences may be these: you may have the status of the parties different in different countries; you may have the issue of a marriage legitimate in one country and illegitimate in another; and cohabitation prohibited in one country, and in another allowed. But these are considerations which fall within the province of the legislature, which has thought fit to pass this act, and it is my duty only to administer the law.

"I am of opinion, that the validity of this marriage cannot be impeached, and, consequently, that the libel must be rejected. It is unnecessary that I should enter into a consideration of the law of France, as pleaded, with reference to the first marriage, being of opinion that the second marriage is legal by virtue of the statute."

In Res. v. Brampton (Inhabitants of), (10 East, 282,) it appeared, that British subjects in a foreign country, being desirous of intermarrying, went to a chapel for that purpose, where a service in the language of the country was read by a person habited like a priest, and interpreted into English by the officiating clerk; which service the parties understood to be the marriage service of the church of England; and they received a certificate of the marriage, which was afterwards lost:—it was held to be sufficient evidence whereon to found a presumption, (nothing appearing to the contrary,) that the marriage was duly celebrated according to the law of that country, particularly after eleven years' cohabitation as man and wife, till the period of the husband's death; and such British subjects being attached at the time to the British army, on service in such foreign country, and having military possession of the place, it seems that such marriage solemnized by a priest in holy orders, (of which this would be reasonable evidence,) would be a good marriage by the law of England, as a marriage contract per verba de presenti before the Marriage Act, marriages beyond sea being excepted out of that act; and it would make no difference, if solemnized by a Roman catholic priest.

A marriage in Ireland, performed by a clergyman of the established church of England, was in Smith v. Maxwell, (1 C. & P.

And that the lawfulness of such a marriage may be tried by a jury.

In Robertson v. Crawford, (3 Beav. 103,) it appeared, that A. B., a widow, who was entitled to a pension durante viduitate, cohabited with C. D. in Scotland. In regard to society, they held themselves out as man and wife; but with respect to the pension, they acted, as if they were unmarried; and A. B. half yearly, made solemn declarations of widowhood for the purpose of obtaining the pension: it was held, on exceptions, to the master's report, that, on the whole, he was right in finding, that no valid marriage had taken place.

And whereas the easement of burial in the churchyards of protestant churches has been long enjoyed by all classes of his majesty's subjects; but such burial may not by law be allowed, unless the burial service ordained by the Liturgy of the church of Ireland as by law established, shall be celebrated thereat by the rector, vicar, curate, or other officiating minister of the church of Ireland, in whose churchyard such burial shall be had, or by some person in holy orders of the church of Ireland, duly authorized by him: and whereas such minister of the church of Ireland may not by law dispense with the celebration of such service, or permit the substitution of any other service in lieu thereof; to the end thereof that all classes of his majesty's subjects may be permitted to have the said easement of burial according to the rites of the several religions professed by them; be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful for the officiating minister of the church of Ireland by law established, in each and every parish in Ireland, upon application being made to him in writing, by any clergyman or minister of any church or congregation not being of the established church of Ireland, duly authorized by law to officiate in such church or congregation, stating the death of any member or members of such church or congregation, for permission to perform the burial service at the grave of such person or persons in the churchyard of such parish, according to the rites of such church or congregation, to grant permission accordingly; provided always, that such permission for the performance of such burial service at the grave, according to the rites of such church or congregation, shall be in writing; and that in order to prevent any interruption of, or interference with the celebration of any of the rites of the church of Ireland by law established, such interment and service shall be had and celebrated at such time only as shall be appointed in such permission by such officiating minister of the church of Ireland.

“III. And be it further enacted, that if such permission shall in any case be withheld, the cause of withholding the same shall be specially and distinctly declared, in writing, by such officiating minister of the church of Ireland, one part of which written declaration shall forthwith be delivered to the person making such application as aforesaid, and one other part thereof shall be forthwith transmitted to the bishop of the diocese in which such churchyard shall be situated, and shall be by him transmitted forthwith, signed by the register of such diocese, to the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland.

“IV. And be it further enacted, that it shall not be necessary for such officiating minister of the church of Ireland to celebrate, nor shall he celebrate the burial service ordained by the liturgy of the church of Ireland as by law established, at the interment of any person not being of the established church of Ireland, unless at the desire of the person so applying, at the interment of such person, specified in the application and permission; any law, canon, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

“V. And be it further enacted, that if after such permission granted as aforesaid, any person or persons shall obstruct or interrupt the performance of the said burial service at the grave of the person specified in such permission, such person or persons so obstructing or interrupting shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to be prosecuted therefor.”

"II. And be it further enacted, that all licences granted by any archbishop, bishop, or other ordinary or person having authority to grant such licences for the solemnization of marriages in the church of any parish or chapel of any chapelry wherein marriages have been usually solemnized, shall be deemed and taken to be licences for the solemnization of marriages in any place within the limits of such parish or chapelry which shall be licensed by the bishop of the diocese for the performance of divine service during the repair or rebuilding of any such church or chapel, or if no such place shall be so licensed, then in the church or chapel of any adjoining parish or chapelry wherein marriages have been usually solemnized.

LXXXIX. STAT. 5 GEORGH II 4, c. 41 (1). A.D. 1824.

"An Act to repeal certain Duties on Law Proceedings in the Courts in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, and for better protecting the Duties payable upon Stamped Vellum, Parchment, or Paper."

From October 10, 1824, duties mentioned in schedule annexed to cease; as also the duties on bonds on commissions of bankrupt; on bonds on replevy of goods; and also on copy of wills or power of attorney, deposited in any ecclesiastical court.

Arrears excepted.

Stamps rendered useless may be sent to the stamp office to be exchanged for others within six months after October 10, 1824, and if necessary commissioners may pay the difference.

How suits for the protection of stamp duties may be brought.

‘Whereas it is expedient to repeal the several stamp duties payable for or in respect of the several instruments hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore enacted by the king’s most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the tenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, the several stamp duties or sums of money now payable in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, upon or for or in respect of the several instruments, matters, or things mentioned, described, and set forth in the schedule to this act annexed; and also upon or for or in respect of any bond to be given to the lord chancellor, lord keeper, or commissioners of the great seal of Great Britain or Ireland respectively, for the time being, by any creditor or creditors petitioning for a commission of bankrupt; and also upon or for or in respect of any bond to be given in Great Britain or Ireland to any sheriff or other person upon the replevy of any goods or chattels; and also for or upon or in respect of the assignment of any of such bonds; and also for or upon or in respect of any copy or extract of any will or codicil deposited in any ecclesiastical court in Great Britain or Ireland; and also for or upon or in respect of any letter or power of attorney or proxy filed in any such ecclesiastical court; and also for or in respect of the vellum, parchment, or paper upon which any such instrument, matter, or thing, bond, assignment, copy or extract, letter or power of attorney or proxy, shall be written or printed, shall cease and determine; save and except such of the said respective duties or sums of money, or so much and such part or parts thereof, as shall have become or shall or may be payable or become due before or upon the said tenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, and remain in arrear or unpaid afterwards; all which duties and sums of money, or any part or parts which shall remain so in arrear or unpaid as aforesaid, shall be recoverable by the same ways and means, and with such and the same penalties, and in such and the same manner in all respects, as if this act had not been made.

“II. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for all persons having in their possession any stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, not made use of, and which by the operation of this act shall have been or shall be rendered unfit for the instruments, proceedings, matters, or things for which the same was originally intended, to send such stamped vellum, parchment, or paper to the head office of stamps in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, at any time within six calendar months from and after the said tenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four; and it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps in Great Britain and Ireland respectively to cause the stamps upon such vellum, parchment, or paper to be cancelled, and to deliver out in lieu thereof other stamps as near as may be of equal value in the whole with the stamps so cancelled, and, if necessary, to pay the difference out of any monies in the hands of the receiver general of the stamp duties in Great Britain or Ireland respectively.

“III. And whereas it is expedient to make provision for the better protecting the duties payable to his majesty, his heirs and successors, upon stamped vellum, parchment, or paper; be it therefore further enacted, that in any suit, prosecution, or proceeding to be brought against any person or persons, or body or bodies politic or corporate, for the taking or detaining, or for the losing, damaging, or destroying of any vellum, parchment, or paper upon which any stamp or stamped mark or

"Whereas it is expedient that an act made in the fifty-seventh year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to regulate the Celebration of Marriages in Newfoundland,' should be repealed, and that further and more effectual provision should be made for the celebration of marriages in Newfoundland; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five, the said recited act of the fifty-seventh year of the reign of his said late majesty shall be and the same is hereby repealed: provided always, that all marriages which have taken place at any time before the passing of this act in Newfoundland, and which have not been declared and adjudged to be void or invalid by any court of competent jurisdiction, and all marriages which shall take place in Newfoundland previously to the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five, shall be and the same are hereby declared to be as good and valid as if the said recited act had not been passed or made; anything in the said recited act to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

"II. And be it further enacted, that all marriages which may hereafter be had in Newfoundland shall be celebrated by persons in holy orders, except in the cases hereinafter specially excepted and provided for.

"III. And whereas by reason of the great extent of the said island of Newfoundland, and the want of internal communication between the different parts of the said island during the greater part of the year, difficulties have arisen with respect to the solemnization of marriages in various settlements and stations there; and it is expedient that temporary provision be made for the legal solemnization of marriages in such settlements or stations as aforesaid; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, or for the governor or acting governor for the time being of the colony of Newfoundland, to grant licences or a licence to celebrate marriages within the said colony or its dependencies, to any person or persons who shall employ themselves or himself solely in the duties of a teacher or preacher of religion in the said colony, and who shall not follow or engage in any trade or business, or other profession, occupation, or employment, for their or his livelihood, except that of a schoolmaster: provided always, that no such licence as aforesaid shall be granted to any such persons or person as aforesaid, unless they or he shall first have taken the oath and subscribed the declaration specified in an act passed in the fifty-second year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to repeal certain Acts and amend other Acts relating to Religious Worship and Assemblies, and Persons teaching or preaching therein,' and shall have produced a certificate thereof to his majesty's said principal secretary of state, or to the governor or acting governor of Newfoundland, as the case may be; or unless such persons or person shall take the said oath and subscribe the said declaration before the governor or acting governor of the said colony, who is hereby authorized and required to administer such oath and to tender such declaration to the persons or person requiring to take and make and subscribe the same.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any person, to whom any such licence as aforesaid shall be granted in manner aforesaid, to celebrate marriages between any persons resident in the said colony of Newfoundland or its dependencies, in any case where, by reason of the difficulty of the internal communication between different parts of the said colony or its “ VIII. And be it further enacted, that any such public book or register of marriages in Newfoundland, or such attested copy as aforesaid of any entry in any such public book or register of marriages, the handwriting of the said government secretary, or of the attesting minister being duly proved, shall be deemed and taken to be, and shall for all purposes be received as good and sufficient evidence of the due celebration of any marriage in Newfoundland, which by such book or register, or by such attested copy, shall appear or purport to have been celebrated; and every such marriage shall, upon the production of such book or register, or of such attested copy, and proof as aforesaid, be deemed and taken to have been duly performed and celebrated.

“ IX. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained relating to marriages in Newfoundland shall extend to any marriages amongst the people called Quakers, or amongst the persons professing the Jewish religion, where both the parties to any such marriage shall be of the people called Quakers or persons professing the Jewish religion respectively.

Billy are of the present annual value of two hundred pounds or thereabouts; and the said vicarage of Ballyclug, the vicarial tithes whereof do not exceed in value twenty-two pounds yearly, has been and is episcopally united to the impropriate curacy of Ballynnessa, in the said county of Antrim, under one incumbent, the yearly value of which last-mentioned union, including an augmentation from Primate Boulter's fund, does not now exceed eighty-four pounds yearly; and the vicarages of the said parishes of Donegore and Kilbride are episcopally united under one incumbent, and the value of the said last-mentioned union does not exceed three hundred pounds a year; and the annual value of the vicarage of the said parish of Dunluce is one hundred pounds or thereabouts; and the annual value of the said several and respective rectories of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan, Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane, Calfeightron, Loughgule, Ramoan, Teckmacrean otherwise Glenarm, Armoy, Billy, Ballyclug, Donegore, Kilbride, Ballymoney, and Dunluce, are as follows; that is to say, Milltown otherwise Ballywellan, three hundred pounds or thereabouts; Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane, three hundred and fifty pounds or thereabouts; Calfeightron, four hundred pounds or thereabouts; Loughgule, four hundred pounds or thereabouts; Ramoan, four hundred pounds or thereabouts; Teckmacrean otherwise Glenarm, from seventy pounds to one hundred pounds or thereabouts; Armoy, one hundred and sixty pounds or thereabouts; Billy, three hundred and thirty pounds or thereabouts; Ballyclug, one hundred pounds or thereabouts; Donegore, two hundred and fifty pounds or thereabouts; Kilbride, two hundred and fifty pounds or thereabouts; Ballymoney, one thousand two hundred pounds or thereabouts; and Dunluce, two hundred pounds or thereabouts: and whereas the Lord Bishop of Down and Connor for the time being is the patron, not only of the aforesaid chancellorship, archdeaconry, and precentorship, but of all and every the vicarages hereinbefore mentioned: and whereas it will be highly beneficial to the church establishment of that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, that the rectorial tithes of all the said several and respective parishes or rectories, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, save and except the said rectory or parish of Ramoan, shall be vested in the respective vicars of the said parishes (save as aforesaid) from and after the death or removal of the said William Trail, the present chancellor; and for that purpose, that the said last-mentioned rectories and rectorial tithes, save as aforesaid, shall be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellors of the said cathedral church, and annexed and united to the vicarages of the said respective last mentioned to be disappropriated parishes or rectories, from and after the death or removal of the said William Trail, the present chancellor; and that in like manner the rectorial tithes of all and singular the said parishes or rectories so as aforesaid appropriate and belonging to the said archdeaconry (save and except the said parish of Billy) shall be vested in the respective vicars of and within the said respective last-mentioned parishes (except as aforesaid), from and after the death or removal of the said Anthony Trail, the present archdeacon of the said diocese; and for that purpose that all the said rectories and rectorial tithes, so as aforesaid appropriated and belonging to the said archdeaconry (save the said parish of Billy), shall be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the archdeacons of the said diocese of Connor, and for ever annexed and united to the vicarages of and within the said last mentioned to be disappropriated parishes or rectories, from and after the death or removal of the said Anthony Trail, the present archdeacon; and that the said vicarage of Ramoan shall be reunited to the rectory of the same parish, and so appropriated to the said chancellorship, and that the vicarage of Billy shall be reunited to the rectory of the same parish of Billy, and be so appropriated to the said archdeaconry; thus vesting in the chancellors and archdeacons respectively the actual cure of souls, from and after the death or removal of the present vicars of Ramoan and Billy respectively; and that each of the said several and respective rectories, when so disappropriated, shall, with its respective vicarage, form one parish and benefice: and whereas it will also be highly beneficial to the said church establishment, that the said rectory of Dunluce shall be disappropriated and disunited from the said precentorship; and that from and after the death or removal of the said Richard Symes, the present precentor, the said rectory and rectorial tithes of Dunluce shall be united and annexed to the vicarage of Dunluce, and be vested in the vicars of Dunluce, so as that the rectory and vicarage of Dunluce shall together form one parish and benefice with cure of souls; leaving as the corps of the said precentorship the rectory or parish of Ballymoney only: and whereas the said Richard Mant, Lord Bishop of Down and Connor, the patron of the said chancellorship, archdeaconry, and precentorship of the diocese of Connor, and of all and every the vicarages hereinbefore mentioned, has consented that the before-mentioned objects shall be carried into effect; but the same cannot be attained or effected without the aid and authority of parliament: may it therefore please your majesty, upon the petition of the Right Reverend Richard Mant, patron, and the humble petition of the Reverend William Trail, chancellor, the Reverend Anthony Trail, archdeacon, the Reverend Richard Symes, precentor, and the several persons therein named, vicars of the said several parishes hereinbefore mentioned, that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellor of the said diocese of Connor, shall, from and immediately after the death or removal of the said William Trail, the present chancellor, be and for ever afterwards shall remain vested in the vicar of the said parish of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, and the rectorial tithes thereof, shall from such the death or removal of the said William Trail, and for ever afterwards, be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, and annexed and united to the vicarage of the said parish of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, when so disappropriated, shall with its vicarage form one parish and benefice.

"II. And be it further enacted, that the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellor of the said diocese of Connor, shall, from and immediately after the death or removal of the said William Trail, be and for ever afterwards shall remain vested in the vicar of the said parish of Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, and the rectorial tithes thereof, shall, from such the death or removal of the said William Trail, and for ever afterwards, be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, and annexed and united to the vicarage of the said parish of Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, when so disappropriated, shall with its vicarage form one parish and benefice.

"III. And be it further enacted, that the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Calfeightron otherwise Cufaghtrin, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellor of the said diocese of Connor, shall, from and immediately after the death or removal of the said William Trail, be and for ever afterwards shall remain vested in the vicar of the said parish of Calfeightron; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, and the rectorial tithes thereof, shall, from such the death or removal of the said William Trail, and for ever afterwards, be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, and annexed and united to the vicarage of the said parish of Calfeightron, otherwise Cufaghtrin; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, when so disappropriated, shall with its vicarage form one parish and benefice.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Loughgule otherwise Loughgeel, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellor of the said diocese of Connor, shall, from and immediately after the death or removal of the said William Trail, be and for ever afterwards shall remain

"An Act for separating the Parish or Vicarage of Bray from the Parish of Kilternan, and for uniting the said Parish of Kilternan with the Parish of Kilgobban, situate in the Barony of Rathdown and County of Dublin, in Ireland."

Parish of Kilternan united with the parish of Bray.

"Whereas the parish of Kilternan, in the county and diocese of Dublin, has been episcopally united to and forms a part of the parish or union of Bray, in the county of Wicklow, and is situated at a considerable and inconvenient distance, the nearest part being four miles, and other parts six miles, from the parish church of Bray, the only church of the said union; and it is therefore expedient that the said parish should be separated and disunited from the parish or vicarage of Bray; and whereas the said parish of Kilternan adjoins to the parish of Kilgobban, in the county and diocese of Dublin, and the glebe lands and glebe house of the perpetual curate or minister of the said parish of Kilgobban are situated within the bounds and limits of the said parish of Kilternan: and whereas there is not any church in the said parish of Kilternan, and the church of the said parish of Kilgobban is small and inconvenient, and much out of repair, and wholly incapable of accommodating the protestant inhabitants of the parish of Kilgobban, and cannot be enlarged or repaired by reason of the decay of its walls, and of its local situation; and the inhabitants of the said parish of Kilgobban, comprehending a poor and mountainous district, are unable to contribute to the rebuilding of the said church of Kilgobban: and whereas the respective inhabitants of the said parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban, with the consent and approbation of his grace the now Lord Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough, the patron of the said parish or vicarage of Kilternan; the Honourable and Reverend Charles Knox, the incumbent of the said parish or union of Bray; the Reverend Henry Kearney, perpetual curate of the said parish or cure of Kilgobban; and the Venerable John Torrens, the Archdeacon of Dublin, who is entitled in right of his archdeaconry to nominate the perpetual curate of the said parish of Kilgobban, are desirous that the said parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban should be united and made one entire parish, to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan;' and that a new church shall be forthwith erected and built on the glebe lands aforesaid, convenient to and capable of accommodating the inhabitants of the said parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban; the said Henry Kearney, the present curate of Kilgobban, and the said Archdeacon of Dublin, first conveying a sufficient quantity of the said glebe land for the site of a church and churchyard to the churchwardens of the said parish to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan,' and their successors, churchwardens for ever, of the said parish, for the use of the said parish: and whereas the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of the several benefices in Ireland have lately granted the sum of nine hundred pounds for building a church in the said parish of Kilternan, wherein there has not been any church for the performance of divine worship for upwards of twenty years last past: and whereas Elizabeth Anderson and Susan Anderson, spinsters, have proposed and agreed to grant and convey to the vicar or incumbent of the said parish, to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan,' for ever, for the use of the said vicar or incumbent and his successors, other ground equal in quality and quantity to that which may be so assigned and allowed for the site of the said intended new church: and whereas by reason that the said parish or curacy of Kilgobban is not a presentative benefice, the perpetual union of the said last-mentioned parish or cure, with the said vicarage or parish of Kilternan, cannot be effected without the aid and authority of parliament: for that purpose be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and immediately after the first day of July next, the said parish of Kilternan shall be for ever separated and disunited from the said parish, or union, or vicarage of Bray, and that the said two parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban shall be for ever thereafter united and be and become one entire parish or vicarage and presentative benefice, to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan;' and that the Reverend Henry Kearney, the present curate or incumbent of the said parish of Kilgobban, shall be the first and modern incumbent or vicar of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, without any presentation, admission, institution, or induction, or any other act or title whatsoever other than this present act; and that the present churchwardens of the said parish of Kilgobban shall be the first churchwardens of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, as fully as if they had been duly elected as such by the inhabitants of the said united parishes in vestry duly assembled.

Parish of Kilternan shall be disunited from Bray, and united with Kilgobban into one parish

"II. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Archdeacon of Dublin, and the said present curate or incumbent of the now parish of Kilgobban, to convey, without licence or mortmain, to the churchwardens of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, and to their successors for ever, such part of the glebe land now belonging to the said parish of Kilgobban, as may be necessary for the site of a church and of a churchyard, for the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, not exceeding in the whole one half acre of ground; and the same, when so conveyed, shall be vested in the said churchwardens and their successors for ever, for the purposes of this act.

"III. Provided always, that the said Elizabeth Anderson and Susan Anderson, their heirs and assigns, shall first grant and convey to the said vicar or incumbent of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan and his successors, a piece of land adjoining to the said glebe lands equal in quantity to the piece of land so as aforesaid to be allocated for the site of the said intended church or churchyard, for the use of the incumbent, from time to time for the time being, of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, and his successors for ever; and it shall be lawful for the vicar or incumbent of the said parish of Kilternan and his successors, to have and to hold the said piece of land so to be granted and conveyed, any statute or mortmain, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding, freed and discharged from the payment of all rent whatsoever, save and except that such land so granted and conveyed shall be held and deemed and taken as a part and parcel of all such glebe lands as aforesaid, and shall in common therewith be liable and subject to all and every such rent, covenants, and clauses, as such glebe lands are now liable and subject to, as if the same had been originally a part of such glebe lands, and not further or otherwise.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that the said church, when built, together with the churchyard, shall be consecrated, and shall be and shall be deemed and taken for ever to be the parish church of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and shall be called, 'The Parish Church of Kilternan;' and the old churchyard and place where the said old church of Kilgobban stands shall, at the charge of the parishioners of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, be fenced in and preserved from profane or common uses.

"V. And whereas the right of patronage and presentation to the vicarage or parish of Kilternan hath heretofore of right belonged to the Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough and his successors, in right of his archbishopric; and the right of nomination or presentation to the perpetual curacy or parish of Kilgobban aforesaid, hath heretofore of right belonged to the Archdeacon of Dublin and his successors; and it is therefore proper and necessary to settle and ascertain how and by which of them the said archbishop and archdeacon, and how often and in what turns, the patronage and right of presentation to the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan should henceforth be by them exercised and enjoyed; and whereas the tithes and profits payable and arising to the curate of Kilgobban are of considerably greater value than the tithes and profits issuing and payable out of the vicarage of Kilternan; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the first day of July next, the Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough, and his successors, Archbishops of Dublin and Bishops of Glandelough for ever, shall have one turn of presentation to the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, out of every three turns; that is to say, the said Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough, and his successors, Archbishops of Dublin and Bishops of Glandelough, shall present a vicar or incumbent to the said church

"II. And be it further enacted, that all marriages which may hereafter be had in Newfoundland shall be celebrated by persons in holy orders, except in the cases hereinafter specially excepted and provided for.

"III. And whereas by reason of the great extent of the said island of Newfoundland, and the want of internal communication between the different parts of the said island during the greater part of the year, difficulties have arisen with respect to the solemnization of marriages in various settlements and stations there; and it is expedient that temporary provision be made for the legal solemnization of marriages in such settlements or stations as aforesaid; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, or for the governor or acting governor for the time being of the colony of Newfoundland, to grant licences or a licence to celebrate marriages within the said colony or its dependencies, to any person or persons who shall employ themselves or himself solely in the duties of a teacher or preacher of religion in the said colony, and who shall not follow or engage in any trade or business, or other profession, occupation, or employment, for their or his livelihood, except that of a schoolmaster: provided always, that no such licence as aforesaid shall be granted to any such persons or person as aforesaid, unless they or he shall first have taken the oath and subscribed the declaration specified in an act passed in the fifty-second year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to repeal certain Acts and amend other Acts relating to Religious Worship and Assemblies, and Persons teaching or preaching therein,' and shall have produced a certificate thereof to his majesty's said principal secretary of state, or to the governor or acting governor of Newfoundland, as the case may be; or unless such persons or person shall take the said oath and subscribe the said declaration before the governor or acting governor of the said colony, who is hereby authorized and required to administer such oath and to tender such declaration to the persons or person requiring to take and make and subscribe the same.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any person, to whom any such licence as aforesaid shall be granted in manner aforesaid, to celebrate marriages between any persons resident in the said colony of Newfoundland or its dependencies, in any case where, by reason of the difficulty of the internal communication between different parts of the said colony or its dependencies, the woman about to be married could not, without inconvenience, repair from her ordinary place of abode, for the purpose of contracting such marriage, to some church or chapel of or belonging to the established church of England wherein divine service is regularly performed; and if any such person as aforesaid shall celebrate any marriage by virtue of any such licence as aforesaid, in any case wherein such inconvenience as aforesaid shall not exist, the person so offending shall incur and become liable to the payment of a fine not less than ten pounds, nor more than fifty pounds British sterling money, and shall forfeit and be deprived of such his licence: provided nevertheless, that every marriage actually celebrated within the said colony or its dependencies by any person having any such licence as aforesaid shall be good and valid to all intents and purposes, and shall not be rendered invalid by reason of any such illegality as aforesaid on the part of the person celebrating the same.

“V. And be it further enacted, that no such person to whom any such licence may be so granted as aforesaid shall celebrate or perform marriage between any persons in Newfoundland, except in the presence of two credible witnesses; and if any such person shall celebrate or perform any marriage between any persons in Newfoundland, except in the presence of two credible witnesses, he shall incur and become liable to the payment of a fine not less than ten pounds, nor more than fifty pounds British sterling money; but the want of such witnesses shall not invalidate the marriage.

“VI. And be it further enacted, that every person by whom any marriage shall be celebrated or performed in Newfoundland at any time after the twenty-fifth day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five, shall, under the penalty of five pounds British sterling money, within twelve calendar months next following such marriage, deliver or cause to be delivered to the secretary of the governor or acting governor of the said island, or to the incumbent or officiating minister of some church or chapel of the established church of England, in the towns of Saint John's Harbour, Grace in Conception Bay, or Trinity Harbour in Trinity Bay, in the said island, a certificate thereof in writing, subscribed with his own name, and with the names or marks of the parties married, together with the names of two credible witnesses present at such marriages; and every such certificate shall be made in form following; (that is to say),

“‘ Marriage solemnized at _____ in the Island of Newfoundland:

Billy are of the present annual value of two hundred pounds or thereabouts; and the said vicarage of Ballyclug, the vicarial tithes whereof do not exceed in value twenty-two pounds yearly, has been and is episcopally united to the impropriate curacy of Ballynnena, in the said county of Antrim, under one incumbent, the yearly value of which last-mentioned union, including an augmentation from Primate Boulter's fund, does not now exceed eighty-four pounds yearly; and the vicarages of the said parishes of Donegore and Kilbride are episcopally united under one incumbent, and the value of the said last-mentioned union does not exceed three hundred pounds a year; and the annual value of the vicarage of the said parish of Dunluce is one hundred pounds or thereabouts; and the annual value of the said several and respective rectories of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan, Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane, Calfeightron, Loughgule, Ramoan, Teckmacrevan otherwise Glenarm, Armoy, Billy, Ballyclug, Donegore, Kilbride, Ballymoney, and Dunluce, are as follows; that is to say, Milltown otherwise Ballywellan, three hundred pounds or thereabouts; Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane, three hundred and fifty pounds or thereabouts; Calfeightron, four hundred pounds or thereabouts; Loughgule, four hundred pounds or thereabouts; Ramoan, four hundred pounds or thereabouts; Teckmacrevan otherwise Glenarm, from seventy pounds to one hundred pounds or thereabouts; Armoy, one hundred and sixty pounds or thereabouts; Billy, three hundred and thirty pounds or thereabouts; Ballyclug, one hundred pounds or thereabouts; Donegore, two hundred and fifty pounds or thereabouts; Kilbride, two hundred and fifty pounds or thereabouts; Ballymoney, one thousand two hundred pounds or thereabouts; and Dunluce, two hundred pounds or thereabouts: and whereas the Lord Bishop of Down and Connor for the time being is the patron, not only of the aforesaid chancellorship, archdeaconry, and precentorship, but of all and every the vicarages hereinbefore mentioned: and whereas it will be highly beneficial to the church establishment of that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, that the rectorial tithes of all the said several and respective parishes or rectories, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, save and except the said rectory or parish of Ramoan, shall be vested in the respective vicars of the said parishes (save as aforesaid) from and after the death or removal of the said William Trail, the present chancellor; and for that purpose, that the said last-mentioned rectories and rectorial tithes, save as aforesaid, shall be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellors of the said cathedral church, and annexed and united to the vicarages of the said respective last mentioned to be disappropriated parishes or rectories, from and after the death or removal of the said William Trail, the present chancellor; and that in like manner the rectorial tithes of all and singular the said parishes or rectories so as aforesaid appropriate and belonging to the said archdeaconry (save and except the said parish of Billy) shall be vested in the respective vicars of and within the said respective last-mentioned parishes (except as aforesaid), from and after the death or removal of the said Anthony Trail, the present archdeacon of the said diocese; and for that purpose that all the said rectories and rectorial tithes, so as aforesaid appropriated and belonging to the said archdeaconry (save the said parish of Billy), shall be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the archdeacons of the said diocese of Connor, and for ever annexed and united to the vicarages of and within the said last mentioned to be disappropriated parishes or rectories, from and after the death or removal of the said Anthony Trail, the present archdeacon; and that the said vicarage of Ramoan shall be reunited to the rectory of the same parish, and so appropriated to the said chancellorship, and that the vicarage of Billy shall be reunited to the rectory of the same parish of Billy, and be so appropriated to the said archdeaconry; thus vesting in the chancellors and archdeacons respectively the actual cure of souls, from and after the death or removal of the present vicars of Ramoan and Billy respectively; and that each of the said several and respective rectories, when so disappropriated, shall, with its respective vicarage, form one parish and benefice: and whereas it will also be highly beneficial to the said church establishment, that the said rectory of Dunluce shall be disappropriated and disunited from the said precentorship; and that from and after the death or removal of the said Richard Symes, the present precentor, the said rectory and rectorial tithes of Dunluce shall be united and annexed to the vicarage of Dunluce, and be vested in the vicars of Dunluce, so as that the rectory and vicarage of Dunluce shall together form one parish and benefice with cure of souls; leaving as the corps of the said precentorship the rectory or parish of Ballymoney only: and whereas the said Richard Mant, Lord Bishop of Down and Connor, the patron of the said chancellorship, archdeaconry, and precentorship of the diocese of Connor, and of all and every the vicarages hereinbefore mentioned, has consented that the before-mentioned objects shall be carried into effect; but the same cannot be attained or effected without the aid and authority of parliament: may it therefore please your majesty, upon the petition of the Right Reverend Richard Mant, patron, and the humble petition of the Reverend William Trail, chancellor, the Reverend Anthony Trail, archdeacon, the Reverend Richard Symes, precentor, and the several persons therein named, vicars of the said several parishes hereinbefore mentioned, that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellor of the said diocese of Connor, shall, from and immediately after the death or removal of the said William Trail, the present chancellor, be and for ever afterwards shall remain vested in the vicar of the said parish of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, and the rectorial tithes thereof, shall from such the death or removal of the said William Trail, and for ever afterwards, be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, and annexed and united to the vicarage of the said parish of Milltown otherwise Ballywellan; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, when so disappropriated, shall with its vicarage form one parish and benefice.

"II. And be it further enacted, that the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellor of the said diocese of Connor, shall, from and immediately after the death or removal of the said William Trail, be and for ever afterwards shall remain vested in the vicar of the said parish of Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, and the rectorial tithes thereof, shall, from such the death or removal of the said William Trail, and for ever afterwards, be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, and annexed and united to the vicarage of the said parish of Saint Johnstown otherwise Siginstown otherwise Ballyrashane; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, when so disappropriated, shall with its vicarage form one parish and benefice.

"III. And be it further enacted, that the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Calfeightron otherwise Cufaghtrin, so as aforesaid appropriated to the chancellor of the said diocese of Connor, shall, from and immediately after the death or removal of the said William Trail, be and for ever afterwards shall remain vested in the vicar of the said parish of Calfeightron; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, and the rectorial tithes thereof, shall, from such the death or removal of the said William Trail, and for ever afterwards, be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the chancellorship of the said cathedral church of Connor, and annexed and united to the vicarage of the said parish of Calfeightron, otherwise Cufaghtrin; and that the said last-mentioned rectory, when so disappropriated, shall with its vicarage form one parish and benefice.

"An Act for separating the Parish or Vicarage of Bray from the Parish of Kilternan, and for uniting the said Parish of Kilternan with the Parish of Kilgobban, situate in the Barony of Rathdown and County of Dublin, in Ireland."

"Whereas the parish of Kilternan, in the county and diocese of Dublin, has been episcopally united to and forms a part of the parish or union of Bray, in the county of Wicklow, and is situated at a considerable and inconvenient distance, the nearest part being four miles, and other parts six miles, from the parish church of Bray, the only church of the said union; and it is therefore expedient that the said parish should be separated and disunited from the parish or vicarage of Bray: and whereas the said parish of Kilternan adjoins to the parish of Kilgobban, in the county and diocese of Dublin, and the glebe lands and glebe house of the perpetual curate or minister of the said parish of Kilgobban are situated within the bounds and limits of the said parish of Kilternan: and whereas there is not any church in the said parish of Kilternan, and the church of the said parish of Kilgobban is small and inconvenient, and much out of repair, and wholly incapable of accommodating the protestant inhabitants of the parish of Kilgobban, and cannot be enlarged or repaired by reason of the decay of its walls, and of its local situation; and the inhabitants of the said parish of Kilgobban, comprehending a poor and mountainous district, are unable to contribute to the rebuilding of the said church of Kilgobban: and whereas the respective inhabitants of the said parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban, with the consent and approbation of his grace the now Lord Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough, the patron of the said parish or vicarage of Kilternan; the Honourable and Reverend Charles Knox, the incumbent of the said parish or union of Bray; the Reverend Henry Kearney, perpetual curate of the said parish or cure of Kilgobban; and the Venerable John Torrens, the Archdeacon of Dublin, who is entitled in right of his archdeaconry to nominate the perpetual curate of the said parish of Kilgobban, are desirous that the said parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban should be united and made one entire parish, to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan;' and that a new church shall be forthwith erected and built on the glebe lands aforesaid, convenient to and capable of accommodating the inhabitants of the said parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban; the said Henry Kearney, the present curate of Kilgobban, and the said Archdeacon of Dublin, first conveying a sufficient quantity of the said glebe land for the site of a church and churchyard to the churchwardens of the said parish to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan,' and their successors, churchwardens for ever, of the said parish, for the use of the said parish: and whereas the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of the several benefices in Ireland have lately granted the sum of nine hundred pounds for building a church in the said parish of Kilternan, wherein there has not been any church for the performance of divine worship for upwards of twenty years last past: and whereas Elizabeth Anderson and Susan Anderson, spinsters, have proposed and agreed to grant and convey to the vicar or incumbent of the said parish, to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan,' for ever, for the use of the said vicar or incumbent and his successors, other ground equal in quality and quantity to that which may be so assigned and allowed for the site of the said intended new church: and whereas by reason that the said parish or curacy of Kilgobban is not a presentative benefice, the perpetual union of the said last-mentioned parish or cure, with the said vicarage or parish of Kilternan, cannot be effected without the aid and authority of parliament: for that purpose be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and immediately after the first day of July next, the said parish of Kilternan shall be for ever separated and disunited from the said parish, or union, or vicarage of Bray, and that the said two parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban shall be for ever thereafter united and be and become one entire parish or vicarage and presentative benefice, to be called 'The Parish of Kilternan;' and that the Reverend Henry Kearney, the present curate or incumbent of the said parish of Kilgobban, shall be the first and modern incumbent or vicar of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, without any presentation, admission, institution, or induction, or any other act or title whatsoever other than this present act; and that the present churchwardens of the said parish of Kilgobban shall be the first churchwardens of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, as fully as if they had been duly elected as such by the inhabitants of the said united parishes in vestry duly assembled.

Union of the parishes of Kilternan and Kilgobban desired by the inhabitants, with a new church.

“II. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Archdeacon of Dublin, and the said present curate or incumbent of the now parish of Kilgobban, to convey, without licence or mortmain, to the churchwardens of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, and to their successors for ever, such part of the glebe land now belonging to the said parish of Kilgobban, as may be necessary for the site of a church and of a churchyard, for the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, not exceeding in the whole one half acre of ground; and the same, when so conveyed, shall be vested in the said churchwardens and their successors for ever, for the purposes of this act.

“III. Provided always, that the said Elizabeth Anderson and Susan Anderson, their heirs and assigns, shall first grant and convey to the said vicar or incumbent of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan and his successors, a piece of land adjoining to the said glebe lands equal in quantity to the piece of land so as aforesaid to be allocated for the site of the said intended church or churchyard, for the use of the incumbent, from time to time for the time being, of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, and his successors for ever; and it shall be lawful for the vicar or incumbent of the said parish of Kilternan and his successors, to have and to hold the said piece of land so to be granted and conveyed, any statute or mortmain, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding, freed and discharged from the payment of all rent whatsoever, save and except that such land so granted and conveyed shall be held and deemed and taken as a part and parcel of all such glebe lands as aforesaid, and shall in common therewith be liable and subject to all and every such rent, covenants, and clauses, as such glebe lands are now liable and subject to, as if the same had been originally a part of such glebe lands, and not further or otherwise.

“IV. And be it further enacted, that the said church, when built, together with the churchyard, shall be consecrated, and shall be and shall be deemed and taken for ever to be the parish church of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and shall be called, ‘The Parish Church of Kilternan;’ and the old churchyard and place where the said old church of Kilgobban stands shall, at the charge of the parishioners of the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, be fenced in and preserved from profane or common uses.

“V. And whereas the right of patronage and presentation to the vicarage or parish of Kilternan hath heretofore of right belonged to the Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough and his successors, in right of his archbishopric; and the right of nomination or presentation to the perpetual curacy or parish of Kilgobban aforesaid, hath heretofore of right belonged to the Archdeacon of Dublin and his successors; and it is therefore proper and necessary to settle and ascertain how and by which of them the said archbishop and archdeacon, and how often and in what turns, the patronage and right of presentation to the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan should henceforth be by them exercised and enjoyed; and whereas the tithes and profits payable and arising to the curate of Kilgobban are of considerably greater value than the tithes and profits issuing and payable out of the vicarage of Kilternan; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the first day of July next, the Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough, and his successors, Archbishops of Dublin and Bishops of Glandelough for ever, shall have one turn of presentation to the said hereby created union or parish of Kilternan, out of every three turns; that is to say, the said Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glandelough, and his successors, Archbishops of Dublin and Bishops of Glandelough, shall present a vicar or incumbent to the said church of Kilternan, on the first vacancy that shall occur after the first day of July next; and afterwards, on the two vacancies which shall next occur, that is, on the second and third vacancies, the said archdeacon and his successors for the time being shall present to the said united church, and so on for ever thereafter.

Churchwardens of Bray may levy arrears of church rates now due on parish of Kilternan.

“VI. Provided always, and be it enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the churchwardens of the parish of Bray, at any time after the first day of July next, to collect, sue for, levy, recover, and receive all church cesses and rates which shall have been duly assessed and apportioned on the said parish of Kilternan at any time before the passing of this act, and which shall remain due and unpaid at the time of the passing of this act, in like manner, and with all such powers and authorities, as if this act had not been made; anything in this act contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

“VII. And whereas by an act made in the parliament of Ireland, in the second year of the reign of King George the First, intituled, ‘An Act for the real Union and Division of Parishes,’ it is (among other things) enacted, that all acts of parliament for the uniting or disuniting of particular parishes or parts of parishes, or erecting particular churches, shall be deemed as public and general acts in all courts, and by all persons; and that no fees shall be paid or taken by any person or persons for passing any such act of parliament: and whereas it is expedient that a like provision should be made in this case; be it therefore enacted, that this present act is and shall be deemed a public and general act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such in all courts, and by all judges, justices, and others, without being specially pleaded; and that no fees shall be paid or taken by any person or persons for the passing the same.”

“An Act for the Relief in certain cases of the Incumbents of Ecclesiastical Livings or Benefices mortgaged for building, rebuilding, repairing, or purchasing Houses and other necessary Buildings and Tenements for such Benefices.”

17 Geo. 3, c. 53.

21 Geo. 3, c. 66.

“Whereas under and by virtue of an act of parliament made in the seventeenth year of the reign of his majesty King George the Third, intituled, ‘An Act to promote the Residence of the Parochial Clergy, by making Provision for the more speedy and effectual building, rebuilding, repairing, or purchasing Houses and other necessary Buildings and Tenements for the Use of their Benefices;’ and another act made in the twenty-first year of his said majesty’s reign, to explain and amend the said act; many mortgages of ecclesiastical livings and benefices have been made, and are still remaining in force, as securities for monies borrowed for building, rebuilding, repairing, or purchasing houses and other necessary buildings and tenements for such benefices; and in most cases the sums of money borrowed on such mortgages have been to the full amount authorized by the said acts, that is to say, two years’ net income and produce of the said respective livings or benefices, estimated at or previous to the execution of such several mortgages in the manner by the said acts directed; and the incumbents of the said respective livings or benefices are liable, according to the directions of the said acts, to pay five pounds per centum per annum of the principal monies so borrowed; or in case such incumbents shall not reside twenty weeks in each year upon such livings or benefices, then instead of five pounds per cent. to pay ten pounds per cent. per annum of the said principal monies, over and above the interest arising upon such mortgages, until the whole principal monies and interest shall be fully paid and discharged: and whereas great reduction has taken place in the income and produce of many livings or benefices mortgaged by virtue of the said acts since the respective mortgages thereof were made, whereby it happens that the yearly payments in discharge of the monies borrowed on such mortgages, which the incumbents of the said livings or benefices are liable to pay, amount to a larger proportion of the present income and produce thereof than it was contemplated or intended that they should be liable to pay according to the directions of the said acts; and it is just and expedient that such provision be made for the relief of incumbents of livings or benefices already mortgaged by virtue of the said acts as hereinafter is expressed: be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for the incumbent of every living or benefice mortgaged before the passing of this act, under or by virtue of the said former acts, for the amount of two years' net income and produce thereof, to lay before the ordinary of such living or benefice a just and particular account in writing, signed by such incumbent, and verified upon his oath, taken before some justice of the peace or master in Chancery, ordinary or extraordinary, (which oath every justice of the peace and every master in Chancery is hereby empowered to administer,) of the income or produce of such living or benefice at the time of stating such account thereof, and of all rents, stipends, taxes, and other outgoings therefrom, excepting only the salary to the assistant curate, where such a curate is necessary; and it shall and may be lawful for the ordinary thereupon to cause an inquiry to be made by the archdeacon, chancellor of the diocese, or other proper persons resident within or near the limits of such living or benefice, of the truth of the said account, and the result of the said inquiry to be certified by such archdeacon, chancellor, or other persons; and the incumbent of such living or benefice, and the mortgagee or mortgagees thereof, may and they are hereby empowered, with the consent of the ordinary and patron of such living or benefice, to agree that the yearly payments in discharge of the principal money secured by the mortgage of such living or benefice, and to become due after such agreement, shall be made at the rate of five pounds per centum or ten pounds per centum per annum, as the case may require, according to the directions of the said former acts and this act, of the sum which two years' net income and produce of the said living or benefice shall appear to amount unto according to the account thereof laid before and the certificate returned to the ordinary as herein mentioned; and every such agreement shall be valid and effectual; and the mortgage made of every such living or benefice shall be and remain in force as a security for the yearly payments thereby agreed to be made, as well as for the payment of the interest arising on such mortgage, and with all the powers and remedies for enforcing the same given by the said former acts, until the money borrowed and all interest for the same, and also all costs and charges which shall be occasioned by the nonpayment thereof, shall be fully paid and discharged, in like manner as if such yearly payments had been expressly mentioned in and secured by the said mortgage, the expiration of the term of years granted by the said mortgage or any other cause or matter whatsoever notwithstanding.

(1) Vide Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23 & 29; Stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, ss. 14 & 17; and Stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 26.

"II. And be it further enacted, that every agreement which shall be entered into by virtue of this act shall be in writing, in the form in the schedule to this act set forth, or to that effect, under the hands of the ordinary, patron, incumbent, and mortgagee or mortgagees of the living or benefice to which the same shall relate, or the common seal of such of them as shall be a body corporate aggregate; and in case the patronage of any such living or benefice shall be in the crown, or the patron of any such living or benefice shall happen to be a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert, such agreement shall be signed by such persons as by the said former acts are empowered in the like case to consent to the proceedings thereby authorized; and in case any such agreement shall relate to any chapelry or perpetual cure, the incumbent whereof shall be nominated by the rector or vicar of the parish, in every such case such rector or vicar shall be required to be a party to the agreement so to be made, together with the patron of the rectory or vicarage.

"III. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy, to make and enter into such agreements as hereinbefore are authorized, with respect to all or any of the mortgages made to the said governors by virtue of the said former acts, if it shall appear to the said governors to be fit

And be it further enacted, that in case any incumbent of any living or benefice mortgaged or to be mortgaged by virtue of the said former acts, who shall not reside twenty weeks in any year upon such living or benefice, shall have been non-resident in the same year by licence of the bishop of the diocese within which such living or benefice shall be locally situate, granted by reason or on account of any actual illness or infirmity of mind or body of such incumbent, or of his wife or child, making part of and residing with him as part of his family, such incumbent shall for every year in which he shall be non-resident by such licence, pay to the mortgagee or mortgagees of his living or benefice the like sum as he would have been liable to pay by virtue of the said former acts, or any agreement made under the powers of this act, in case he had resided twenty weeks in the same year upon his said living or benefice, and no other or greater sum; provided that every such incumbent at the time of making such payment, or some person on his behalf, shall deliver to the mortgagee or mortgagees a certificate under the hand of such bishop, that such incumbent was non-resident, in the year for which such payment shall be made, by the licence of the said bishop, granted for some or one of the causes hereinbefore mentioned, to be specified in the said certificate.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy, at any time or times after the passing of this act, to reduce the rate of the interest secured to them by any mortgage or mortgages heretofore made to them under the authority of the said former acts, and thereafter to become due to such rate or rates, as to them shall appear just and reasonable."

"THE SCHEDULE TO WHICH THE ACT REFERS.

"Form of Agreement.

"Whereas in the year _____ the Rev. A. B., clerk, rector [vicar or curate] of the parish church [or curacy or chapelry] of _____ in the county of _____ and the diocese of the Bishop of _____ and under the jurisdiction of the said bishop [or such other ecclesiastical person or corporation as shall be ordinary], as ordinary, by virtue and pursuant to the directions of an act of parliament passed in the seventeenth year of the reign of his majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to promote the Residence of the Parochial Clergy, by making Provision for the more speedy and effectual building, rebuilding, repairing, or purchasing Houses and other necessary Buildings and Tenements for the Use of their Benefices,' obtained the consent of the said ordinary, and of the patron of the said church [or curacy or chapelry], to borrow and take up at interest, on mortgage of the glebe, tithes, and emoluments of the said living, the sum of pounds, being the amount of two years' net income and produce of the said living, as then estimated and proved in the manner by the said act directed : and the said sum of pounds was advanced by C. D., and a mortgage of the glebe, tithes, and emoluments of the said living, by indenture bearing date the day of was duly made and executed to him for securing the repayment thereof, with interest at the rate of pounds per centum per annum, by yearly payments, according to the directions of the said act, and of another act passed in the twenty-first year of his said majesty's reign, to explain and amend the same : and whereas the several yearly payments which have become due upon the said mortgage, up to and including the day of last, together with all interest arising upon the said mortgage to that time, have been discharged, and there now remains due on the security of the said mortgage, the principal sum of pounds, with interest thereon, from the said day of [If the incumbent entering into the agreement is a successor of him who made the mortgage, or the mortgagee is representative or assignee of him to whom the mortgage was made, the facts are to be here stated in proper recitals, and the proper parties are to be named in the subsequent parts of the agreement instead of the parties to the mortgage]: and whereas the said A. B., pursuant to the directions of an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his majesty King George the Fourth, intituled [set forth the title of this act], has laid before the ordinary of the said living a just and particular account in writing, signed by him, and verified as by the said last-mentioned act is required, of the present income or produce of the said living, and of the outgoings therefrom ; and the said ordinary has caused inquiry to be made of the truth of the said account, and the result of the said inquiry to be certified to him as by the said act required ; and according to the said account and the certificate returned to the said ordinary, the net income and produce of the said living appears now to amount to the sum of pounds, and therefore two years' net income and produce thereof will amount to the sum of and no more : and whereas the said C. D. is willing to accept such reduced yearly payments in discharge of the principal money remaining due on the said mortgage, as by the said last-mentioned act authorized and hereinafter mentioned : now it is hereby agreed by and between the said A. B. and C. D., with the consent of the said ordinary and of the patron [or patrons] of the said church, [or of the rector or vicar of the parish church of who is entitled to the nomination of the curate of the said curacy or chapelry of and the patron of the said parish church ; or if any other person or persons shall according to the act be required to act for the patron, such person or persons shall be named, with a proper description], testified by the said ordinary and patron signing this agreement ; [or if either of them shall be a body corporate aggregate, then by the said ordinary (or patron) signing, and the said patrons (or ordinary) causing their common seal to be affixed to this agreement]; and by virtue of the powers of the said last-mentioned act of parliament, that the yearly payments in discharge of the said sum of pounds remaining due on the said mortgage as aforesaid, shall be made at the rate of five pounds per cent. or ten pounds per cent. as the case may require, according to the directions of the said several acts of parliament, of the said sum of pounds, the amount of two years' net income and produce of the said living, according to the late account and certificate hereinbefore mentioned ; and the said mortgage of the said living is, pursuant to and by virtue of the said last-mentioned act, to be and remain in force as a security for the yearly payments hereby agreed to be made, as well as for payment of the interest arising on the said mortgage, and with all the powers and remedies for enforcing the same given by the said first-mentioned act, until the money borrowed on the said mortgage, and all interest for the same, and also all costs and charges which shall be occasioned by the non-payment thereof, shall be fully paid and discharged. "Whereas several acts were passed in the parliament of Ireland, that is to say; one act in the thirty-sixth year of the reign of his majesty King Henry the Sixth, intituled, 'An Act that beneficed Persons shall keep Residence;' one other act in the tenth and eleventh years of the reign of his majesty King Charles the First, intituled, 'An Act to enable Restitutions of Improvements and Tithes, and other Rights Ecclesiastical, to the Clergy, with a Restraint of aliening the same, and Directions for Presentation to the Churches;' one other act in the sixth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the First, intituled, 'An Act for the better Maintenance of Curates within the Church of Ireland;' one other act in the first year of the reign of his majesty King George the Second, for explaining and amending the said act of the sixth year of King George the First, for the better maintenance of curates within the church of Ireland; and one other act in the fortieth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act for the further Support and Maintenance of Curates within the Church of Ireland:' and whereas an act was passed in the parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the forty-eighth year of the reign of his said late majesty, intituled, 'An Act for enforcing the Residence of Spiritual Persons on their Benefices in Ireland;' and whereas doubts have arisen upon the construction of some of the provisions of the said acts, and it is therefore necessary that such provisions of the said acts should be explained, and other provisions made, and that the several laws for enforcing of residence, and the maintenance of stipendiary curates, in Ireland, should be amended; and that spiritual persons in Ireland should in certain cases be restrained from buying and selling: may it therefore please your majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act, the said recited act passed in the reign of his majesty King Henry the Sixth, and so much of the said recited act of his majesty King Charles the First, as relates to gifts, grants, alienations, forfeitures, charges, and incumbrances, imposed, laid, or suffered, by any minister or other beneficer therein mentioned, or by any person, vicar, or other beneficer having cure of souls, and to residence of spiritual persons on their benefices; and also so much of the said recited acts of the parliament of Ireland, made in the sixth year of King George the First, and in the first year of King George the Second, and in the fortieth year of King George the Third, as relates to the maintenance of curates within the church of Ireland, and making provisions for appointing stipends for such curates; and the whole of the said recited act passed in the forty-eighth year of the reign of King George the Third, shall be and the same are respectively hereby repealed.

"II. And be it further enacted, that no spiritual person having or holding any dignity, prebend, canonry, benefice, stipendiary, perpetual or impropriate curacy or lectureship, shall, by himself, or by any other for him, or to his use, act as treasurer of any county, or engage in or carry on any trade or dealing for gain or profit, or be an agent or factor for any estate, or deal in any goods, wares, or merchandize, by buying and selling for lucre, gain, or profit, in any market, fair, or other place, upon pain of forfeiting the value of the goods, wares, and merchandises by him, or by any to his use, bargained and bought to sell again, contrary to the provisions of this act; and that every bargain and contract so made by him, or by any to his use, in any such trade, or dealing, or agency, contrary to this act, shall be utterly void and of none effect; and the one half of every such forfeiture shall go to his majesty, and the other half to him that will sue for the same.

“ III. And be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained, in relation to being engaged in trade or dealing, or buying or selling, shall extend or be construed to extend to, or to subject to any penalty or forfeiture, any spiritual person for keeping a school or seminary, or acting as a schoolmaster, or tutor, or instructor, or being in any manner concerned or engaged in giving instruction or education for profit or reward, or for buying or selling, or doing any other act, matter, or thing in the conduct of, or carrying on, or in relation to the management of any such school, seminary, or employment; or to any spiritual person whatever for the buying of any goods, wares, or merchandizes, or articles or things of any description which shall, without fraud or covin, be bought to the intent and purpose, at the buying thereof, to be used and employed by the spiritual person buying the same for his family or in his household; and after the buying of any such goods, wares, or merchandizes, or articles or things, the selling the same again, or any parts thereof which such person may not want or choose to keep, although the same shall be sold at any advanced price beyond that which may have been given for the same, or for any buying or selling again for any lucre, gain, or profit, of any matter of cattle or corn, or other matters or things whatever, necessary, proper, or convenient to be bought, sold, kept, or maintained, by any spiritual person, or any other person for him, or to his use, for the occupation, manuring, improving, pasturage, or profit of any glebe, demesne, farms, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, which may be lawfully held and occupied, possessed and enjoyed, by such spiritual person, or any other for him or to his use: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to authorize any such spiritual person to sell any cattle or corn, or other matters or things as aforesaid, in person, in any market, fair, or place of public sale.

“ IV. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, every spiritual person holding any benefice who shall, without any such licence or exemption as is in this act allowed for that purpose, wilfully absent himself therefrom for any period exceeding the space of three months together, or to be accounted at several times in any one year, and make his residence and abiding at any other place or places, except at some other benefice, donative, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, of which he may be possessed, shall, when such absence shall exceed such period as aforesaid, and not exceed six months, forfeit and pay one-third of the annual value, (deducting therefrom all outgoings, except any stipend paid to any curate,) of the benefice, donative, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry from which he shall so absent himself as aforesaid; and when such absence shall exceed six months, and not exceed eight months, one half of such annual value; and when such absence shall exceed eight months, two thirds of such annual value; and when such absence shall have been for the whole of the year, three fourths of such annual value; to be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Dublin, wherein no essoin, privilege, protection, or wager of law, or more than one imparlance, shall be allowed; and the whole of every such penalty or forfeiture shall go and be paid to the person or persons who shall inform and sue for the same, together with such costs of suit as shall be allowed, according to the practice of the court in which such action shall be brought.

“ V. And be it further enacted, that every spiritual person having any benefice, and who shall not have any house of residence thereon, and who shall have resided nine months in the year within the limits of his benefice, or within the limits of the city, town, place, or parish, in which his benefice may be situated, provided such last-mentioned residence be within the distance of two miles from the church or chapel of his benefice, shall not be liable to any penalties on account of non-residence, nor be obliged to take out any licence in respect thereof, but that the same shall be deemed a legal residence to all intents and purposes of this act; and in all returns made by the bishops, persons so residing shall be returned as resident.

STAT. 5 GEO.

Provision for cases in which

"VI. And whereas the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of ecclesiastical benefices in Ireland, may have in some instances purchased, and may hereafter purchase, houses not situate within the parishes for which they are purchased, but so contiguous as to be sufficiently convenient and suitable for the residence of the officiating ministers thereof; be it therefore enacted, that such houses, having been previously approved by the bishop, by writing under his hand and seal, and duly registered in the registry of the diocese, shall be deemed houses of residence appertaining to such benefices, to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that in all cases of rectories having vicarages endowed, the residence of the vicar in the rectory house shall be deemed a legal residence to all intents and purposes whatever; provided that the vicarage house be kept in proper repair, to the satisfaction of the bishop.

"VIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop, in every case in which there shall not be a house of residence belonging to any benefice within his diocese, to allow and adjudge any fit house within the limits of such benefice and belonging thereto, or any fit house belonging thereto not within the limits, but so contiguous as to be sufficiently convenient for the purpose, to be the house of residence thereof; and such allowance and adjudication in writing under the hand and seal of such bishop, shall thereupon be registered in the registry of the diocese from time to time; and such house shall thenceforth be deemed the house of residence for the time being, to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

"IX. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to or in any manner to affect any person holding any of the offices or situations hereafter mentioned; that is to say, any master or preacher of any hospital or of any incorporated charitable foundation in Ireland, during the period for which he may be required to reside, by any charter or statute of any such hospital or incorporated charitable foundation, or by any other lawful authority in the same, and shall actually reside and perform the duties therein; or any vicar-general or principal surrogate, or official in any ecclesiastical court of any diocese, whilst they are respectively residing in the places where their respective offices are exercised; or any chaplain or chaplains of the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, provided that every such chaplain shall have a certificate from such lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors, or his or their chief secretary, that he is resident in Dublin, or near the person of such lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors, and is occupied by the duty of his office as such chaplain; or any chaplain of any archbishop or bishop, or of any peer of Ireland, during such time as such chaplain shall abide and dwell, and daily attend in the performance of his duty as chaplain in the household to which he shall belong within Ireland; or the provost or any fellow of or any professor or public officer in the college of the Holy and Undivided Trinity near Dublin, or the professor of astronomy at Armagh, during the period for which any such provost, fellow, professor, or officer, may respectively be required to perform the duties of any such office, and shall actually perform the duties of the same; or any schoolmaster of any school founded and endowed by his majesty or any of his royal predecessors, or any diocesan schoolmaster during such time as such schoolmaster shall actually reside at such school and perform the duties of a schoolmaster therein; or any person who shall be specially exempted from residence under the provisions of any act or acts of parliament not repealed by this act.

"X. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any spiritual person being dean, during such time as he shall reside upon his deanery, or holding any other dignity, or being prebendary or canon in any cathedral or collegiate church or churches, who shall reside any period not exceeding four months altogether within the year upon such dignity, prebend, or canonry, to account such residence as if he had legally resided on some benefice, provided he keep a resident curate or his benefice: provided always, that it shall be lawful for any spiritual person having or holding any prebend, canonry, or dignity in any cathedral or collegiate church, in which the year for the purposes of residence is accounted to commence at any other period than the first day of January, and who may keep the periods of residence required for two successive years at such cathedral or collegiate church in whole or in part between the first day of January and the thirty-first day of December in any one year, to account such residence, although exceeding four months in the year, as reckoned from the first day of January to the thirty-first day of December, as if he had legally resided on some benefice; anything in this act contained to the contrary, notwithstanding.

“XI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese in which any benefice shall be locally situate, to license any longer period of non-residence upon any such benefice of any dean or person holding any other dignity in any cathedral or collegiate church, or of any prebendary or canon in any case in which it shall appear to such bishop from his own knowledge, if such cathedral or collegiate church is locally situate within his own diocese, or if not, by the certificate of the bishop of the diocese in which the cathedral or collegiate church shall be locally situate, to be required for the performance of any duties in any such cathedral or collegiate church, provided that every such spiritual person shall during such period reside on such prebend, canonry, or dignity.

“XII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that no spiritual person appointed to any prebend, canonry, or dignity in any cathedral or collegiate church before the passing of this act, shall be subject to any penalty or forfeiture for non-residence upon any benefice during the period of his actually residing upon such prebend, canonry, or dignity.

“XIII. And be it further enacted, that every spiritual person having any house of residence upon his benefice, who shall not reside thereon, shall, during such period or periods of non-residence, whether the same shall be for the whole or part of any year, keep such house of residence in good and sufficient repair; and that every such spiritual person who shall not keep such house of residence in repair, and who shall not, upon monition issued by the bishop of the diocese in which the same shall be locally situate, put the same in repair, according to the requisition of such monition, within the time specified therein, to the satisfaction of the bishop of the diocese, and to be certified to the bishop upon such survey and report as shall be required by the bishop in that behalf, shall be liable to all penalties for non-residence, notwithstanding any exemption or licence during the period of such house of residence remaining out of repair, and until the same shall have been put in good and sufficient repair, to the satisfaction of the bishop of the diocese.

“XIV. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for any bishop, upon application made for that purpose, by petition in writing, by any spiritual person, or by any fit and proper person, on behalf of any spiritual person, having or holding any benefice locally situated within his diocese, upon such proofs as to any facts stated in any such petition, as any such bishop may think necessary and shall require, by affidavit made before any ecclesiastical judge or his surrogate, or any justice of the peace or magistrate, or any master extraordinary in Chancery (which oath any such ecclesiastical judge or surrogate, or justice of the peace or magistrate, or master extraordinary in Chancery, is hereby authorized and required to administer), to grant, in such cases as are in this act enumerated, in which, upon due consideration of all the circumstances stated in any such application, and verified to the satisfaction of the bishop as aforesaid, such bishop shall in his discretion think it fit to grant the same, a licence in writing under his hand, expressing the cause of granting the same, to such spiritual person to reside out of the parish, or out of the proper house of residence of his benefice, for the purpose of exempting such person from any pecuniary penalty or forfeiture in respect of any non-residence thereon; (that is to say,) to any spiritual person who shall be prevented from residing in the proper house of residence, or in the parish, by any actual illness or infirmity of body, of himself or of his wife or child, making part of and residing with him as part of his family; and also to any spiritual person having or holding any benefice whereupon or wherein there shall be no house of residence, or where the house of residence shall be unfit for the residence of such spiritual person, such unfitness not being occasioned by any negligence, default, or other misconduct of such spiritual person, and such spiritual person keeping such house of residence in repair to the satisfaction of the bishop; and also to any spiritual person having or holding any benefice, and occupying, in the parish of the same respectively, any mansion or messuage, to reside in such mansion or messuage, such spiritual person keeping the house of residence and other buildings belonging thereto in good and sufficient repair and condition, and producing to the bishop proof to his satisfaction at the time of granting and renewing any such licence, of such good and sufficient state of repair; and also to any spiritual person having or holding any benefice of small value, and serving as a licensed stipendiary curate elsewhere, and providing for the serving such his benefice to the satisfaction of such bishop; and also to any usher of any endowed school duly licensed by the bishop, and actually employed in teaching therein, or to any person holding any endowed lectureship or endowed chapelry, or endowed preachship, and performing and executing the duties thereof respectively, with the licence of the bishop in whose diocese he shall so officiate: provided always, that the spiritual person obtaining any such licence shall pay to the secretary or officer of the bishop, the sum of ten shillings, exclusive of and over and above the stamp duty chargeable thereon, and no more: provided also, that if any spiritual person applying to any such bishop for any such licence shall think himself aggrieved by the refusal thereof, it shall be lawful for such spiritual person to appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall forthwith, either by himself or some commissioner or commissioners appointed from among the other bishops of his province, under his hand, make or cause to be made inquiry into the same, and by writing signed by himself confirm such refusal, or grant a licence under this act, as shall seem just and proper: provided always, that in every such case the spiritual person so appealing shall give security to the bishop for the payment of such reasonable expenses, occasioned by the appeal, as the archbishop or his commissioner or commissioners shall award.

“XV. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any such bishop as aforesaid, in any cases not hereinbefore enumerated, in which, under all the circumstances of any such case, such bishop shall think it expedient to grant to any spiritual person possessed of any benefice, a licence to reside out of the parish, or out of the proper house of residence, as the case may be, or as the case may appear to such bishop to require, to assign in any case in which a stipendiary curate may be employed to do the duty of such spiritual person, such salary as he shall judge fit to appoint, due respect being had to the value of such benefice, and to all other circumstances of the case; and it shall also be lawful for any bishop, in case of the absence from the realm of any spiritual person, to grant any such licence, without any application made for that purpose, and from time to time, in any such case, to renew any such licence, as he shall think fit, and in every such case to appoint a stipendiary curate, in case no curate duly licensed should be then employed in serving such benefice, and to assign a salary to such curate; or if any curate shall have been and be then so employed, to assign any additional salary to such curate, or to appoint an additional curate, and in every and any of such cases, to cause such salaries to be paid by sequestration of the profits of the benefice: provided always, that in every such case respectively, the nature and special circumstances thereof, and the reasons that have induced such bishop to grant such licence as aforesaid, shall be forthwith transmitted to the archbishop of the province to which such bishop shall belong, who shall forthwith, by himself, or by some commissioner or commissioners appointed for that purpose from among the bishops of such province, by writing under his hand, which commissioner or commissioners is and are thereupon authorized to take upon himself or themselves the execution of the said commission, examine into such case, and make such inquiries as to any particulars relating thereto, as such archbishop or commissioner or commissioners so appointed as aforesaid may think necessary; and after such inquiries made by himself, or where the same shall be made by such commissioner or commissioners, after a return of the substance thereof in writing to such archbishop, such archbishop shall thereupon allow or disallow such licence in the whole or in part, or make any alteration therein as to the period for which the same may have been granted or otherwise, and likewise as to the stipend assigned to the curate, as to such archbishop shall seem fit; and no such licence shall be good, valid, or effectual under this act, for any purpose whatever, unless it shall have been so allowed and approved by such archbishop, such allowance thereof being signified by the signing thereof by such archbishop: provided always, that it shall not be necessary in such licence to specify the cause of granting the same.

“XVI. And be it further enacted, that no licence granted under this act shall be made void by the death or removal of the bishop granting the same, but the same shall be and remain good and valid, notwithstanding any such death or removal, unless the same shall be revoked by the next or any succeeding bishop, as the case may require.

“XVII. And be it further enacted, that every application made by or on behalf of any spiritual person holding any benefice, donative, perpetual or impropriate curacy, or parochial chapelry, to the bishop of the diocese, for any licence for non-residence, shall be in writing, and shall be signed by the person making the same, and shall state whether such spiritual person intends to perform the duty himself, and if he does, where and at what distance he intends to reside, or if he intends to employ a curate, the application shall state what salary he proposes to give to his curate, and whether the curate proposes to reside, or not to reside, in the parish, and if the curate intends to reside, then whether in the parsonage house, and if he does not intend to reside in the parish, then the application shall state at what distance therefrom, and at what place such curate intends to reside, and whether such curate serves any other parish as curate or incumbent, or has any ecclesiastical preferment, or holds any donative, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, or officiates in any other church or chapel; and such application shall also state the gross annual value of the benefice in respect of which any licence for non-residence shall be applied for; and it shall not be lawful for the bishop to grant any such licence, unless the application shall contain a statement of the several particulars aforesaid; and all such applications and specifications shall be kept and filed by the registrar of the diocese in a separate book, which shall be kept and preserved for that purpose; and such book shall not be open to public inspection, or disclosed, or copies thereof made, except with the leave in writing of the bishop of the diocese.

“XVIII. And be it further enacted, that during the vacancy of any see, or the absence of the bishop of the diocese from that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, the power of granting licences under this act, subject to the regulations therein contained, shall be exercised by the vicar-general of the diocese, or in case such circumstances shall arise as shall disable the bishop from exercising in person the functions of his office, it shall be exercised by such person or persons as is or are lawfully empowered to exercise his general jurisdiction in the diocese.

“XIX. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any bishop, who shall have granted any licence for non-residence as aforesaid, or for any successor or successors of any such bishop to revoke any such licence in any case in which it may appear to him or them proper and expedient to revoke the same: provided that any spiritual person may appeal against any such revocation by the bishop in like manner as is hereinbefore directed in case of any refusal of any licence: provided also, that it shall be lawful for any archbishop to whom such appeal shall be made to order and direct such reasonable fees and charges to be paid by any spiritual person appealing as aforesaid, in respect of any such proceedings as aforesaid, as he shall in his discretion think fit: provided also, that no licence for non-residence granted under this act shall continue in force for more than three years from the granting thereof, or after the thirty-first day of December in the second year after the year in which such licence is granted.

“XX. And be it further enacted, that every bishop who shall grant or revoke any licence for non-residence under this act, shall and he is hereby required, within

“XXI. And be it further enacted, that every archbishop who shall in his own diocese grant any licence, or who shall allow or approve, in manner directed by this act, any licence or licences in any case or cases not enumerated in this act, shall annually, on or before the thirty-first day of January in each year, transmit to the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, a list of all such licences so granted or allowed or approved respectively as aforesaid, in the year ending on the last day of December preceding such thirty-first day of January, and shall in every such list specify the reasons which shall have induced him to grant, allow, or approve the said licences, together with the reasons transmitted to him by the bishops for granting any such licences in their respective dioceses; and it shall be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, by and with the advice and consent of his majesty's privy council there, by an order made for that purpose, to revoke and annul any such licence, from such time as shall be mentioned in such order; and in case any such order shall be so made, the same shall be transmitted to the archbishop who shall have granted or allowed or approved such licence, who shall thereupon cause a copy of every such order made in relation to any licence so allowed or approved to be transmitted to the bishop of the diocese in which such licence shall have been granted; and such bishop shall cause a copy of the mandatory part of the order to be filed in the registry of such diocese, and a like copy to be delivered to the churchwardens of the parish to which the same relates, in manner hereinbefore directed as to revocation of licences under this act; and every such archbishop shall cause a copy of the mandatory part of every such order made in relation to any such licence as aforesaid, granted by him in his own diocese, to be in like manner filed in the registry of his diocese, and a like copy also to be delivered to the churchwarden of the parish to which such licence shall relate, in manner before mentioned: provided always, that after the time from which such licence shall have been so revoked by order in council, the same shall nevertheless, in all questions that shall have arisen or may thereafter arise, touching the non-residence of the spiritual person to whom the same shall have been granted, between the period at which the same was granted, or allowed, or approved, and the time at which the same shall be so revoked as aforesaid, be deemed and taken to be and to have been valid and effectual to all intents and purposes of this act.

“XXII. And be it further enacted, that on or before the twenty-fifth day of March in every year, a return or returns shall be made to his majesty in council by every bishop, of the names of every benefice within his diocese, or subject to his jurisdiction by virtue of this act, and the names of the several spiritual persons holding the same respectively who shall have resided; and also the names of the several spiritual persons respectively who shall not have resided thereon by reason of any exemption under or by virtue of this act, or by reason of any licence granted by such bishop, for any and what cause enumerated by this act; and also of all spiritual persons not having any such exemption or licence, who shall not have resided on their respective benefices, so far as the bishop is informed thereof; and also the names of all curates licensed to serve any benefice on which the incumbent is not resident, and whether the gross annual value of such benefice amounts to or exceeds three hundred pounds per annum or not, the amount of the curate's salary, and the place of his residence; and every spiritual person who shall be non-resident in any year subsequent to the passing of this act, by reason of residence on any other benefice, or of any exemption under this act, and to entitle him to which it is not necessary to obtain any licence under this act, shall within six weeks from and after the first day of January in every following year, notify the same in writing under his hand, to the bishop of the diocese to whose jurisdiction he is subject by this act, or otherwise in respect of such benefice, specifying the nature of such exemption, and whether the gross annual value of the benefice on which he is non-resident amounts to or exceeds three hundred pounds per annum or not; and every spiritual person who shall have more than one benefice, and who shall reside on one of them, or who shall reside during any period of the year on any dignity, or in the performance of the duties of any office in any cathedral or collegiate church, or who shall be non-resident for any period of the year on account of any of the causes of temporary exemption specified in this act, shall in like manner and within the like period in each year notify the same.

"XXIII. And be it further enacted, that every spiritual person who shall neglect to make such notification as by this act is directed, within such period of six weeks as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of twenty pounds, to be levied by order of the bishop of the diocese by sequestration, if not otherwise paid, after monition to pay the same out of the profits of the benefice in respect of which he shall neglect to make such notification, by the bishop of the diocese to whom the notification ought to be made, to be applied as such bishop may direct, to useful and charitable purposes: provided always, that it shall be lawful for such bishop to remit or order the repayment of any part of any such penalty, in like manner as is allowed by this act in cases of non-compliance with an order for residence.

"XXIV. And be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to exempt any spiritual person or persons from any canonical or ecclesiastical censures, or affect any proceedings that shall hereafter be instituted in any ecclesiastical court, in order to cause the same to be inflicted, in relation to the non-residence of any spiritual person having or holding any benefice who shall not have obtained a licence according to the provisions of this act, to be absent therefrom, nor have any other lawful cause of absence: provided always, that no proceeding be admitted in any ecclesiastical court against any spiritual person for non-residence, not exceeding three months in any one year, at the suit or instance of any person or persons other than the bishop only of the diocese within which the benefice in respect whereof such non-residence shall have taken place shall be locally situated; anything in any law or laws, or ecclesiastical canon or canons, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

"XXV. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which it shall appear to any such bishop as aforesaid, that any spiritual person having or holding any benefice, and not being licensed according to this act to be absent therefrom, nor having any lawful cause of absence from the same, does not sufficiently reside on the same respectively, it shall be lawful for such bishop to issue or cause to be issued, a monition to such spiritual person forthwith to proceed to and reside thereon, and perform the duties thereof, and to make a return to such monition within a certain number of days after the issuing thereof, so as that in every such case there shall be thirty days between the times of delivering such monition

Where return shall not be made, or shall not be satisfactory, bishop may order residence, and if disobeyed, may sequester the profits of the benefice, and direct an application of the profits.

Appeal against sequestration may be made to the archbishop.

to such spiritual person, or leaving the same at his then usual or last place of abode, or if not there to be found, with the officiating minister or one of the churchwardens, and also a copy thereof at the house of residence, (if any such there be,) belonging to such benefice, to which any such spiritual person shall be required by such monition to proceed and reside thereon, and the time specified in such monition for the return thereto; and a copy of every such monition shall, immediately on the issuing thereof, be filed in the registry of such bishop's court, and shall be open for inspection on the payment of three shillings and no more; and the spiritual person to whom any such monition shall be sent under this act, shall, within the time specified for that purpose, make a return thereto into such registry, to be there filed; and it shall be lawful for the bishop to whom any such return shall be made, to require such return, or any fact contained therein, to be verified by the oath of such spiritual person or others, to be taken before some surrogate, or justice of the peace, or master extraordinary in Chancery, which oath any such surrogate, or justice of the peace, or master extraordinary in Chancery, is hereby authorized and required to administer, on application being made for that purpose; and in every case where no such return shall be made, or where such return shall not state such reasons as shall be deemed satisfactory by such bishop for the non-residence of the spiritual person to whom such monition shall have been sent as aforesaid, or where the same or any of the facts contained therein shall not be so verified as aforesaid, when the same shall have been required, then and in such case it shall be lawful for such bishop to issue an order in writing under his hand and seal, to require such person to proceed to and reside as aforesaid, within thirty days after such order in writing or a copy thereof shall have been delivered or left in like manner as hereinbefore required as to monitions; and in case of non-compliance, it shall be lawful for such bishop to sequester the profits of such benefice of such spiritual person as aforesaid, until such order shall be complied with, or such sufficient reasons for non-residence stated and proved as aforesaid, and to direct by any order to be made for that purpose under his hand, and filed as aforesaid, the application of such profits, after deducting the necessary expenses of serving the cure, either in the whole or in such proportion as he shall think fit, in the first place, to the payment of such reasonable expenses as shall have been incurred in relation to such monition and sequestration, and in the next place, towards the augmentation or improvement of any such benefice or house of residence thereof, or any of the buildings and appurtenance thereof, or towards the improvement of any of the glebe or demesne lands thereof, or to order and direct the same or any portion thereof to be paid to the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits in Ireland for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy, to be applied for the purposes of such augmentation as such bishop shall, in his discretion, under all circumstances think fit and expedient; and it shall also be lawful for any such bishop within six months after such order for sequestration, or within six months after any money shall have been actually levied for such sequestration, to remit to any such spiritual person any part or proportion of such sequestered profits, or cause the same or any part thereof that shall have been paid or directed to be paid to the said trustees and commissioners, to be repaid to such spiritual person, which repayment the said trustees and commissioners are hereby authorized and required, upon an order under the hand of any such bishop, to make out of any money then in their hands, or if no money shall then be in their hands, out of the next money that shall come to their hands, in any case which by reason of the subsequent obedience of any such spiritual person to any such monition or order, or the stating and proving such sufficient reasons as aforesaid, such bishop shall think the same proper: provided always, that when any such spiritual person shall think himself aggrieved by reason of any such sequestration issued by any bishop, it shall be lawful for such spiritual person, within one month after the making any order for any such sequestration as aforesaid, to appeal to the archbishop of the province to which such bishop shall belong, who shall forthwith, either by himself or some commissioner or commissioners appointed from among the bishops of his province for that purpose, under his hand and seal, make or cause to be made due inquiry into the same, and make such order therein or relating thereto, or to the profits that shall be so sequestered as aforesaid, for the return to such spiritual person of the same or any part thereof, or otherwise, as shall, under all the circumstances of the case, appear to such archbishop (after such inquiry made by himself or by his commissioner or commissioners, and in the latter case, after the substance of such inquiry shall have been returned in writing to the said archbishop) to be just and proper: provided always, that the party so appealing shall give security to the bishop for the payment of such reasonable expenses occasioned by the appeal, as the archbishop or his commissioner or commissioners shall award: provided also, that no such order for any sequestration shall be put in force during such appeal as aforesaid, and until the same shall be determined.

“XXVI. And be it further enacted, that every spiritual person, to whom any such monition or order in writing shall be sent as aforesaid, under this act, who shall be at the time of the issuing thereof absent from residence in or upon his benefice, contrary to the provisions of this act, but who shall, in obedience to such monition or order, forthwith return to due residence, and the profits of whose benefice shall, by reason of such return, not be sequestered, shall nevertheless pay all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by reason of the issuing and serving such monition or order, to be levied as any costs may be levied upon any spiritual person by any bishop under any of the provisions of this act.

“XXVII. And to the intent effectually to enforce bona fide residence, according to the intent and meaning of such monition and order as aforesaid, be it further enacted, that if any spiritual person, not licensed under this act to be absent from his benefice, nor having other lawful cause of absence from the same, who after any such monition or order as aforesaid, requiring his residence, and before or after any such sequestration as aforesaid, shall, in obedience to any such monition or order, have begun to reside upon his benefice, shall afterwards, and before the expiration of six months next after the commencement of such residence, without the leave of such bishop, wilfully, in the judgment of such bishop, absent himself from such benefice, it shall be lawful for such bishop, without issuing any other monition, or making any other order, again to sequester and apply the profits of such benefice as before directed by this act, for the purpose of enforcing the residence of such spiritual person, according to the true intent of the original monition issued by such bishop as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the bishop so to proceed in like cases from time to time, as often as occasion may require; provided that in each and every of such cases, such spiritual person shall be entitled to appeal against such sequestration, in such manner and upon such terms as hereinbefore is and are mentioned touching appeals respecting sequestration; but nevertheless the same shall be in force during such appeal.

“XXVIII. And whereas it is expedient that bishops should be empowered summarily to punish past non-residence as well as to compel residence in future; be it therefore enacted, that in all cases in which any spiritual person shall have become subject to any penalty or forfeiture for any non-residence, it shall be lawful for the bishop within whose diocese such penalty or forfeiture shall have arisen, to proceed against such spiritual person for such past non-residence, and to levy the penalties incurred thereby by monition and sequestration, and to direct the application thereof in like manner, and subject to the same regulations, and with like powers of remitting or ordering the repayment of any part of such penalties, as is directed or allowed in cases of non-compliance with any order for residence.

“XXIX. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which any archbishop or bishop shall think proper under all circumstances, after proceeding by monition for the recovery of any penalty under this act, of more than one-third of the value of any benefice, for any non-residence exceeding six months in the year, to remit the whole or any part of any such penalty, such archbishop shall forthwith transmit to the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors, and to the privy council in Ireland, and such bishop shall transmit to the archbishop of the province to which he belongs, a list of such cases as have occurred in his

Appellant to give security for payment of the expenses.

Persons who shall return to residence on monition, shall pay the costs.

If any person returning to residence on monition shall, before six months thereafter, absent himself, the bishop may, without monition, sequester the profits of the benefice.

Bishops empowered to punish past non-residence.

Penalties for the recovery of which monition has been issued, may be remitted by the bishop, and special returns made of the reasons for such remission.

or their respective dioceses, specifying the nature and special circumstances of each case, and the reasons for the said remission, in the same manner as is directed in relation to the licences for non-residence granted in non-enumerated cases; and it shall thereupon be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, by and with the advice and consent of his majesty's privy council in Ireland, or for the said archbishop, as the case may be, to allow or disallow such remission in whole or in part, in the same manner as is provided in this act with relation to the allowance or disallowance of licences for non-residence; provided always, that the decision of the said archbishop with respect to cases transmitted to him from any such bishop shall be final.

If any spiritual person shall continue under sequestration two years, or incur three sequestrations within that period, the benefice shall become void.

"XXX. And be it further enacted, that if the benefice of any spiritual person shall continue for the space of two years under any sequestration, and under the provisions of this act, for disobedience to the bishop's monition requiring such spiritual person to reside on his benefice, or shall under the provisions of this act incur three such sequestrations in the said space of two years, the spiritual person not being relieved with respect to any of such sequestrations upon appeal, the benefice in relation to non-residence upon which such sequestration shall have been made, shall become ipso facto void, and the bishop of the diocese shall thereupon give notice thereof to the patron or person entitled to present, who shall thereupon present or nominate some clerk thereto, other than the spiritual person whose benefice shall have so continued under such sequestration, or who shall have incurred such sequestrations as aforesaid, as if the same had been avoided by the natural death or resignation of such spiritual person.

Contracts for letting houses in which any spiritual persons shall by order of the bishop be required to reside shall be void.

"XXXI. And be it further enacted, that all contracts or agreements made for the letting of the house of residence, or the buildings, gardens, orchards, and appurtenances necessary for the convenient occupation of the same, belonging to any benefice, to which house of residence any spiritual person shall be required, by order of the bishop as aforesaid, to proceed and to reside therein, or which shall be assigned or appointed as a residence to any curate by the bishop, shall, upon a copy of such order, assignment, or appointment being served upon the occupier thereof, or left at the house, be null and void; and a copy of every such order, assignment, or appointment, shall immediately on the issuing thereof be transmitted to one of the churchwardens of the parish, or such other person as the bishop shall think fit, and be by him forthwith served on the occupier of such house of residence, or left at the same; and any person continuing to hold any such house of residence, or any such building, garden, orchard, or appurtenances, after the day on which the said spiritual person shall be directed by such order to reside in such house of residence, or which shall be specified in any such assignment or appointment; and after service of such copy as aforesaid, or the same being so left as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of forty shillings for every day he shall, without the permission of the bishop in writing for that purpose obtained, wilfully continue to hold any such house, building, garden, orchard, or appurtenances, together with the expenses of serving such order, in case it shall have been deemed necessary specially to serve such order, to be allowed by the bishop issuing the order, or making such assignment or appointment as aforesaid, and to be recovered and applied in like manner as the penalties for non-residence are directed to be recovered and applied by the provisions of this act; and it shall also be lawful for the spiritual person so directed to reside as aforesaid, or curate to whom any such residence is assigned, to apply to any justice of the peace or magistrate of the county, riding, province, city, or place, for a warrant for the taking possession thereof, and the justice of the peace to whom any such order for such possession is produced, shall and he is hereby required thereupon to give a warrant for such possession, and possession may thereupon be taken of such house under such warrant, at any time in the day-time, by entering the same by force, if necessary, without any other proceeding by ejectment or otherwise; anything in any act or acts of parliament or law or laws to the contrary notwithstanding.

Any person holding possession after the day appointed shall be subject to penalty.

Justice may grant warrant to take possession.

Not liable to penalty while the tenant shall continue to occupy.

"XXXII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that no spiritual person shall be liable to any penalties for not residing in any such house or residence during such time as such tenant shall continue to occupy such house of residence, or other buildings necessary to the occupation of the same.

“XXXIII. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, no oath shall be required of or taken by any vicar, in relation to residence on his vicarage; any law, custom, constitution, or usage to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

“XXXIV. And be it further enacted, that no penalty or forfeiture shall be recovered by any proceeding or action against any spiritual person, under the provisions of this act, other or further than those which such spiritual person may have incurred during the year ending on the thirty-first day of December immediately preceding the commencement of such proceeding or action.

“XXXV. And be it further enacted, that every penalty for non-residence under this act, in respect of which no proceeding shall have been had by monition before the first day of April next after the year in which the same shall have been incurred, may be recovered by action or suit in the manner by this act directed.

“XXXVI. And be it further enacted, that no action of debt, bill, plaint, or information against any spiritual person, for the recovery of any penalties and forfeitures under this act, shall be commenced or filed in any of his majesty's courts of record at Dublin, until the first day of May after the expiration of the year in which the alleged offence shall have taken place.

“XXXVII. And be it further enacted, that for all the purposes of this act, the year shall be deemed to commence on the first day of January, and be reckoned therefrom to the thirty-first day of December, both inclusive.

“XXXVIII. And be it further enacted, that for all the purposes of this act, the months therein named shall be taken to be calendar months, except in any case in which any month or months are to be made up of different periods less than a month, and in every such case thirty days shall be deemed a month.

“XXXIX. And whereas, notwithstanding the regulations contained in this act, spiritual persons may, through inadvertence, and in many cases from unavoidable circumstances and causes, become subject to penalties and forfeitures, and vexatious prosecutions, unless provision is made for the prevention thereof; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no writ shall be sued out against, nor any copy of any process at the suit of any informer be served upon any spiritual person, for any penalty or forfeiture incurred under any of the provisions of this act, until a notice in writing of such intended writ or process shall have been delivered to him, or left at the usual or last place of his abode, and also to the bishop of the diocese, by leaving the same at the registry of his diocese, by the attorney or agent for the party who intends to sue or cause the same to be sued out or served, one calendar month at the least before the suing out or serving the same; in which notice shall be clearly and explicitly contained the cause of action which such party hath or claimeth to have, and the penalty or penalties for which such person intends to sue, and on the back of which notices respectively shall be indorsed the name of such attorney or agent, together with the place of his abode; and no such notice shall be given before the first day of April in the year next after any such penalty or penalties shall have been incurred.

“XL. And be it further enacted, that no plaintiff shall recover any verdict against any spiritual person for any penalty or forfeiture under the provisions of this act, unless it is proved upon the trial of such action that such notices were respectively given as aforesaid, but in default thereof such spiritual person shall recover a verdict with double costs.

“XLII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any spiritual person against whom any action shall be brought for any penalty or forfeiture under the provisions of this act, by leave of the court in which such actions shall depend, at any time before issue joined, to pay into court such sum of money as he shall see fit, whereupon such proceedings, orders, and judgments shall be had,

STAT. 5 GEO. 4, c. 91. [1a.]

No oath relating to residence shall be required of any vicar. Penalties not recoverable for more than one year.

Penalties not levied under monition may be recovered by action. Actions for penalties not to be commenced before 1st May after expiration of the year.

Commencement and conclusion of the year.

Calendar months to be taken for the purposes of this act.

No action to be commenced for any penalty until after one calendar month's notice given to the defendant and bishop of diocese.

Plaintiff not to recover without proof made that such notices were given.

No evidence to be given but such as is contained in the notices.

“XLIII. And be it further enacted, that the court in which any action, bill, plaint, or information shall be depending, for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture for non-residence under this act, may and shall, upon application made for that purpose, require by rule or order of the said court, or any judge thereof, the bishop of the diocese within the limits of which the benefice shall be locally situate, or to whom the same shall be subject, according to the provisions of this act, for or by reason of non-residence in, at, or upon which the penalties and forfeitures shall be sought to be recovered by such action, bill, or information, to certify in writing under his hand to the said court, and also to the party for that purpose named in the said rule or order, the reputed annual value of such benefice; and upon such rule or order being left with such bishop, or the registrar of such bishop, such bishop shall accordingly certify such reputed annual value; and such certificate shall in all subsequent proceedings upon such action, bill, plaint, or information, be received and taken as evidence of the annual value of such benefice for the purposes of this act, without prejudice nevertheless to the admissibility or effect of any such other evidence as may be offered or given respecting the actual value thereof.

“XLIV. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any spiritual person to whom any licence for non-residence shall have been granted, and against whom any action shall be brought for any penalty or forfeiture by reason of any non-residence, or any matter or thing relating whereto any such licence under this act has been granted, to plead such licence in bar of any such action; and if the plaintiff in such suit or action shall discontinue any such suit or action after any plea of licence shall have been pleaded thereto under this act, then and in such case the defendant in such suit or action shall have full costs of suit; and if in any such suit or action a verdict shall be given for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, the defendant shall have double costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant hath in other cases to recover costs by law; and it shall be lawful for the court, or any judge of the court in which any suit or action shall be commenced, upon any application made in that behalf, to order and direct, if such court or judge shall deem it expedient so to do, that the plaintiff in any such suit or action shall give security for the payment of such costs, and that all proceedings in any such suit or action shall be stayed until such security shall be given, as to the court or judge to whom any such application shall be made shall seem fit.

“XLV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that if at the time of filing any monition requiring any spiritual person to reside on his benefice, or to recover the penalties incurred by past non-residence, no notice of any action for any such penalty or forfeiture shall have been already given in manner aforesaid, then and in such case no such action, suit, bill, plaint, or information shall be afterwards brought for any penalty or forfeiture incurred by reason of any non-residence of such spiritual person before the issuing of such monition, and during any proceedings that may be had under such monition; and if any such action or suit shall be so commenced, the defendant therein may plead in bar thereof that such a monition as aforesaid has issued in respect of the same benefice, and such defendant, unless upon application to the court the same shall be dispensed with, shall, upon pleading such matter, file or cause to be filed an affidavit in the said court, thereby stating the period specified in such monition, and that, according to the belief of the defendant, the bishop who has issued or caused such monition to be issued is proceeding upon the said monition, to the intent to make the same effectual to all intents and purposes of this act, otherwise such plea shall not be good or available in the law.

“XLVI. And be it further enacted, that no penalty or costs incurred by any spiritual person by reason of any non-residence on his benefice shall be levied by execution against the body of any such person whilst he shall hold the same or any other benefice out of the profits of which the same can be levied by sequestration within the term of three years; and in case the body of any such spiritual person shall be taken in execution for the same, the court in which the same was recovered, or any judge thereof, may and shall, upon application made for that purpose, discharge the party from such execution, in case it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of such court or judge that such penalty and costs can be levied as aforesaid.

STAT. 5 Gmo. 4, c. 91. [In.]
vered by sequestration within three years.

“XLVII. And be it further enacted, that if any spiritual person holding any benefice, who does not or shall not actually reside thereon nine months in each year (unless such person shall do the duty of the same, having a legal exemption from residence, or a licence to reside out of the parsonage house or vicarage house, or other usual house or residence belonging to the same), shall, for a period exceeding three months, absent himself from his benefice without leaving a curate duly licensed, or other spiritual person, to perform, and who shall duly perform the ecclesiastical duties of such benefice, or shall for a period of three months after the death, resignation, or removal of any curate who has served his church or chapel, neglect to notify such death, resignation, or removal to the bishop of the diocese, or to nominate to the bishop of the diocese a proper curate, then, and in every such case, and in every case in which no curate shall be nominated to the bishop for the purpose of being licensed by him within such period as aforesaid, the bishop is hereby authorized to appoint and license a proper curate, with such salary as by this act is allowed and directed, to serve the church or chapel of the parish or place in respect of which such neglect or default shall have occurred: provided always, that the licence shall in every case specify whether the curate is required to reside within the parish or place or not, and if the curate is permitted by the bishop granting the licence to reside out of the parish or place, the grounds upon which the curate is so permitted to reside out of the parish or place shall be specified in the said licence; and the distance of the residence of any curate from any church or chapel which he shall be licensed to serve shall not exceed five statute miles, except in cases of necessity, to be approved by the bishop and specified in the licences.

Non-resident incumbents neglecting to appoint curates, bishop to appoint.

Licence to specify whether curate is to reside in the parish or not.

“XLVIII. And be it further enacted, that in every case where a curate is appointed to serve a benefice upon which the incumbent is non-resident for more than three months in the year, from exemption, licence, or otherwise, such curate shall be required by the bishop to reside within the parish, provided the gross value of such benefice amounts to three hundred pounds a year or upwards, and the population amounts to three hundred persons or upwards, or provided the population amounts to one thousand persons or upwards, whatever may be the value of such benefice: provided always, that whenever it shall be made out to the satisfaction of such bishop, that from special and peculiar circumstances great inconvenience would arise from such curate being compelled to reside within the parish, it shall be lawful for the bishop to allow such curate to reside in some near and convenient place: provided also, that the licence to be granted to such curate shall specify the special circumstances which have induced the bishop to allow such residence out of the parish, and shall be entered and filed in the registry of the diocese.

Curate to reside on all benefices above 300*l.* a year, &c. except under special circumstances.

“XLIX. And be it further enacted, that whenever it shall appear to the satisfaction of any bishop, either of his own knowledge or upon proof by affidavit laid before him, that by reason of the number of churches or chapels belonging to any benefice locally situate within his diocese, or the distance of such churches or chapels from each other, or the distance of the residence of the spiritual person serving the same from such churches or chapels, or any or either of them, or the negligence, or mental or bodily infirmity of the spiritual person holding the same, that the ecclesiastical duties of such benefice are inadequately performed, or where it shall appear to such bishop as aforesaid, that the residence of such spiritual person is at too great a distance from any parish united to the one in which he resides to admit of his performing all the ecclesiastical duties, such bishop may, by writing under his hand, require the spiritual person holding such benefice to nominate to him a fit person or persons, with sufficient stipend or stipends, to be licensed by him to perform or to assist in performing such duties, specifying therein the grounds of such proceeding; and if such spiritual person shall neglect or omit to make such nomination for the space of three months after such requisition so made as aforesaid, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for such bishop to appoint a curate or curates, as the case shall appear to such bishop to require, with such stipend or stipends as such bishop shall think fit to appoint, not exceeding in any case in the whole the stipends allowed to curates by this act, nor, except in the case of negligence, exceeding one half of the gross annual value of the benefice, although the spiritual person to whom such churches or chapels shall belong shall actually reside or serve the same: provided always, that such requisition, and any affidavit made to found the same, shall be forthwith filed by the bishop in the registry of his court: provided also, that it shall be lawful for any such spiritual person who shall think himself aggrieved by any such appointment of such curate or curates, to appeal to the archbishop of the province to which such bishop shall belong, in such and the like manner, and under such provisions and directions as are allowed to any spiritual person thinking himself aggrieved by any sequestration issued by any bishop.

“L. And be it further enacted, that in all cases where the bishop of the diocese shall deem it proper to enforce the performance of morning and evening service on Sundays, or any other service required by law in any parish church or parochial chapel, or the chapel of any extra-parochial place, it shall be lawful for such bishop to enforce the same by monition and sequestration, to be issued in the manner by this act provided.

“LII. And be it further enacted, that every bishop to whom any application shall be made for any licence for a curate to serve for any person not duly residing upon his benefice, shall, before he shall grant such licence, require a statement of all the particulars by this act required to be stated by any person applying for a licence for non-residence: and it shall not be lawful for any bishop to grant a licence to any curate to serve the church or chapel of any person as aforesaid, upon any such application as aforesaid, until a statement of all such particulars as aforesaid shall have been delivered to him; and such statement shall be kept and filed, and preserved from public inspection, and disclosed only in like manner, and in such cases, as is before directed as to statements of persons applying for licences for non-residence.

“LIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop, and he is hereby required, subject to the several provisions and restrictions in this act contained, to appoint to every curate such salary as is allowed and specified in this act; and every licence to be granted to a stipendiary curate under this act shall contain and specify the amount of the salary allowed by the bishop to the curate, and such licence, or any copy of the registry thereof, signed by the registrar of the diocese or his deputy, shall be evidence of the amount of the salary so appointed to any curate in all courts of law or equity; and in case any difference shall arise between any rector or vicar, or person holding any benefice, and his curate, touching such stipend or allowance, or the payment thereof, or of the arrears thereof, the bishop, on complaint to him made, may and shall summarily hear and determine the same; and in case of wilful neglect or refusal to pay such stipend, salary, or allowance, or the arrears thereof, he shall be and is hereby empowered to proceed by monition and sequestration to sequester the profits of the benefice for and until payment of such stipend or allowance, or the arrears thereof: provided always, that the curate obtaining any such licence shall pay to the secretary or officer of the bishop, the sum of one pound, exclusive of any stamp duty which may be chargeable thereon, which said sum of one pound shall be in remuneration of all and every fee or fees now demandable by the said secretary or officer for obtaining such licence, or for the signature of any declaration by the said curate in consequence of such licence, or of any certificate of such curate having signed such declaration: and provided also, that from and after the passing of this act, as often as any person shall be licensed to two or more curacies within the same diocese at one and the same time, it shall be sufficient for such person to sign one declaration only, appointed to be signed by an act made in the parliament of Ireland in the seventeenth and eighteenth years of the reign of King Charles the Second, intituled, 'An Act for the Uniformity of Public Prayers and Administration of Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies; and for establishing the Form of making, ordaining, and consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, in the Church of Ireland;' and once to take the oaths of allegiance and abjuration; and also that it shall be sufficient for such person to produce one certificate only of his having so signed such declaration, and taken such oaths, before the bishop of the diocese.

"LIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop to appoint for the curate any stipend or allowance not exceeding seventy-five pounds per annum, and also the use of the house of residence, with the gardens and stables belonging thereto, or a further sum of fifteen pounds in lieu of the use of the rectory or vicarage house, or other houses of residence in case there shall be no house, or it shall not appear to the bishop convenient to allot or assign the house to the curate, in respect of any benefice to which the spiritual person holding the same was instituted or appointed before the third day of February, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four; but it shall not be lawful for the bishop to assign any greater stipend or allowance than aforesaid, in respect of any such benefice, during the incumbency of any such spiritual person as aforesaid, unless with the consent of the spiritual person holding the benefice, or in case of neglect to appoint or to nominate to the bishop a proper curate.

"LIV. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which any spiritual person shall have been, after the third day of February, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, or shall at any time after the passing of this act be instituted or inducted, or nominated or appointed to, or otherwise become incumbent or possessed of any benefice, and shall not duly reside thereon, unless such person shall do the duty of the same, having a legal exemption from residence, or a licence to reside out of the same, or to reside out of the parsonage or vicarage or other usual house of residence belonging to the same, the bishop shall appoint for the curate licensed to serve such benefice of such non-resident incumbent, or person as aforesaid in his absence, such salary as is hereinafter next mentioned; (that is to say,) such salary shall in no case be less than eighty pounds per annum, or than the annual value of the benefice, if the gross value thereof shall not amount to eighty pounds per annum; and such salary shall not be less than one hundred pounds per annum, or than the whole value as aforesaid, if the said value shall not amount to one hundred pounds per annum, in any parish or place where the population according to the returns then last made in pursuance of any act or acts of parliament, shall amount to or exceed three hundred persons; and such salary shall not be less than one hundred and twenty pounds per annum, or the whole value as aforesaid, if the said value shall not amount to one hundred and twenty pounds per annum, in any parish or place where the population shall appear as aforesaid to amount to or exceed five hundred persons; and such salary shall not be less than one hundred and fifty pounds per annum, or than the whole value as aforesaid, if the said value shall not amount to one hundred pounds per annum, in any parish or place where the population shall appear as aforesaid to amount to or to exceed one thousand persons: provided always, that the annual value of all benefices, of which the value estimated as is herein provided does not amount to one hundred and fifty pounds per annum, shall be estimated from the returns made by the bishops of the several dioceses to the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits in Ireland, or from any future returns which may be made by the said bishops to the said trustees and commissioners respecting parishes or places omitted in the said returns, or respecting parishes or places in the actual income of which it shall be made appear to the bishops, that any considerable variation has taken place, either by augmentation made by the said trustees and commissioners, or otherwise; and that the annual value of all benefices, of which the value estimated as is herein provided does not amount to one hundred pounds or upwards, shall be estimated by the bishops of the several dioceses, in such manner as shall be satisfactory to them.

“LV. And be it further enacted, that in any parish or place, where it shall appear to the satisfaction of the bishop that the actual income of the benefice, clear of all deductions, exceeds the sum of four hundred pounds per annum, it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to the curate of such parish or place, being resident within the same, and serving no other cure, a salary or allowance of one hundred pounds per annum, notwithstanding the population of such parish or place may not appear as aforesaid to amount to three hundred persons; and that in any parish or place where the actual annual income shall appear to exceed four hundred pounds as aforesaid, and where the population shall also appear as aforesaid to amount to or exceed five hundred persons, it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to the curate of such parish or place, being resident within the same, and serving no other cure, any larger or further stipend or allowance, or to appoint an additional curate, so that the stipends or allowances to such curate or curates shall not exceed by more than fifty pounds per annum the amount of the stipend or allowance hereinbefore respectively required to be assigned to any such curate.

“LVI. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which it shall be made out to the satisfaction of the bishop of any diocese, that any spiritual person holding any benefice is or has become non-resident, or incapable, from age, sickness, or other unavoidable cause, of performing the duties thereof, and that from these or from any other special and peculiar circumstances of the case, great hardship or inconvenience would arise, if the full amount of salary specified in this act should be allowed to the curate, then and in such case it shall be lawful for such bishop to assign to the curate any such salary less than the said full amount in this act specified, as shall under all the circumstances appear to him just and reasonable: provided always, that in the licence granted in every such case, it shall be stated, that for special reasons the bishop hath not thought proper to assign to the curate the full amount of salary allowed or required to be assigned by this act: provided also, that such special reasons shall be entered fully and at large in a separate book to be kept for that purpose, and to be deposited in the registry of the diocese, which book shall not be open to inspection, unless with the leave of the bishop, or by other proper authority, as in the cases of application for licences for non-residence.

“LVII. And be it further enacted, that if any incumbent of two or more benefices, residing bonâ fide in different proportions of each and every year, or some or one other of such benefices, the full period specified by this act, shall employ a curate to perform ecclesiastical duty interchangeably from time to time upon such of the benefices from which he shall be absent during his own actual residence upon any other thereof, then and in such case it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to any such curate any salary not exceeding such salary as would be allowed under this act for the largest of such benefices, nor less than would be allowed for the smallest, as to the bishop shall under all the circumstances appear just and reasonable: provided always, that if any such incumbent shall employ a curate or curates for the whole year upon each or any of such benefices, such incumbent so residing bonâ fide as aforesaid, then and in such case it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to either or each of such curates any such salary, less than the amount specified in this act, as he shall think fit.

“LVIII. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, no spiritual person shall serve more than two churches in one day, or two chapels, or one church and one chapel in one day, unless from the local situation of the churches or chapels, or from the value of the benefices to which they belong, or other special causes, it may in the judgment of the bishop be expedient or necessary for the performance of ecclesiastical duties in such places, to grant licence to any spiritual person to serve three churches or chapels, then and in such case it shall be lawful for the bishop to grant such licence to any spiritual person to serve three churches or chapels, not being distant from each other more than four measured miles: provided always, that in every such case the reasons for granting such licence shall be stated by the bishop in the licence granted for serving the third of such churches or chapels held by such spiritual persons, and such licence shall not be valid or effectual unless the reasons for granting the same are inserted therein as aforesaid: provided always, that the residence of such curate or spiritual person shall be so placed as that it shall not be necessary for him to travel more than sixteen measured miles in one day for the performance of the duties of such churches or chapels.

4, c. 91. [18.]

“LIX. And be it further enacted, that in every such case where any bishop shall find it necessary or expedient, for the obtaining any proper performance of ecclesiastical duties, to licence any person holding any benefice to serve as curate of any adjoining or other parish or place, it shall be lawful for such bishop to appoint, for such spiritual person so licensed, a salary less by a sum not exceeding thirty pounds per annum than the salary which in the several cases in this act specified, the bishop is required to assign and appoint; and in every case where the bishop shall find it necessary or expedient as aforesaid to license one and the same person to serve as curate for more than one parish or place, it shall be lawful for such bishop to direct that, during such time as such curate shall serve such churches or chapels, the salary to be received by him for serving each of the said churches or chapels, shall be less by a sum not exceeding thirty pounds per annum than the salary which, in the several cases hereinbefore mentioned, the bishop is required by this act to assign and appoint.

How the salaries shall be adjusted where the curate is permitted to serve in an adjoining parish.

“LX. And be it further enacted, that all agreements and contracts made or to be made between persons holding benefices and their curates, in fraud or derogation of the provisions of this act, and all agreements and contracts whereby any curate shall undertake or in any manner bind himself to accept, or be content with any stipend or salary less than that which shall be stated to be allowed in any licence of such curate, shall be void to all intents and purposes in the law whatsoever, and shall not be set up, pleaded, or given in evidence in any court of law or equity, and notwithstanding the payment and acceptance in pursuance of any such contract or agreement, of any sum less than the sum specified in the licence of such curate, or any receipt, discharge, or acquittance that may be given in cases of such payment and acceptance, the curate or his personal representatives shall be and remain entitled to the full amount of what shall remain unpaid of the stipend, salary, or allowance specified in his licence; and the payment of what shall so remain unpaid, shall, together with treble costs of recovering the same, be enforced by monition, on proof of what shall so remain unpaid to the satisfaction of the bishop, and by sequestration of profits of the benefice, to be issued by the bishop for that purpose; provided that the application of the curate shall in every such case be made to the bishop within twelve months after he shall have acquitted his curacy, or by the representative of any curate within twelve months after his death; and provided also, that no sequestration shall, by virtue of this act, affect the profits of any benefice beyond the time during which the benefice shall be held by the person liable to make the payment in respect of which such profits shall be sequestered.

Agreements for salaries to curates contrary to this act, void.

“LXI. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which any bishop shall appoint for any curate a salary equal to the whole annual value of such benefice, such salary shall be subject to deduction in respect of all such charges and outgoings as may legally affect the value of such benefice, and to any loss or diminution which may lessen such value, without the wilful default or neglect of the spiritual person holding the benefice.

Curate's salary, if of the value of the benefice, shall be liable to certain charges.

“LXII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop, upon the application of any rector, vicar, or spiritual person holding any benefice, the whole profit or income of which shall have been allotted to the curate, to allow such rector, vicar, or spiritual person to deduct and retain therefrom, in any or each year, so much money, not exceeding in any case one-fourth part of such profits or income, or of the salary assigned to the curate, as shall have been actually laid out and expended during the year in the repair of the chancel, parsonage, vicarage, or other house of residence, and premises and appurtenances thereto belonging, in respect of which such rector, vicar, or person as aforesaid, or his executors, administrators, or assigns, would be liable for dilapidations to the successors; and it shall also be lawful for the bishop, in like manner, to allow any rector,

The bishop to allow the rector, &c. to deduct from curate's salary, for repairs to a limited amount, in certain cases.

4, c. 91. [12.]

vicar, or spiritual person aforesaid, having or holding any benefice, the profits or income of which shall not exceed one hundred and fifty pounds per annum, to deduct and retain from the salary allotted to the curate, in each or any year, so much money as shall have been actually laid out and expended in such repairs as aforesaid, over and above the amount of the surplus remaining of such profits or income, after payment of the salary allotted to the curate, so that the sum so deducted, after laying out such surplus, shall not in any year exceed one-fourth part of the salary allotted to the curate.

Curates may be directed to reside in parsonage house, in case of non-residence of incumbents.

“LXIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop who shall grant any licence to the curate to serve any church or chapel where the rector or vicar or person holding any benefice is not resident for four months in each year, to allot, if he shall think fit, for the residence of such curate, the parsonage or vicarage house, or usual house of residence of the person holding the benefice, with the offices, stables, gardens, and appurtenances thereto belonging, if there shall be any such house of residence belonging thereto, or any part or parts thereof, together with any portion of the glebe land of such benefice, not exceeding ten acres in the whole, during the time of such curate's serving the cure, or during the non-residence of such rector or vicar, or spiritual person; and it shall be lawful for the bishop assigning any such house or residence to any curate, to sequester the profits of the benefice to which the house shall belong, in any case in which possession shall not be given up to the curate, and until such possession shall be given, and to apply or direct the application of the profits arising from such sequestration, or to remit the same or any part thereof, as the bishop shall in his discretion think fit.

Curates to pay taxes of parsonage houses in certain cases.

“LXIV. And be it further enacted, that in every case where the bishop shall appoint, for the curate licensed to serve any benefice, a salary not less than the whole gross annual value of the same, and shall, in addition to such salary, direct that such curate shall reside in the parsonage or vicarage house, or usual house of residence of the spiritual person holding such benefice, such curate shall be liable during his serving such cure to the same taxes and parochial rates and assessments in respect of such house and the appendages thereof of which he may be so in occupation, and for the repairs of such house, and for any payments to the commissioners and trustees of the first-fruits of any sums payable out of or in respect of such benefice, as if he had been instituted or inducted, or nominated or appointed to the said benefice.

Bishop may direct the curate to give up possession of parsonage.

“LXV. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop at any time, upon three months' notice in writing, to direct any such curate to deliver up any such parsonage or vicarage house or usual house of residence, and the offices, stables, gardens, and appurtenances thereto belonging, and such curate shall thereupon peaceably deliver up the possession of the said premises, pursuant to such notice; and in case any such curate shall refuse to deliver up such premises, he shall forfeit and pay to the rector or vicar, or spiritual person holding the benefice, the sum of forty shillings for every day of such wrongful possession, to be recovered by such rector or vicar or spiritual person by action of debt in any court of record at Dublin, as any penalties may be recovered for non-residence under this act.

Rector, &c. shall not dispossess curate of house without order of the bishop, and three months' notice to curate; curate to quit in one month after institution to a vacant benefice, &c.

“LXVI. And be it further enacted, that it shall not be lawful for the rector or vicar or other person holding any benefice, in any case in which the parsonage or vicarage or usual house of residence shall have been assigned to the curate as a residence, to dispossess such curate or take possession thereof, until the permission of the bishop shall have been given in writing for that purpose, and three months' notice of such his intention to the curate, who shall thereupon quit the same according to such notice; and every curate who shall reside in the house of residence of any benefice which shall become vacant, shall quit such house of residence within three months after the institution or appointment of any spiritual person thereto, upon being required so to do by the spiritual person instituted or appointed, and having one month's previous notice at the least given him to quit such house of residence.

"LXVII. And be it further enacted, that no curate shall quit any benefice to which he shall be licensed, until after three months' notice of his intention to quit given to the person holding such benefice, and to the bishop of the diocese, unless with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, upon pain of forfeiting to the spiritual person holding the benefice, a sum not exceeding the amount of his stipend for six months, at the discretion of the bishop, which sum may in such case be retained out of the stipend, if the same or any part thereof shall remain unpaid, or if the same cannot be retained out of the stipend, may be recovered by the spiritual person holding the benefice, as any penalty or forfeiture under this act may be recovered.

STAT. 5 GEO. 4, c. 91. [1a.] Curate not to quit curacy assigned him without three months' notice to the incumbent and bishop, under a certain penalty.

"LXVIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese to license any curate who is or shall be actually employed by the rector, vicar, or other incumbent of any church or chapel, although no express nomination of such curate shall have been made to such bishop by the said rector, vicar, or other incumbent; and that the bishop shall have power to revoke summarily and without process any licence granted to any curate employed in his diocese, or subject to his jurisdiction by virtue of this act, and to remove such curate for any cause which shall appear to such bishop to be good and reasonable, subject nevertheless to an appeal to the archbishop of the province, and to be determined in a summary manner.

Bishop may license curates employed without nomination, revoke any licence, and remove curate, subject to appeal to the archbishop.

"LXIX. And be it further enacted, that every bishop who shall grant or revoke any licence to any curate under this act, shall and he is hereby required to cause a copy of such licence or revocation to be entered in the registry of the diocese within which the benefice in respect whereof any such licence shall be granted or revocation made shall be locally situate; and an alphabetical list of such licences and revocations shall be made out by the registrar of each diocese, and entered in a book, and kept for the inspection of all persons, upon payment of the sum of three shillings and no more; and a copy of every such licence and revocation, with respect to any benefice, shall be transmitted by the said registrar to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish, township, or place to which the same relates, within one month after the grant of such licence or revocation thereof, to be by them deposited in the parish chest; and every registrar who shall refuse or neglect or omit to make any such entry, or to transmit any such copy, shall forfeit for every such offence or neglect the sum of five pounds, to be recovered as any penalty or forfeiture may be recovered under this act: provided always, that every such registrar shall, for every such copy transmitted to such churchwardens or chapelwardens as aforesaid, be entitled to demand and have from such churchwardens or chapelwardens, a fee of ten shillings, and no more, and such fee shall be allowed in the accounts of such churchwardens or chapelwardens.

Licences to curates, and revocations of such licences, to be entered in the registry of the diocese.

Fee for inspection, 3s.

Copy of licences and revocation to be transmitted to churchwardens.

Fee, 10s.

"LXX. And be it further enacted, that all the powers, authorities, provisions, regulations, penalties, forfeitures, clauses, matters, and things in this act contained, in relation to bishops in their dioceses, shall extend and be construed to extend to the archbishops in the respective dioceses of which they are bishops, and also in their own peculiar jurisdictions, as fully and effectually as if the archbishops were named with the bishops in every such case.

Clauses relating to bishops to apply to archbishops in their dioceses.

"LXXI. And be it further enacted, that in all cases wherein the term benefice is used in this act, the said term shall be understood and taken to mean benefices with cure, and no others, and to comprehend therein, for the purposes of this act, all donatives, perpetual and impropriate curacies, and parochial chapelries.

Definition of the term benefice.

"LXXII. And be it further enacted, that every archbishop and bishop within the limits of whose province or diocese respectively any benefice respectively exempt or peculiar shall be locally situate, shall have, use, and exercise, all the powers and authorities necessary for the due execution by them respectively, of the provisions and purposes of this act, and for enforcing the same with regard thereto respectively, as such archbishop and bishop respectively would have used and exercised if the same were not exempt or peculiar, but were subject in all respects to the jurisdiction of such archbishop or bishop; and where any benefice exempt or peculiar shall be locally situate within the limits of more than one province or diocese, or where the same or any of them shall be locally situate between the limits of the two provinces, or between the limits of any two or more such dioceses, the archbishop or bishop of the cathedral church to whose province or diocese the parish church of the same respectively shall be nearest in local situation, shall have, use, and exercise, all the powers and authorities which are necessary for the due execution of the provisions of this act, and enforcing the same with regard thereto respectively, as such archbishop or bishop could have used if the same were not exempt or peculiar, but were subject in all respects to the jurisdiction of such archbishop or bishop respectively; and the same, for all the purposes of this act, shall be deemed and taken to be within the limits of the province or diocese of such archbishop or bishop; provided that the peculiars belonging to any archbishopric or bishopric, though locally situate in another diocese, shall continue subject to the archbishop or bishop to whom they belong, as well for the purposes of this act as for all other purposes of ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

“LXXIII. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which jurisdiction is given to the bishop of the diocese, or to any archbishop, under the provisions of this act, and for the purposes thereof, and the enforcing the due execution of the provisions thereof, all other and concurrent jurisdiction in respect thereof shall wholly cease, and no other jurisdiction in relation to the provisions of this act shall be used, exercised, or enforced, save and except such jurisdiction of the bishop and archbishop under this act; anything in any act or acts of parliament, or law or laws, or usage or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.

“LXXIV. And be it further enacted, that in all cases where proceedings under this act are directed by monition and sequestration, such monition shall issue under the hand and seal of the bishop, and being duly served shall be returned, with a certificate of service, into the registry of the consistorial court of such bishop; and thereupon it shall be competent for the party monished to show cause, by affidavit or otherwise, as the case may require, against the sequestration issuing; and unless sufficient cause be shown to the contrary, the sequestration shall issue under the seal of the said bishop, and in such form as is commonly used on that behalf.

“LXXV. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop of any diocese, in which any spiritual person shall hold any dignity or benefice, or shall serve as stipendary curate, to recover any penalty incurred under this act in a summary way, by monition and sequestration, to be issued in the manner by this act directed, with the like powers and authorities, and subject to the like restrictions in respect to the remission and repayment of such penalty as are by this act particularly provided, in respect to penalties for non-residence: provided always, that no spiritual person against whom any such proceeding shall have been had by any bishop for the recovery of any penalty, shall thereafter be subject to any action at law by any informer or other person, for the recovery of any penalty for the same offence, in respect of which such proceeding shall have been so had by the bishop as provided.

“LXXVI. And be it further enacted, that any fees, charges, costs, or expenses, incurred or directed to be paid by any spiritual person under the provisions of this act, which shall remain unpaid for the period of twenty-one days, after demand thereof in writing, delivered to or left at the usual or last place of abode of the spiritual person liable to the payment thereof, may be recovered by monition and sequestration, to be issued in the manner directed by this act.

“LXXVII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that none of the provisions of this act shall extend or be construed to extend to render void or invalid, before the thirty-first day of December next after the passing of this act, any licence or exemption which would have been otherwise valid and effectual, nor to require any licence to be taken before the said thirty-first day of December, which would not have been required by law before the passing of this act.

“LXXVIII. And be it further enacted, that no commission issued by any bishop to any commissary or commissaries appointed to administer the oaths required to be taken by any curate for the purpose of any licence or licences granted under the provisions of this act, shall be subject to any stamp duty; anything contained in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding.

“LXXIX. And be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to alter or affect his majesty's royal prerogative in the granting of dispensations for non-residence upon benefices, as the same now exists by law.

“LXXX. And be it further enacted, that no parsonage that hath a vicar endowed, or that hath a perpetual curate, and having no cure of souls, shall be deemed or taken to be a benefice within the intent and meaning of this act.

“LXXXI. And be it further enacted, that no archbishop or bishop having, or who shall have any benefice, shall, by reason of non-residence upon the same, be subject or liable to any penalties or forfeitures: provided always, that any archbishop or bishop, who shall hold any benefice in commendam with his archbishopric or bishopric, shall nominate and appoint a resident curate, according to the provisions of this act.

“LXXXII. And be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall be deemed, construed, or taken to derogate from, diminish, prejudice, alter, or affect, otherwise than is expressly provided, any powers, authorities, rights, or jurisdiction, already vested in or belonging to any archbishop or bishop, under or by virtue of any statute, patent, canon, usage, or otherwise, howsoever.

“LXXXIII. And be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to repeal or alter the provisions contained in any act of parliament, or any other provision of law, for the due celebration of divine service in any church or chapel, or for the discharge of any other duty of any rector or vicar, or person holding any benefice by himself or his curate.

“LXXXIV. And be it further enacted, that this act shall extend and be construed to extend and relate only to that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland.”

“VI. And be it further enacted, that the several and respective persons proposing to build or purchase any such church or chapel, or any such building as aforesaid, and their assigns, respectively subscribing for that purpose sums of not less than fifty pounds each, shall elect three trustees from amongst themselves for the management and general regulations of the temporal affairs of such church and chapel, and for the nomination to the bishop, for a limited period, of a spiritual person to serve the same; and such trustees shall be called life trustees of such church or chapel, and shall continue such trustees so long as any spiritual person nominated by them under the provisions of this act shall serve such church or chapel.

Upon death or resignation of life trustees, new ones may be chosen to supply the vacancy.

“VII. And be it further enacted, that in case any of the persons first appointed life trustees of any such church or chapel shall, during the period above mentioned, happen to die, or shall signify to the other life trustees his resignation of such trust, it shall be lawful for the majority of the persons who have subscribed towards the building or purchasing such church or chapel sums not less than fifty pounds each, and being owners or renters of pews in the same, who shall be present at any meeting to be called for that purpose, and which meeting any one or more of such trustees are hereby authorized and required to call and appoint, upon fourteen days' notice at the least being affixed to the door of such church or chapel upon the two Sundays next preceding the day on which such meeting is intended to be held, from time to time to nominate and appoint, by writing under their hands, any other person having subscribed a sum not less than fifty pounds, and being an owner or renter of a pew in such church or chapel, and a member of the church of England, a life trustee in the place of the life trustee so dying or resigning; and every such new life trustee shall in every respect be vested with such and the like powers and authorities, to all intents and purposes, as the person to whose place he may be nominated and appointed as aforesaid.

If subscribers do not exceed three, they are to be deemed

“VIII. And be it further enacted, that if the number of persons subscribing to build or purchase such church or chapel shall not exceed three, such person or persons shall be and be deemed to be the life trustee or life trustees of such church or chapel, under the provisions of this act, and shall have, use, and exercise all such and the like powers and authorities, to all intents and purposes, as any such life trustees as aforesaid, chosen under the provisions of this act, may use and exercise; and in case of the death or resignation of any such life trustee, the person nominated by him, being a member of the church of England, by his last will and testament, or by any instrument signed by him, shall be a life trustee in his place.

“IX. And be it further enacted, that in any case in which application shall be made to the bishop of any diocese for his consent to the building or purchasing any church or chapel, or buildings to be used as a church or chapel, in any parish, chapelry, township, or extra-parochial place, situate within the said diocese, for the purpose aforesaid, by any person or persons belonging to the church of England, who may be willing to subscribe one half part at the least of the money necessary for building or purchasing the same, jointly with the parishioners of such place, who may be willing to raise the remainder of the money by rates, or to raise and borrow such sum upon the credit of the rates of such place, and the said bishop shall be satisfied of the several particulars contained in such application, it shall be lawful for such bishop, if he shall think fit, to signify his consent thereunto.

“X. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that every application which shall be made under the provisions of this act to the bishop of any diocese shall state that the church or chapel is to be appropriated to the performance of divine service according to the rites of the church of England, and shall offer to set apart such number or proportion of free seats as is required by the said recited acts in cases in which churches or chapels are built or purchased under the provisions of the said recited acts, with any money advanced by the commissioners under the said recited acts, and shall also offer to provide, out of the pew rents arising from the remaining part of the seats of such church or chapel, a competent salary for the spiritual person who may officiate therein, and for all other expenses incident to the performance of such divine service, and for maintaining the said church or chapel: provided also, that no pew rents shall be taken, nor any service performed in such church or chapel, whether built or purchased by subscription only, or jointly by subscription and by rates, before the same shall have been duly consecrated, and a duplicate copy of such application, with the assent of the bishop of the diocese to the same, shall be deposited in such church or chapel.

“XI. And be it further enacted, that the persons or parishioners of any parish or place as aforesaid, making such application to the bishop, shall in every such case, at the time of making the same, give notice in writing thereof to the patron and incumbent of the church of the parish, chapelry, township, or extra-parochial place in which it is proposed to build or purchase any such church or chapel, in order to afford to such patron or incumbent the opportunity of laying before the bishop any statement in writing relating thereto, and that the said bishop shall not signify his consent to such application within three calendar months from the time when he shall have received the same, together with a certificate that the said notice has been given.

“XII. And be it further enacted, that the life trustee or trustees of any such church or chapel which shall be built or purchased by private subscription, may nominate for the first two turns which shall occur after the consecration of the church or chapel, or for any number of turns which may occur during the space of forty years after the same, to the bishop of the diocese, for his approbation and licence, a spiritual person to serve the same; and all subsequent nomination shall be in the incumbent of the parish or extra-parochial place in which such church or chapel shall be built or purchased; unless in case of such chapel being made a district church as hereinafter mentioned, in which case such subsequent nomination shall be in the patron of the church of the original parish; and in case of any neglect of any trustee or trustees, patron or incumbent respectively, to make such nomination, the same shall lapse, as in the case of actual benefices; and if all the subscribers entitled to elect trustees shall die before such nominations shall have been made, or such forty years shall have elapsed as aforesaid, then and in every such case the nomination shall be made by the incumbent during such period:

under this act, and may by deed or will appoint successors.

Bishop may consent, upon joint application of subscribers or parishioners, who may be willing to build a church or chapel by subscription and rates, or money borrowed upon the credit of the rates.

Application to the bishop shall state certain particulars as to service and free seats.

In every such case, notice of the application to the bishop to be given to the patron and incumbent of the church of the parish or place.

Life trustees to nominate for the first two turns, or for any number of turns which may occur in forty years, a minister of the church, &c.; subsequent nominations to be by incumbent, unless made a district church, then by patron.

“XIII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in any case in which any such church or chapel shall be built or purchased in part by means of any rates to be raised in any parish, chapelry, township, or extra-parochial place, the first and subsequent nominations of the minister of such church or chapel shall be in the incumbent of the church of the original parish in which the same shall be built or purchased, except in case of such church or chapel being made a district church, when the same shall vest in the patron as aforesaid.

“XIV. And be it further enacted, that from and after the completion of every such church or chapel, the land, ground, and site whereon the same shall be built, with the cemetery thereto belonging, if any, and which land, ground, and site shall be specified and described in the sentence of consecration of the church or chapel, shall be and the same are hereby declared to be vested in such person or persons, and their successors for ever, by such name and style as shall be specified in the sentence of consecration of the church or chapel; and such person or persons shall in every such case have perpetual succession in the name and style specified in the sentence of consecration, and shall hold the lands, grounds, and sites so vested in them as bodies corporate by such name and style, without incurring or being subjected to any of the penalties or forfeitures of the statute of mortmain, or of any other law or statute whatsoever, to the use, intent, and purpose that every such church or chapel, with the cemetery to the same, if any, shall, when consecrated, be for ever thereafter set apart and dedicated to the service of Almighty God as a place of divine worship, according to the liturgy and usages of the united church of England and Ireland as by law established, and be subject to the bishop of the diocese as such.

“XV. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the life trustees or churchwardens respectively of any such church or chapel, and their successors, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to sell and dispose of the vaults or burial places under any such church or chapel, and of vaults or burial grounds in the cemetery or yard of the church or chapel, if there shall be any cemetery or burial ground thereto; and such life trustees or churchwardens respectively are hereby empowered and required to pay to the incumbent of the parish such dues or sums as such incumbent would be entitled to and have of vaults or burial places of a like description in the church of the parish, and shall, after making such payments, invest or lay out the remainder of the monies thence arising in some public funds, stocks, or securities, from time to time, and also from time to time in like manner to lay out the interest, dividends, or proceeds of such public funds, stocks, or securities, or such part thereof as shall not be applied under the provisions of this act, in like funds, stocks, or public securities; and such life trustees, or churchwardens shall, out of such interest, dividends, or proceeds, from time to time make good any deficiencies, if any shall arise, in the payment of the stipends or salaries of the minister or clerk of the church or chapel, or any other payments or incidental expenses to be paid from the produce of the rents of pews or seats, by reason of the rents of pews not being adequate to the payment of such stipends, salaries, or expenses; and in the next place shall apply such interest, dividends, and proceeds in the maintaining, supporting, and repairing the church or chapel; provided always, that if by reason of any such funds, or if the produce of pew rents being more than sufficient for all the purposes to which the same are made applicable under the provisions of this act, there shall be a surplus of annual income, then and in any such case such surplus shall be applied in subsequent years to the purposes to which pew rents are applicable; and the pew rents shall in every such case be reduced rateably and in equal proportions, or a larger number of free seats shall be opened, as the bishop of the diocese shall order and direct.

“XVI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, with consent of a majority of the subscribers entitled to elect the trustees of any such church or chapel, and of the bishop, and of the patron and incumbent, to make any such church or chapel a district church or chapel, under the provisions of the said recited acts and this act.

“XVII. And be it further enacted, that at the expiration of the forty years all such churches and chapels shall become in all respects district churches, without any consent being obtained for that purpose, if his majesty in council shall have made a division of the parish or extra-parochial place for that purpose, in manner directed by the said recited acts, or shall remain parochial chapels if no such division and appropriation of any such churches or chapels to a district shall have been made.

“XVIII. And be it further enacted, that all the powers, authorities, provisions, regulations, clauses, penalties, and forfeitures in the said recited acts or any or either of them contained, for the securing, recovering, and paying the salaries of spiritual persons, and for the recovery of pew rents, and all regulations as to the number or proportions of free seats in churches or chapels built or purchased wholly or in part with money advanced by the commissioners under the provisions of the said recited acts, shall extend and be in full force, and be applied in all cases of any such churches or chapels as aforesaid being built or purchased by subscription or by rates, under the provisions of this act, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the same and each and every of them were severally and separately re-enacted and repeated in this act.

“XIX. And whereas doubts are entertained whether, since the duchy of Cornwall became vested in his majesty, any lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments, parcel of the said duchy, can be granted, conveyed, or enfranchised under the provisions of the said acts for the purposes thereof; and whereas an act passed in the third year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, ‘An Act to enable His Majesty to make Leases, Copies, and Grants of Offices, Lands, and Hereditaments, Parcel of the Duchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the same;’ be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for any three or more of the regular officers of the said duchy who by virtue of their several offices are concerned in the general superintendence and management of the revenue and affairs of the said duchy, and duly authorized by his majesty, under the provisions of the said last-recited act, by any deed or instrument under their hands and seals in the form prescribed by the said recited act of the third year of his present majesty, or as near thereto as circumstances will permit, to grant, convey, or enfranchise lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments for any such purposes of the said recited acts, or any or either of them, as are in the said acts or any or either of them specified, in relation to grants to be made by public departments under the said acts.”

The chief justice of the Common Pleas for the county palatine of Lancaster or Durham to act in cases of exchange under recited act.

"II. And whereas it is expedient that the incumbents of benefices, perpetual curacies, and parochial chapelries, should be enabled to exchange the glebe lands belonging to their benefices, perpetual curacies, or parochial chapelries, to a greater amount than thirty statute acres ; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, the power to exchange glebe lands for others of equal value, which is given to parsons, vicars, and other incumbents by the above recited act passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, be extended to any number of statute acres, but subject to all the provisions, conditions, and restrictions, contained in the above recited act, and also to those in another act passed in the fifty-sixth year of his late majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to amend and render more effectual an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament, for enabling Spiritual Persons to exchange their Parsonage Houses or Glebe Lands, and for other Purposes therein mentioned.'

Power to exchange glebe lands for others extended to any number of acres, subject to the restrictions contained in 55 Geo. 3, c. 147, and 56 Geo. 3, c. 52.

"III. And whereas, by the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, the powers of exchange thereby given are limited to such houses, outbuildings, yards, gardens, and appurtenances and lands, to be accepted and taken in exchange by the spiritual persons therein named, as are of freehold tenure, or copyhold of inheritance, or for life or lives, holden of any manor belonging to the benefice in respect of which any such exchange is intended to be made : and whereas it may happen that such exchanges may sometimes be beneficially made where the lands or tenements so to be accepted and taken in exchange are copyhold of inheritance, holden of some manor not

Exchanges may be made for lands or tenements that are copyhold, and not held of a manor belonging to the benefice, &c.

Provision for support of

"X. And whereas churches and chapels for the performance of divine service, according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, or of the church of Scotland, have been erected, and proper grounds have been appropriated and set apart for the interment of the dead, in divers foreign ports and places, and chaplains have been appointed for the performance of divine service in the said churches and chapels, and are now resident in such foreign ports and places; and it is expedient to afford encouragement for the support of the churches and chapels so erected as aforesaid, and to promote the erection of other churches and chapels in foreign ports and places to which his majesty's subjects may resort, and wherein they may be resident in considerable numbers, for the purposes of trade or otherwise; be it therefore enacted, that at any foreign port or place in which a chaplain is now, or shall at any future time be, resident and regularly employed in the celebration of divine service, according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, or of the church of Scotland, and maintained by any voluntary subscription or rate, levied among or upon his majesty's subjects resorting to or residing at such foreign port or place, or by any rate or duty levied under the authority of any of the acts hereinafter repealed, it shall and may be lawful for any consul-general or consul, in obedience to any order for that purpose issued by his majesty through one of his principal secretaries of state, to advance and pay from time to time, for and towards the maintenance and support of any such chaplain as aforesaid, or for and towards defraying the expenses incident to the due celebration of divine service in any such churches and chapels, or for and towards the maintaining any such burial grounds as aforesaid, or for and towards the interment of any of his majesty's subjects in any such burial grounds, any sum or sums of money, not exceeding in any one year the amount of the sum or sums of money which during that year may have been raised at such port or place for the said several purposes, or any of them, by any such voluntary subscription or rate as aforesaid; and every such consul-general or consul shall, once in each year, transmit to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, an account, made up to the thirty-first day of December, in the year next preceding, of all the sums of money actually raised at any such port or place as aforesaid, for the several purposes aforesaid, or any of them, by any such voluntary subscription or rate as aforesaid, and of all sums of money by him actually paid and expended for such purposes, or any of them, in obedience to any such orders as aforesaid, and which accounts shall by such principal secretary of state be transmitted to the lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of his majesty's treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being, who shall give to any such consul-general or consul as aforesaid, credit for all sums of money not exceeding the amount aforesaid, by them disbursed and expended in pursuance of any such order as aforesaid, for the purposes before mentioned, or any of them.

"XI. And be it further enacted, that in case any of his majesty's subjects shall by voluntary subscriptions among themselves raise and contribute such a sum of money as shall be requisite for defraying one half part of the expense of erecting, purchasing, or hiring, any church, or chapel, or building, to be appropriated for the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, or of the church of Scotland, or for defraying one half part of the expense of erecting, purchasing, or hiring, any building to be used as a hospital for the reception of his majesty's subjects, or for defraying one half of the expense of purchasing or hiring any ground to be used as a place of interment for his majesty's subjects at any foreign port or place wherein any consul-general or consul appointed by his majesty, shall be resident, then and in any such case it shall and may be lawful for such consul-general or consul, in obedience to any order to be for that purpose issued by his majesty through one of his principal secretaries of state, to advance and pay, for and towards the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole in any one year the amount of the money raised in that year by any such voluntary contribution as aforesaid; and every such consul-general or consul as aforesaid shall in like manner once in every year transmit to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state an account, made up to the thirty-first day of December in the year next preceding, of all the sums of

"XII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that no such order shall be issued as aforesaid through any of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, authorizing the expenditure of money for the erection, purchase, or hiring, of any such new church or chapel, or hospital, as aforesaid, or for the purchase or hiring of any such new burial ground as aforesaid, unless and until such consul-general or consul shall first have transmitted to his majesty, through one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, the plan of such intended church or chapel, hospital, or burial ground, with an estimate, upon the oath of some one or more competent person or persons, stating the probable expense of, and incident to the erection, purchase, or hiring, of any such church, chapel, hospital, or burying ground, as aforesaid, and unless and until his majesty shall have signified through one of his said principal secretaries of state, his approbation of the said plan and estimate: provided also, that no money shall actually be disbursed by any such consul-general or consul as aforesaid, for any of the purposes aforesaid, unless and until the money to be raised by any such voluntary subscription as aforesaid be actually paid up and invested in some public or other sufficient security, in the joint names of such consul-general or consuls and two trustees appointed for that purpose by the persons subscribing the same, or unless and until two or more of such subscribers shall enter into good and sufficient security to his majesty, by bond or otherwise, that the amount of such subscriptions shall actually be paid for the purposes aforesaid, by a certain day to be specified in every such bond or security, and which bond or security shall be preserved in the office of such consul-general or consul, and shall by him be cancelled and delivered back to the parties entering into the same, their heirs, executors, or administrators, when and so soon as the conditions thereof shall be fully performed and satisfied.

"XIII. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that the whole salary of any chaplain heretofore appointed or to be appointed to officiate in any such church or chapel in any foreign port or place in Europe, shall not exceed in the whole five hundred pounds by the year, or in any foreign port or place not in Europe, eight hundred pounds by the year: provided also, that all such chaplains shall be appointed to officiate as aforesaid, by his majesty, through one of his principal secretaries of state, and shall hold such their offices for and during his majesty's pleasure, and no longer.

"XIV. And be it further enacted, that all consuls-general and consuls appointed by his majesty to reside and being resident at any foreign port or place wherein any such church or chapel, or other place appropriated for the celebration of divine worship, or hospital, or any such burial ground as aforesaid, hath heretofore been or shall hereafter be erected, purchased, or hired, by the aid of any voluntary subscription or rates collected by or imposed upon his majesty's subjects, or some person or persons for that purpose duly authorized by any writing under the hand and seal of any such consul-general or consul, shall, once at the least in every year, and more frequently if occasion shall require, by public advertisement, or in such other manner as may be best adapted for insuring publicity, convene and summon a meeting of all his majesty's subjects residing at such foreign port or place as aforesaid, to be holden at the public office of such consul-general or consul, at some time, not more than fourteen days nor less than seven days next after the publication of any such summons; and it shall and may be lawful for all his majesty's subjects residing or being at any such foreign port or place as aforesaid, at the time of any such meeting, and who shall have subscribed any sum or sums of money not less than twenty pounds in the whole nor less than three pounds by the year, for or towards the purposes before mentioned, or any of them, and have paid up the amount of such their subscriptions, to be present and vote at any such meetings; and such consuls-general or consuls shall preside at all such meetings; and in the event of the absence of any such consuls-general or consuls the subscribers present at any such meeting shall, before proceeding to the despatch of business, nominate one of their number to preside at such meeting; and all questions proposed by the consul-general, consul, or person so nominated as aforesaid to preside in his absence, to any such meeting, shall be decided by the votes of the majority in number of the persons attending and being present thereat; and in the event of the number of such votes being equally divided, the consul-general, consul, or person so presiding in his absence, shall give a casting vote.

"II. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of his majesty's treasury of the United Kingdom for the time being, or any three or more of them, and they are hereby authorized and required from time to time, by warrant or warrants under their hands, to direct the proper officer of the exchequer to issue and pay, out of the growing produce of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to such person or persons as may be appointed to receive the same, all and every such sums and sum of money as may from time to time be necessary for the payment of all or any of the several salaries or annual sums made payable by this act, which may have accrued respectively at any time before the passing of this act, or which may from time to time accrue and become due and payable at any time after the passing of this act.

"III. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for his majesty, his heirs and successors, by any letters patent under the great seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to give and grant unto any person who may or shall execute the office of bishop of the diocese of Jamaica, or the office of bishop of the diocese of Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands respectively, and who shall resign the same respectively, an annuity or yearly sum of money not exceeding the sum of one thousand pounds to any such bishop respectively, to commence and take effect immediately from and after the period whenever the person to whom such annuity or yearly sum of money shall be granted shall resign or shall have resigned the said offices respectively, and to continue from thenceforth for and during the natural life of the person to whom such annuity shall be granted as aforesaid; and such annuity or yearly sum shall be issued and payable out of and charged and chargeable upon the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, next in order of payment to and after paying and reserving sufficient to pay all such sum and sums of money as have been directed by any former act or acts of parliament to be paid out of the same, but with preference to all other payments which shall and may be charged upon or payable out of the said fund; and such annuity or yearly sum shall from time to time be paid and payable quarterly, free and clear of all taxes and deductions whatsoever, at the four usual days of payment in the year; that is to say, the fifth day of January, fifth day of April, fifth day of July, and the tenth day of October, in each and every year, by even and equal portions, the first payment to be made on such of the said days as shall happen next after such resignation as aforesaid of the said office: provided always, that no such annuity or yearly sum of money granted to any person having executed either of the said offices respectively, shall be valid, unless such persons shall have continued in the said office for the period of ten years, or shall be afflicted with some permanent infirmity, disabling him from the due execution of his office of bishop, which shall be distinctly recited in the said grant.

"An Act for making the four Districts in the Parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, in the County of Middlesex, District Rectories for certain Purposes."

1 & 2 Geo. 4,
c. xxi.

"Whereas an act passed in the first and second years of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act to enable the Vestrymen of the Parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, in the County of Middlesex, to effectuate the building of Four District Churches in the said Parish; and for other Purposes relating thereto:' and whereas by the said act the commissioners for building and promoting the building of additional churches were empowered to build four district churches in the said parish of Saint Mary-le-bone: and whereas it was thereby enacted that it should be lawful for the said commissioners, with such consent as therein mentioned, to assign a particular district to each and every or any of the said district churches, such assignment to be confirmed by his majesty in council, and that each division or district should be under the immediate care of the respective district ministers, so far as relates to visiting and administering the sacrament to the sick at their own habitations, and churching of women: and it was also by the said recited act enacted, that each district minister so to be appointed as aforesaid should perform divine service, and preach, and administer the holy sacrament in the district church of which he should be minister, as therein mentioned; and should perform all parochial duties belonging to the function of a minister, save and except the publication of banns, the solemnization of matrimony, and baptisms; and it should be lawful for the said district ministers to receive, demand, and take the Easter dues or offerings and the surplice fees to arise, accrue, and become payable within each of their respective districts (save and except as therein mentioned): and it was by the said recited act further enacted, that all publication of banns, and all marriages, and also baptisms, in the said parish of Saint Mary-le-bone (including the said four districts), should be performed at the then parish church as the same were then done, and at no other place; and that all fees for the same respectively should be paid to the incumbent minister or rector of the said parish: provided that nothing therein contained should extend to exempt any such district ministers from the duty of performing private baptisms in their respective districts, when duly required so to do: and whereas, in pursuance of the powers and provisions of the said recited act, a district church has been built in Wyndham place, in the said parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, and duly consecrated, and a district minister has been thereunto appointed, and a district duly assigned to the same: and whereas one other district church has been built in Langham place, in the said parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, and duly consecrated, and a district minister has been thereunto appointed, and a district duly assigned to the same: and whereas one other district church has been built and duly consecrated in Stafford street, in the said parish, and a district minister has been thereunto appointed, and a district duly assigned to him: and whereas one other district has been assigned in the eastern part of the said parish, and a site provided therein for a church in Osnaburgh street, and preparations are made for speedily erecting the same: and whereas it appears fit and expedient, for the better carrying into effect the pious and benevolent purposes for which the said recited act was framed, that the said districts should be more fully and completely appropriated for ecclesiastical purposes, and names given thereto, and other and further duties performed therein by the district ministers respectively: and whereas the king's most excellent majesty, in right of his crown, is the patron of the rectory and parish church of the said parish, may it therefore please your majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act, so much of the said recited act as prohibits the district ministers of the said four districts from publication of banns, or the solemnization of marriages and baptisms, and from taking the surplice fees due and arising and accruing therefrom, and also so much of the said recited act as enacts that all publication of banns, and all marriages and baptisms, in the said parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, (including the said four districts,) shall be performed at the present parish church, as the same were then done, and at no other place, and that all fees for the same respectively should be paid to the incumbent minister or rector of the parish, so far as the same comprises or relates to the said four districts, shall be and the same are hereby repealed.

" II. And be it further enacted, that the aforesaid four districts, and the respective churches built and to be built therein, shall be severally known and distinguished by the names following; (that is to say,) the church situate in Wyndham place shall be called by the name of 'Saint Mary's Church in Saint Mary-le-bone,' and the district belonging thereto shall be called 'The District Rectory of Saint Mary in Saint Mary-le-bone,' and the incumbent minister thereof shall be called and denominated the district rector thereof; and the church situate in Langham place shall be called by the name of 'All Souls' Church in Saint Mary-le-bone,' and the district belonging thereto shall be called by the name of 'The District Rectory of All Souls in Saint Mary-le-bone,' and the incumbent minister thereof shall be called and denominated the district rector thereof; and the church situate in Stafford street shall be called by the name of 'Christ Church in Saint Mary-le-bone,' and the district belonging thereto shall be called by the name of 'The District Rec-

" III. And it is hereby further enacted, that neither of the churches of the said district rectories shall be tenable with the original parish church, nor with either of the churches of the other said district rectories.

" IV. And be it further enacted, that the said several four districts so made and ascertained, and marked out by described bounds, and made distinct and separate district rectories by this act, and the description of the bounds thereof respectively, shall be enrolled in the high court of Chancery, and be registered in the office of the registry of the diocese; and a correct copy of the description of such districts, and of the respective boundaries thereof, shall be printed or painted in legible characters, and hung up in the vestry room of the said parish of Saint Mary-le-bone; and a copy of each of such districts, and of the description of the boundaries thereof, shall be kept in the chest of the church of the district rectory with the books of registers of the church; and another copy shall be printed or painted in some conspicuous place of the church of the district rectory, so as to be accessible at all seasonable times to every person desirous of inspecting the same.

" V. And be it further enacted, that after the passing of this act, the Lord Bishop of the diocese of London for the time being shall, and the said lord bishop is hereby authorized and required forthwith, as soon as the same can be done, to certify the passing of this act to the incumbent minister of each of the four district rectories of the said parish; and public notice shall be given in the church of the parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, and also in each of the churches of the said district rectories, on the Sunday succeeding the receipt by such minister as aforesaid of such certificate, that thereafter banns may be published, and marriages and christenings may be solemnized and had in the church of such district rectories respectively, as directed by this act; and such certificates respectively shall be kept in the respective chests of the churches of each of the said district rectories, with the books of registry thereof, and a copy thereof shall be entered in the books of registry of banns and marriages, and a duplicate of such certificate shall be registered in the registry of the diocese; and such certificate shall be deemed and taken to be conclusive evidence in all courts, and in all questions relating to any banns published, or marriages celebrated or solemnized in any such church, that the same might, according to law, respectively be published and celebrated and solemnized in such church; and that all banns published, and marriages celebrated, solemnized, and had, in any such church, according to the laws and canons in force within this realm in that behalf, shall, after the granting of such certificate, be good, valid, legal, and effectual, to all intents and purposes whatsoever: provided always, that no banns or marriages respectively published, celebrated, solemnized, or had, according to the laws and canons in force within the realm in that behalf in any such church, after the same are allowed by this act to be solemnized therein, shall be or be deemed or taken to be invalid or illegal, or void or voidable, by reason of any such certificate not having been duly given, or registered, or entered, as hereinbefore required: provided always, that until the church intended to be built in Osnaburgh street, and directed by this act to be called 'Trinity Church,' shall be consecrated, all banns of marriages and baptisms within the district assigned to the said church, which is by this act directed to be called 'Trinity District Rectory,' shall respectively be published, solemnized, and had, in the present parish church, as the same are now done; and all fees for the same respectively shall be paid to the minister or rector of the said parish church.

"VI. And be it further enacted, that from and after the receipt of such certificate and notice given as aforesaid, (and not before,) it shall be lawful for the ministers of the churches of the said district rectories respectively, to publish all banns, and solemnize all marriages, either by banns or licence, and administer all baptisms in the churches of their said district rectories respectively, and to perform all other parochial functions of a minister, in the same manner as the incumbent minister or rector of Saint Mary-le-bone is now by law empowered to do, and also to take all fees for the same respectively, (save and except as hereinafter mentioned with respect to burials.)

4, c. 124.

District ministers empowered to publish banns, marry, and baptize, in their several districts.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that all banns and marriages so published and solemnized in the churches of the said district rectories shall be in all respects and for all purposes valid and effectual, as if such banns and marriages had been published and solemnized in the parish church, and the churches shall be considered as the proper churches for the publication of banns and the solemnization of marriage of all persons residing within the said district rectories respectively, in the place of the said parish church, and the banns and marriages of all such persons shall be published and solemnized in the church of the district rectory in which they reside, subject to all the laws, restrictions, and penalties now in force, or that may be hereafter enacted respecting the publication of banns and the solemnization of marriage of persons residing in any separate and distinct parish.

Banns and marriages so published and solemnized shall be valid.

"VIII. And be it further enacted, that all acts of parliament, and laws and customs, relating to publishing of banns of marriage, marriages, christenings, and churchings, and the registering thereof, and to all ecclesiastical fees, oblations, or offerings, shall apply to all such district rectories, and the churches thereof, when and so soon as banns of marriage shall be allowed to be published, and marriages, christenings, and churchings, or any of them, shall be allowed to be solemnized therein, and to the ecclesiastical persons having cure of souls therein, or serving the same, in like manner in every respect as if the same respectively had been ancient, separate, and distinct parishes and parish churches by law, to all intents and purposes.

All acts of parliament, &c. relating to publishing banns of marriage, &c. to apply to all such districts and churches.

"IX. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall be deemed, taken, or construed to alter or in any way affect the law respecting burials to be performed within the parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, and the burial fees thereof, as settled or declared by the aforesaid act, or by any other act or law now in force concerning the same.

Law respecting burials not to be altered.

"X. And be it further enacted, that the said parish of Saint Mary-le-bone, including the said four district rectories, shall continue to be one whole and entire parish, for all purposes other than and except ecclesiastical purposes, as herein declared; and that the powers of the vestrymen of the said parish shall remain and continue to be the same in all respects as they are or were before the passing of this act, and they are hereby empowered to carry this act into execution, as if the several clauses hereof had formed part of the said recited act.

Parish of Saint Mary-le-bone one parish, except for ecclesiastical purposes. Powers of vestrymen not altered. Trinity district.

"XI. Provided always nevertheless, that this act shall have no effect as to the said district rectory to be called 'Trinity District Rectory,' until the consecration of the church in such district.

"XII. And be it further enacted, that this act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices, and others, without being specially pleaded."

"An Act for remedying Inconveniences in the Administration of Justice, arising from the present Vacancy of the See of Durham, and for preventing the like in future."

"Whereas the office of sheriff in the county palatine of Durham is held by grant of the Bishop of Durham for the time being, during the pleasure of the same bishop, and the see of Durham is now vacant by the decease of the late bishop thereof; and by reason of his decease the said office of sheriff hath also become vacant, and there was no officer legally authorized to return jurors or to execute writs at the general quarter session of the peace for the said county palatine in the week after the clause of Easter; and it is necessary to provide a remedy for the inconveniences which may ensue therefrom, and in other respects from the vacancy of the said office of sheriff; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the last sheriff of the said county palatine, his deputy or deputies, and all other officers and ministers of justice within the same, whose offices determined on the decease of the late bishop of the said see, shall be and they are hereby continued in their respective offices from the decease of the said late bishop for the term of six calendar months thence next ensuing, in as full and ample manner to all intents and purposes as if the said see had not become vacant, unless the succeeding bishop of the said see shall sooner determine the same or any of them; and that the said sheriff, officers, and minister respectively, shall have the like power and authority of executing and returning all writs and precepts to him or them directed or to be directed, and of doing all other acts to their respective offices appertaining, as fully and effectually as if the said see had not become vacant; and that all trials and other proceedings had and taken, or to be had and taken, in the court of quarter session holden for the said county palatine in the week after the clause of Easter, or at any adjournment thereof, and all judgments and orders there pronounced and made, and all sentences and punishments there passed and awarded, shall be good, valid, and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding; provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to legalize or render valid any act which would not have been legal or valid if the said see had not become vacant.

The last sheriff, &c. of Durham to continue in office for six months from the decease of the late bishop, unless succeeding bishop shall sooner determine the same.

Proceedings at the last Easter quarter session valid.

Determination of grants of office hereafter to be made by any Bishop of Durham.

"II. And whereas by an act passed in the third year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to amend two Acts of the fifty-seventh year of His late Majesty and the first year of His present Majesty, for authorizing the Issue of Exchequer Bills and the Advance of Money for carrying on Public Works and Fisheries, and Employment of the Poor, and to authorize a further Issue of Exchequer Bills for the Purposes of the said Acts;' and also by an act made in the sixth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to render more effectual the several Acts for authorizing Advances for carrying on Public Works, so far as relates to Ireland;' the commissioners for the execution of the said recited acts are directed to take interest at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum, upon any advances to be made by them under and by virtue of the said acts, and the several acts therein recited or referred to; and whereas it is expedient that from and after the passing of this act the said commissioners should be authorized and empowered to take and charge interest at the rate of five pounds per centum per annum upon all advances made by them in Great Britain or Ireland; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized and required, to take interest at and after the rate of five pounds per centum per annum on any loans or advances to be made by them, either in Great Britain or Ireland, at any time after the passing of this act; anything contained in the said recited acts to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

"III. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to extend, to alter, lessen, or abridge the powers given to or vested in the commissioners of his majesty's treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, by an act passed in the fifth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to amend the Acts for the Issue of Exchequer Bills for Public Works,' as explained and amended by the said recited act of the sixth year of his majesty's reign, to reduce the rate of interest in the manner and under the circumstances in the said acts particularly stated and referred to.

"IV. And whereas it is expedient to extend the provisions of the said recited act of the sixth year of his present majesty's reign, for rendering more effectual the several acts for authorizing advances for carrying on public works, so far as relates to Ireland, and to enable the said commissioners for the execution of the said act to make advances in Ireland to any archbishop, bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, for providing suitable or more convenient residences; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners for the execution of the said recited act, upon application in writing being made to them in that behalf, by any archbishop or bishop, or other ecclesiastical person in Ireland, to lend and advance to such archbishop or bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, out of the sum of three hundred thousand pounds, by the said act authorized to be issued out of the growing produce of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom arising in Ireland, such sum or sums of money as the said commissioners shall think fit, for the purpose of purchasing, within the diocese or benefice of any such archbishop, bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, any land upon which any house or houses, or offices or other buildings, have been already built, with conveniences thereto belonging; or any land fit for building a house, offices, and conveniences thereon, for the habitation and residence of any such archbishop, bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, and their respective successors for ever, or any land, tenements, or hereditaments, for the purpose of repairing, enlarging, or improving any house or houses, outhouses, gardens, or orchards, of or belonging to the demesne, glebe or mensal land, or any other lands, of such archbishop, bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, or for otherwise providing suitable or

At vestries called for repairing, &c. of church, providing requisites for divine service, making rates, &c. no other matter shall be proceeded on, nor Roman catholics be capable of voting.

"II. And be it further enacted, that whenever any vestry shall be called or holden in any parish, union, or chapelry in Ireland, respecting or relating to all or any of the following purposes, namely, the building, rebuilding, enlarging, or repairing of the church or chapel of any parish, union, or chapelry, the providing things necessary for the celebration of divine service therein, as required and authorized by any rubric or canon in force in England or Ireland, the election of the churchwardens or chapelwardens, the settling of the salary for maintenance of the parish clerk or sexton, or the clerk of any chapelry or chapel of ease, or the making any rate to defray the expenses of such building, rebuilding, enlarging, or repairing, or other necessary charges, or any of them, or respecting or relating to the letting or demising of any estate, or the disposal of the income of any estate, or any part thereof, belonging to or held in trust for the church or chapel or parish, no other matter shall be proceeded upon at such vestry, save and except the matters aforesaid, or some of them, for the purpose of which such vestry shall be held; and that no inhabitant of such parish, being a Roman catholic, shall be capable of voting at such vestry holden for such purposes as aforesaid.

At vestries held for any other purposes, all parishioners may vote.

"III. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in all cases whatever where any vestry shall be called or holden in any parish, union, or chapelry, for any purposes other than and save and except the several purposes and matters hereinbefore specially mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for every parishioner, of whatever religious persuasion he may be, who shall be chargeable to the church rates or cess in such parish, union, or chapelry, and not disabled by law, to vote at such vestry respecting every matter or business therein brought forward.

No vestry shall be held without public notice.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that no vestry or meeting of inhabitants in vestry of or for any parish, chapelry, or union of parishes, shall be holden for any purpose whatever, save and except for the purpose of applotting such assessments as may be ordered by any grand jury to be levied on such parish, chapelry, or union, until public notice shall have been given of such vestry, and of the place and hour of holding the same, and of the special purpose thereof, seven days at the least before the day to be appointed for holding such vestry, by the publication of such notice in the parish church or chapel on some Sunday during or immediately after divine service, and by affixing a copy of such notice on the principal door of such church or chapel, and on the door of some one meeting house for religious worship of the Presbyterian congregation, if any, within such parish, chapelry, or union; and that no such vestry or meeting shall be holden for any purpose respecting which Roman catholics shall be capable of voting, until such notice shall have been given in manner aforesaid, and also by affixing another copy of such notice on the doors of some one Roman catholic chapel within such parish, chapelry, or union.

4, c. 72. [18.]

“V. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that if it shall happen that there shall not be any parish church or chapel within any such parish or chapelry or union, or that there shall not be any church or chapel fit for the celebration of divine worship within such parish, chapelry, or union, the posting up of a notice of such vestry on some conspicuous public place in the market town wherein or nearest to the place wherein such vestry shall be intended to be held, and the delivering three true copies of such notice to three householders of such parish, chapelry, or union respectively, shall be deemed sufficient notice of every such vestry; and the notices required and directed by this act shall be good and sufficient notices of vestries required or authorized to be holden by law for any purpose whatsoever.

Where there is no parish church, notices shall be posted in nearest market town, and copies delivered to three householders.

“VI. And be it further enacted, that from and after the commencement of this act, no person professing the Roman catholic religion shall be compelled or compellable to fill or serve the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden of or in any parish, chapelry, or union in Ireland, either in person or by deputy; anything in any act or acts in force in Ireland, or any law, custom, or usage, to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

Roman catholics not compellable to serve the office of churchwarden.

“VII. And for the more orderly conduct of vestries, be it further enacted, that in case the incumbent or curate, or minister acting as curate of any parish, union, or chapelry, shall be present at any vestry, it shall be lawful for such incumbent, curate, or minister to sit and act as chairman of such vestry; and in case such incumbent, curate, or minister shall not be present at such vestry, then it shall be lawful for the inhabitants present and entitled to vote at such vestry, to elect and appoint any person to be chairman of such vestry, who shall be of the full age of twenty-one years, and entitled to vote at such vestry, and who shall for one year next immediately preceding the holding of such vestry have been assessed and charged with and shall have paid parish rates, and such person shall act as chairman, and shall preside at such vestry accordingly; and in cases of equality of votes upon any question arising at such vestry, the chairman shall, in addition to such vote as he may be entitled to give as incumbent, curate, minister, or inhabitant of such parish, union, or chapelry, have the casting vote; and minutes of the proceedings, resolutions, and acts of every such vestry shall be fairly and distinctly entered in the vestry book of the parish, or in a book to be provided for the purpose, at the expense of the parish, union, or chapelry, by the churchwarden or chapelwarden, and shall be signed by the incumbent, curate, minister, or other chairman, or by the churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden, and by such other inhabitants, present and qualified to vote at such vestry, as shall think fit to sign the same.

Incumbent shall be chairman of vestry, unless absent, in which case another chairman may be chosen.

Chairman to have casting vote.

Minutes of vestry.

“VIII. And be it further enacted, that as well the vestry book required to be kept by this act, as also all former vestry books, and other parish books, and all rates, assessments, and applotments, accounts, and vouchers of churchwardens and chapelwardens, and other parish officers, and all other deeds, writings, public papers or documents whatever, of or belonging or relating to any parish, union, or chapelry in Ireland, save and except such as relate to the composition for tithes, shall be from time to time deposited with and kept and preserved by the incumbent of such parish, union, or chapelry, or in such place and manner, or by such person or persons, as such incumbent shall direct and appoint; and if any person in whose hands or custody any such books, rates, assessments, applotments, accounts, and vouchers, deeds, writings, papers, or documents, shall be, shall wilfully or negligently destroy, obliterate, or injure the same or any of them, or shall permit or suffer the same or any of them to be destroyed, obliterated, or injured, or after reasonable notice and demand shall refuse or neglect to deliver over the same to such person or persons as may be appointed to have the care or custody of the same, or to receive the same, or shall refuse or neglect to deposit the same in such place as shall by the order of any such incumbent be directed, every person so offending, and being lawfully convicted thereof, by confession or on the oath of one or more credible witnesses or witnesses, by and before two of his majesty's justices of the peace, upon complaint thereof to them made, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding twenty pounds nor less than forty shillings, as shall by such justices be adjudged and determined, and the same shall be recovered and levied by warrant of such justices, in such manner and by such ways and means as costs in the cases hereafter mentioned are to be and may be recovered and levied by warrant, and applied to the use of the parish, union, or chapelry: provided always, that if any person shall unlawfully retain any such books, rates, assessments, applotments, accounts, vouchers, deeds, writings, papers, or documents, or shall refuse or neglect to deliver the same or any of them, to any person or persons authorized to receive the same as aforesaid, or shall obliterate, destroy, or injure the same or any of them, or shall permit or suffer the same to be obliterated, destroyed, or injured, every such offender may in every such case be proceeded against in any of his majesty's courts, civilly or criminally, in like manner as if this act had not been made.

"IX. And be it further enacted, that in all cases where, under and by virtue of any of the provisions contained in the said act of the fourth year of his present majesty's reign, for amending the laws for collecting church rates and money advanced by the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of ecclesiastical benefices, and for the improvement of church lands in Ireland, any parish, union, or chapelry, or any district or portion thereof, can and may be lawfully assessed and rated to contribute for or towards the building, enlarging, or repairing of any church or chapel, or the providing necessary charges belonging to the same, it shall be lawful for the inhabitants of every such parish, union, or chapelry, or any district or portion thereof, (if otherwise duly qualified,) during such time and so long as they shall respectively be bound to contribute to such cesses and rates according to the provisions of the said recited act, and no longer, to vote at all vestries to be held for or in respect of the assessment and applotment of the sum or sums respectively to or in respect whereof such contribution is to be made, and also (if duly qualified) to vote in the election of the churchwardens and chapelwardens, and in the settlement of the accounts of such churchwardens and chapelwardens, and also in the election of the other parish officers of the parishes respectively to the cesses and rates whereof they are or shall be so bound and liable to contribute respectively as aforesaid, as if they were respectively inhabitants of the same parishes respectively; and such inhabitants shall also be eligible to the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden in such parish, chapelry, or union, anything in the said recited act to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall entitle any such inhabitant to vote at any vestry at which any such inhabitant is or may be by this present act or any other act expressly disqualified from voting.

"X. And whereas doubts have been entertained whether any assessments can be lawfully made of any sums for providing coffins for the interment of poor persons dying in any parish, union, or chapelry in Ireland; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the commencement of this act assessments may be lawfully made for such purposes: provided always, that no sum or sums shall be expended by any churchwarden or chapelwarden of any parish, union, or chapelry, for any such purposes, unless a certificate be first given to such churchwarden or chapelwarden, signed by six or more householders who are rated to and shall have paid the parish cess in such parish, union, or chapelry, of whom a justice of the peace

(if any such be resident within the parish) shall be one, that in their opinion it is proper and necessary that such coffins shall be respectively so provided at the expense of such parish, union, or chapelry, and that the relatives of the deceased have not the means to defray the expense thereof.

"XI. And be it further enacted, that every assessment of any sum or sums for or in respect of all or any of the matters in this present act mentioned, including salaries for parish officers, shall be made in Easter week : provided always, that if in any case such assessment shall not have been made in Easter week, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese in which such parish, chapelry, or union shall be situate, to appoint any other day and time for the making of any such assessment, to be signified and directed in writing by such bishop to the churchwardens or churchwarden of any parish, chapelry, or union ; and that any assessment of any sum or sums for or towards the repairs of churches or chapels, or providing all things necessary for the celebration of divine service therein, may be also made at all other times of the year when and as it shall be necessary ; and that no assessment shall be allowed at any vestry hereafter to be held, as for incidental expenses, or for contingencies generally, or for any purpose, matter or thing not specified in such assessment ; and that all and every the sums assessed and applotted shall be applied to the uses and purposes respectively in the respective assessments mentioned, or by this act authorized or directed, and none other.

"XII. And be it further enacted, that from and after the commencement of this act, no appeal shall be made to or received by any ecclesiastical judge against any rate or assessment or applotment made in any parish, union, or chapelry, or anything therein contained ; nor shall the same be drawn in question by or before any ecclesiastical jurisdiction ; nor shall any suit be commenced before any ecclesiastical judge, for the recovery of any sum so assessed or applotted at any vestry.

"XIII. And be it further enacted, that whenever any assessment or tax shall have been made, agreed upon, and imposed at any vestry, for or in respect of any matters or things which may by this act, or any other act or acts of parliament now in force or hereafter to be made, be assessed upon any parish, chapelry, or union, the major part of the inhabitants present and qualified to vote at such vestry, shall at such vestry appoint the churchwardens or chapelwardens, or one of such churchwardens or chapelwardens, together with some other person or persons, or any two or more persons, not being churchwardens or chapelwardens, duly to applot the sums so assessed upon the inhabitants of any such parish, union, or chapelry, according to the respective values of their lands and tenements within such parish, union, or chapelry ; and that the churchwardens or chapelwardens of every such parish, chapelry, or union, shall afterwards give public notice of the same, by causing a true and correct copy of such rate or assessment, containing the names of such applotters, signed by the incumbent or curate, or minister acting as such, or other person who presided at such vestry, or by the churchwardens or chapelwardens, or one of them, to be posted and affixed, within three days next after the making of such rate or assessment (excluding the day of the making thereof) on the outer door of every church or chapel in such parish, chapelry, or union, and on the door of some one Roman catholic chapel and presbyterian meeting house, if any, within the same ; and if there be no church or chapel within such parish, chapelry, or union, or no church or chapel fit for the celebration of divine service, then on some conspicuous place in the market town wherein or nearest whereto such last-mentioned vestry shall have been holden, and by delivering three true copies of the same, signed as aforesaid, to three householders of such parish, chapelry, or union respectively.

"XIV. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for any inhabitant or inhabitants of any such parish, chapelry, or union, liable to the payment of any parish cesses, (of whatever religious persuasion any such inhabitant or inhabitants may be,) within fourteen days next after the expiration of the said three days by this act allowed for the posting of the copy of such rate or assessment as aforesaid, and exclusive of such three days, to appeal to the justices of the peace at the first general or quarter sessions of the peace or adjournment thereof, which shall be holden next after the end and expiration of the said term of fourteen days, for the county, county of a city, town, or place wherein the said vestry was held, against any such rate or assessment generally, or on account of the illegality or excess of any item or charge, salary or allowance therein mentioned: provided always, that all and every persons and person so appealing shall first give notice in writing, signed with the names and in the handwriting of all and every the persons or person so appealing, to the incumbent or curate, or to both or one of the churchwardens or chapelwardens, and three householders of such parish, chapelry, or union, of their or his intention so to appeal.

“XV. And be it further enacted, that within fifteen days next after the end and expiration of the period of fourteen days hereby allowed for appealing against any such rate or assessment as aforesaid, or next after the making of any order or determination upon such appeal, if the same shall be made, (as the case may be,) and exclusive of the day whereon such order or determination shall be so made, or the last day of such term of fourteen days, the churchwardens or chapelwardens, or other persons appointed according to this act to applot such rate or assessment, shall proceed impartially and fairly to applot, upon the inhabitants of every such parish, chapelry, or union, the sum and sums contained in and imposed by such rate or assessment; and such applotters shall, on or before the day next after the end and expiration of such term of fifteen days, deliver or cause to be delivered such applotment, signed by such applotters or the major part of them, to the incumbent or curate, or minister acting as such, or to some one of the churchwardens or chapelwardens of such parish, chapelry, or union, not being an applotter as aforesaid; and the person so receiving such applotment shall write and indorse thereon the day of the week, month, and year on which he shall so receive the same, and shall on the Sunday next following his receipt thereof cause due notice to be given of the holding a vestry in such parish, chapelry, or union, within ten days then next following, for the purpose of taking such applotment into consideration, and at such vestry such applotment shall be in the first place laid before such vestry by the incumbent or curate or other person presiding at such vestry; and it shall and may be lawful for any inhabitant then present, and entitled to vote at such vestry, to make any objection or objections to or on account of any charge, item, matter, or thing contained in such applotment, or omitted therefrom, and which ought to have been contained therein; and it shall be lawful for the major part of the inhabitants present and qualified to vote at such vestry, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, on hearing all parties who shall object as aforesaid, to make such alterations, changes, corrections, and amendments in and of the said applotment or any part or item thereof, and to supply any defects and omissions therefrom, in such manner as to them shall seem just and reasonable, and then finally to confirm, ascertain, and settle such applotment; and thereupon the incumbent or curate, or other person presiding at such vestry, shall in the said vestry sign his name at the foot of such applotment when so confirmed, and shall certify that such applotment was confirmed at such vestry; and two several transcripts shall be made of such applotment, namely, one for each churchwarden or chapelwarden of such parish, union, or chapelry; and the original assessment and applotment shall in all cases be safely kept among the papers and documents of such parish, union, or chapelry.

“XVI. And be it further enacted, that if any person shall feel himself or herself aggrieved by or dissatisfied with the sum applotted upon any lands or tenements, as compared with the sum or sums applotted upon any other lands or tenements in the same parish, under any applotment to be made by virtue of this act, it shall be lawful for such person so feeling himself or herself aggrieved, at any time before the expiration of ten days next immediately after and exclusive of the day of the confirmation of such applotment, to appeal to the justices of the peace at the then next general sessions of the peace, or any adjournment thereof, for the county or place within which the vestry shall have been held at which such applotment was confirmed, which shall be holden after the end and expiration of such ten days: provided always, that every person so appealing shall first give notice in writing, signed with the names and in the handwriting of all and every persons so appealing, to the incumbent or curate, or to both or one of the churchwardens or chapelwardens, and three householders of such parish, chapelry, or union, of their or his intention so to appeal.

“XVII. And be it further enacted, that every appeal against any such assessment or applotment respectively shall be made in writing, signed with the names and in the handwriting of all and every the person or persons appealing, setting forth the grounds of every such appeal, and shall be delivered within the said term of fourteen days or ten days respectively, as the case may be, to some one justice of the peace for such county, county of a city, town, or place; and a copy thereof shall also be delivered within the said term of fourteen days or ten days respectively to the incumbent or curate, or to one of the churchwardens or chapelwardens of such parish, chapelry, or union; and the person or persons so appealing shall, on the day of his or their lodging such appeal as aforesaid, enter into a recognizance in the sum of one hundred pounds, before such justice, or any other justice of the peace for such county, county of a city, town, or place, with two sufficient sureties, or without sureties if such justice of the peace shall in his discretion think fit to accept the sole recognizance of the person or persons so appealing; and every such recognizance shall be conditioned to prosecute such appeal, and to abide or submit to such order as may be made thereon, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such general or quarter sessions of the peace, or adjournment thereof; and the justices at the said next sessions of the peace, (of whom, if such session shall be holden for the county of Dublin, the chairman of the said sessions, or barrister acting as his deputy or substitute for the time being, shall be one; or if such sessions shall be holden for the county of the city of Dublin, the recorder of the city of Dublin, or barrister acting as his deputy or substitute for the time being, shall be one; or if such sessions shall be holden for any other county, the assistant barrister for the time being for such county, or barrister acting as such, shall be one; or if such session shall be holden for any county of a city or county of a town the recorder or person acting as such shall be one,) shall, upon due proof of such notice of appeal having been given as aforesaid, and of the entering into such recognizance as aforesaid, hear and finally determine the cause and matter of every such appeal, by the oaths of witnesses or otherwise in a summary way, and shall award such costs either to the party or parties appealing, or to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of such parish, chapelry, or union, as such justices at such sessions shall think proper: and it shall be lawful for such justices at such sessions, where the appeal shall be against the rate or assessment, to strike out or correct any item or charge, salary, or allowance, against which complaint has been made; and where such appeal shall be against the applotment, it shall be lawful for such justices to correct, alter, and amend such applotment, as to such justices at such sessions shall seem meet: provided always, that no appeal against any applotment shall in any way affect the assessment with reference to which such applotment shall have been made.

“XVIII. Provided also, and be it enacted, that no rate shall be quashed or altered on account or in respect of any excess in the total amount of such rate, where the amount of such excess shall not in the whole exceed the proportion of one farthing per acre.

“XIX. And be it further enacted, that immediately after the end and expiration of the term of ten days, in case no appeal shall, as aforesaid, be made against the said applotment, or otherwise within three days next after the making any order or determination of the justices at sessions, in case any appeal shall have been made against such applotment, as the case may be, (such three days to be exclusive of the day of making such order or determination on appeal, as the case may be,) the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish, union, or chapelry, for which such applotment shall be made, shall and they are hereby required, with all convenient speed, to proceed to levy, collect, and receive of and from the inhabitants of every such parish, union, or chapelry, the several sums so on them respectively charged and applotted.

4, c. 72. [18.]

Churchwardens shall give notice of vestry accordingly. On failure of assessment by vestry, churchwardens shall make a rate, which shall be as valid as if made by vestry.

Churchwardens shall make applotment of such assessment, and deliver it to the incumbent, who shall call a vestry to consider the same.

Such applotments liable to confirmation and appeal as other applotments made under this act.

On neglect of vestry to confirm applotment, the same shall be confirmed by the churchwardens.

“XXIV. And be it further enacted, that within seven days next after such service, such churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden shall cause notice to be given of a vestry to be held in such parish, union, or chapelry, for the purposes aforesaid, pursuant to the said monition, and within the time limited thereby for holding such vestry.

“XXV. And be it further enacted, that if at any vestry so to be summoned, an assessment shall not be made on the inhabitants of such parish, union, or chapelry, for the purposes and to the amount mentioned in such monition, or if such vestry shall not meet and assemble, it shall be lawful for the churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden of such parish, union, or chapelry, and they are hereby authorized and required, immediately after the holding of every such vestry, if such vestry shall meet, or otherwise upon the day and place appointed for the holding of such vestry, by a writing or instrument signed by such churchwardens or chapelwardens, or one of them, dated on the day appointed for the holding such vestry, to make an assessment upon the inhabitants of such parish, union, or chapelry, of such sum or sums of money as shall be by the said monition stated to be necessary for the making of such repairs, and providing things necessary for the due celebration of divine service in the church or chapel thereof, or for either of the said purposes, as the case may require; and such last-mentioned assessment shall be of the like force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been made at any vestry summoned for that purpose.

“XXVI. And be it further enacted, that such churchwardens or chapelwardens, or one of them, shall, within fifteen days next after the date and exclusive of the day of the date of such assessment to be made by them or him, or within fifteen days after the determination of any appeal against such assessment, applot the sum or sums so by him or them assessed fairly and impartially upon and among the inhabitants of such parish, union, or chapelry, and shall truly date, sign, and certify every such applotment, when made, to be just and fair, and shall, on the day next after the day of the date of such applotment, deliver the same so signed and certified, to the incumbent or curate or minister acting as curate of such parish, union, or chapelry; and such incumbent or curate or minister shall indorse upon such applotment the time of his receipt thereof, and shall on the then next following Sunday cause notice to be given of a vestry to be held in and for such parish, union, or chapelry, within ten days then next ensuing, in order to take such applotments into consideration; and at such vestry so to be holden, such and the same acts and proceedings shall and may be had, done, and taken, and such objections made to such applotment, and such and the same powers shall and may be used and exercised by the inhabitants of the parish, union, or chapelry, in such vestry assembled, in relation thereto, as are and is hereinbefore granted, given, provided, and enacted of and concerning the acts and proceedings to be had, done, and taken in vestries to be held for taking into consideration applotments made of cesses imposed by inhabitants in vestry, and the adjustment, settlement, ascertainment, and confirmation thereof; and such appeals may lawfully be entered, and made against any applotment of sums assessed by any churchwardens or chapelwardens so confirmed as aforesaid in such vestry, and under and subject to such and the same rules, regulations, conditions, restrictions, and provisos, as are hereinbefore mentioned and provided and enacted of and concerning the applotment of sums assessed by the inhabitants in vestry assembled.

“XXVII. And be it further enacted, that if the inhabitants assembled in any such vestry holden for taking into consideration the applotment of sums assessed by any churchwardens or chapelwardens, or the major part of such inhabitants, shall refuse to take such applotment into consideration, or shall neglect or omit at such vestry finally to settle, ascertain, and confirm the same, or if such vestry shall not be holden pursuant to such appointment, the applotment so made by any such churchwarden or chapelwarden as aforesaid shall, upon the day appointed for the holding of such vestry, be signed, settled, ascertained, and confirmed, and certified as being so confirmed, by such churchwardens or chapelwardens respectively, and shall be deemed, construed, and taken, to all intents and purposes, as absolutely revised, ascertained, and confirmed, without any other or further confirmation, by the inhabitants in vestry, or other signature to or certificate thereof.

“XXVIII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any person or persons, being an inhabitant of such parish, union, or chapelry, and liable to the payment of any sum under such applotment, to appeal against such applotment within ten days next after and exclusive of the day of the confirmation of the same by such churchwarden or chapelwarden, to the justices of the peace at the next general or quarter sessions of the peace in and for the county, county of a city, town, or place, within which such parish, union, or chapelry, shall be situate, under the like conditions, limitations, and restrictions, and in like manner and form in every particular, and on performing all and every the matters and things by this act required to be done and fulfilled by any person or persons appealing against any applotment confirmed in vestry; and immediately from and after the end and expiration of such ten days, or immediately from and after the day of the making of the order and determination of the justices on any such appeal, as the case may be, such churchwarden or chapelwardens or warden shall proceed to collect and levy the sums mentioned in every such applotment made by them or him, in such manner, and by such and the same ways and means in every particular, as by this act are directed and provided of and concerning applotments of sums assessed by the inhabitants in vestry, and shall apply all such sums, when levied and collected, to the purposes specified and required in and by the monition under and by virtue of which such assessment and the applotment thereof shall have been made pursuant to this act.

“XXIX. And be it further enacted, that all and every the rules, regulations, provisions, powers, and conditions in and by this act made, granted, and enacted, of and concerning applotments to be settled, ascertained, and confirmed by the inhabitants of any parish, union, or chapelry in vestry, and concerning appeals therefrom, and the collection and levying of the sums thereby applotted, shall be and the same are hereby applied to, of and concerning and in respect of all applotments to be made and confirmed by such churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden, and the appealing therefrom, and the collecting of all or any of the sums thereby applotted; save and except only so far as by this act is otherwise specially enacted and provided.

“XXX. And be it further enacted, that every churchwarden and chapelwarden of every parish, union, or chapelry, whether he shall have served the office in person or by deputy, shall at the vestry which shall be holden in and for such parish, union, or chapelry, for the election of his and their next and immediate successor or successors, churchwardens or chapelwardens, deliver or cause to be delivered in such vestry, to the incumbent or curate, or minister acting as such, or other person presiding at such vestry, a full, true, correct, and particular account of the receipts and disbursements of such churchwarden or chapelwarden, of every kind and description, for and on account of such parish, union, or chapelry, and specifying therein the arrears, if any, then remaining due in respect of any rates or assessments, and by whom by name each part of such arrears is due and owing; and every such churchwarden or chapelwarden shall verify such account by oath, to be by him respectively taken in such vestry before the incumbent, curate, or minister acting as such, or other person presiding at such vestry as aforesaid, and which oath and oaths it shall be lawful for every such incumbent, curate, or minister acting as such, or other person so presiding, to administer, or otherwise by the affidavit of such churchwarden or chapelwarden respectively, to be then and there exhibited, sworn before any master in Chancery or master extraordinary in Chancery, or before any justice of the peace, or judge or surrogate of any ecclesiastical court of any diocese.

“XXXI. And be it further enacted, that immediately after the other necessary business of such vestry shall be concluded, the incumbent or curate or minister, or other person presiding thereat, shall and he is hereby required to adjourn such vestry to a certain day, not later than thirty days nor sooner than twenty days afterwards, (or, if he shall so think fit, to the day on which the vestry shall be

"XXXII. And be it further enacted, that as well on such examination and settlement of accounts, as on any settlement of the accounts of any churchwarden or chapelwarden before justices of the peace at sessions in manner hereafter mentioned, as also in any action or suit or civil bill to be brought against any such churchwarden or chapelwarden who ought to account as aforesaid, the applotment of every such parish rate or assessment confirmed as is provided by this act, or an authentic copy thereof attested by the incumbent or curate, or minister acting as such, shall be sufficient evidence, prima facie, to charge such churchwardens or chapelwardens respectively with the whole and full amount of the sum and sums thereby appearing to be applotted.

"XXXIII. And be it further enacted, that no churchwarden or chapelwarden shall be at any time allowed in his account, or get credit for any sum or sums of money expended by him, unless he shall specify the same in an account so to be delivered in at the vestry held for the election of his successors as aforesaid, nor for any sum which shall not appear to have been expended under the authority of this act, or some other act or acts of parliament, or by the authority of some vestry held for such parish, union, or chapelry, under the authority of this present act; and all such accounts shall be at all reasonable times and hours open to the inspection and to be copied in the whole or in part by any inhabitant or inhabitants assessed or liable to be assessed as aforesaid.

"XXXIV. And be it further enacted, that if any churchwarden or chapelwarden shall refuse or omit to deliver, or cause to be delivered, such their accounts respectively, in such vestry held for the election of the next succeeding churchwardens or chapelwardens, verified as aforesaid, or if it shall appear to such vestry that any such churchwarden or chapelwarden whose accounts are so exhibited shall have refused or wilfully neglected to collect or cause to be collected any parish rate, sum, or cess, assessed and applotted as in this present act mentioned and directed, or any part thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the major part of the inhabitants present at the vestry so to be held by adjournment for the examination of such accounts, and they are hereby authorized and required, to charge any such churchwarden or chapelwarden respectively with the full amount of the sums applotted by any such applotment, or with so much and such part thereof as ought to have been and shall not have been received as aforesaid by any such churchwarden or chapelwarden respectively, and to charge any such churchwarden or chapelwarden with such sum, as balance, as shall appear to such vestry to be due and owing, by such churchwarden or chapelwarden respectively, to such parish, union, or chapelry; and in case it shall happen that any late churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden shall have been in any such account charged with and have paid any sum or sums as aforesaid not actually received, but which ought to have been received by them or him, and the same or any of them shall be afterwards paid to or received by any succeeding churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden, such sum or sums so afterwards paid in and received shall be duly accounted for and be paid to such late churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden, their or his executors or administrators, by such succeeding churchwarden or chapelwarden who shall have received the same, subject nevertheless to such credits by way of set-off or otherwise as may lawfully be made in account against such late churchwarden or chapelwarden respectively by such successor or successors as aforesaid.

"XXXV. And be it further enacted, that if any such late churchwarden or chapelwarden accounting, or refusing or neglecting to account, shall think himself aggrieved by any act or determination of the major part of the inhabitants assembled at such adjourned vestry, in respect of the charging such churchwarden or chapelwarden with any such balance or sum of money, it shall and may be lawful for any such late churchwarden or chapelwarden respectively, jointly or severally, within fourteen days next after and exclusive of the day of holding such adjourned vestry, to appeal against such act or determination to the justices at the first general or quarter sessions of the peace, or any adjournment thereof, to be holden next after the end or expiration of such term of fourteen days for the county, county of a city, town, or place, wherein such adjourned vestry was so holden: provided always, that every such late churchwarden, so appealing, shall give notice in writing to the succeeding churchwardens or chapelwardens, or one of them, or to the incumbent or curate of such parish, union, or chapelry, of such intention so to appeal, and shall within the said term of fourteen days deliver to some justice of the peace of the said county or county of a city, town, or place, his or their appeal in writing, and on the day of delivering such appeal shall enter into recognizance with two sufficient sureties before such justice, or some other justice of the peace for the said county, county of a city, town, or place, in double the amount of the balance or sum so as aforesaid at the said adjourned vestry charged against the party so appealing, conditioned to prosecute such appeal, and to abide and submit to the order or determination of the justices at such sessions, and to pay to the succeeding churchwardens or chapelwardens of such parish, union, or chapelry, such sum or sums of money and such costs as may by the order or determination of such justices be adjudged and awarded to be paid by such appellant or appellants; and the justices at such first or next sessions of the peace or adjournment thereof, (of whom the chairman of the sessions for the county of Dublin, the recorder of the city of Dublin or other county of a city or county of a town, the assistant barrister or barristers for any county, or the barrister acting for and in the place of such chairman, recorder, or assistant barrister, according to the place of holding the said sessions of the peace as aforesaid, shall always be one,) upon due proof that such notice of appealing was given, and recognizance was entered into as required by this act, shall hear and determine the matter of such appeal; and it shall be lawful for such justices to examine the late and then present churchwardens or chapelwardens respectively, or any of them, or any witness or witnesses, on oath, and to take and audit the accounts of any such late churchwarden or chapelwarden, and to strike and ascertain the balance thereof, after all just charges and credits, and to give such order and direction in respect of the payment and discharge of such balance, by instalments or otherwise, as to such justices shall seem fit, and to award costs to or against the person or persons so appealing, or to or against the then present churchwardens or chapelwardens of the said parish, union, or chapelry, as such justices shall think fit.

“XXXVI. And be it further enacted, that immediately from and after the expiration of such period of fourteen days so allowed for such appeal of such late churchwardens or chapelwardens, or from and after the making of the order or determination on such appeal, as the case may be, (the last of the said fourteen days, and the day of making such order or determination being severally excluded,) every sum or balance due from any such late churchwarden or chapelwarden, shall be and be deemed and taken in law as a debt of such late churchwarden or chapelwarden respectively to the churchwardens or chapelwardens for the time being of every such parish, union, or chapelry, and may be sued for, levied, and recovered by the churchwardens or chapelwardens for the time being of such parish, union, or chapelry, (whether such churchwardens or chapelwardens shall or shall not be the immediate successor or successors of any such late churchwarden or chapelwarden,) by action of debt, or other proper action or suit, in any of his majesty's courts at Dublin, in which no essoin, wager of law, or protection, nor more than one imparlance, shall be allowed; or if such balance or sum be under fifty pounds, the same may be recovered by civil bill, at the election of the churchwardens or chapelwardens respectively who shall sue for the same; and it shall be churchwarden or chapelwarden shall take and make and subscribe the oath required by this act accordingly: provided always, that every person who shall execute the office of a churchwarden or chapelwarden by deputy, shall be liable and answerable for all money which shall come to the hands of his deputy by reason of such office, and for the acts, neglects, and defaults of such deputy in respect of the collection and disposition of the parish cesses and rates, in such and the same manner, and as fully to all intents and purposes as if such office had been executed in person by such churchwarden or chapelwarden, and as if such monies and all sums assessed and apportioned in vestry had come to the hands of such churchwarden or chapelwarden; and every such churchwarden or chapelwarden shall account for the same accordingly.

“XLIX. And be it further enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any vestry in Ireland to elect, nor for any ordinary, incumbent, or curate to appoint any person to fill the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden in and for any parish, union, or chapelry, for the year next and immediately succeeding the year in which such person shall have served for the whole period of one entire year the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden of the same parish, chapelry, or union, in person or by deputy, if it shall be made appear to the satisfaction of such vestry, ordinary, incumbent, or curate, that there is any other person liable to serve and duly qualified to exercise such office in such parish, union, or chapelry.

For providing for the maintenance of parish clerks, assessments shall be made of certain annual sums.

“L. And be it further enacted, that in every parish, union, or chapelry (not being within the county of the city of Dublin, or the suburbs thereof) in which there shall be a church or chapel fit for the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, a vestry shall be held on the Monday or Tuesday in Easter week in every year, and at every such vestry a sum shall be assessed for the maintenance of the clerk of every such parish, union, or chapelry, and of every chapel of ease, in manner following: that is to say, for the clerk of every such parish, chapelry, or union, in the church or chapel whereof there shall be divine service usually celebrated, not only on Sundays and festival days, but also on common week days, that is to say, on two such common days at least in the week, a sum not exceeding twenty pounds nor less than ten pounds, and in all other cases a sum not exceeding ten pounds nor less than five pounds; and to and for the clerk of every chapel of ease in any parish or union in which there shall be a chapel of ease used and fit for the celebration of divine service as aforesaid, (except such chapel of ease be served only alternately, or in less frequent turns with the church of the parish or union wherein it is situate,) a sum not exceeding ten pounds nor less than five pounds, as and for the maintenance and maintenances of every such clerk respectively for the year then next ensuing, and in satisfaction and lieu of all other fees, dues, or allowances whatever, alleged or claimed to be payable to such parish clerk under any usage or custom; and if such assessment be not so made on the Monday or Tuesday in Easter week as aforesaid, in any parish, union, or chapelry, every such parish, union, or chapelry shall be charged with the sums or maintenance following, as and for the support of any such clerk for the year in and for which such assessment ought to be made and shall have been omitted to be made; that is to say, with the sum of ten pounds for the clerk of any such parish, chapelry, or union, in the church or chapel whereof divine service is usually celebrated in the church or chapel on Sundays, festivals and common days as aforesaid, and in all other cases with the sum of five pounds; and for the clerk of every chapel of ease in which divine service shall be so performed (except in the case of such service in turns as aforesaid) with the sum of four pounds, in satisfaction and lieu of all dues, fees, and allowances as aforesaid, as and for the maintenance of such respective clerks for the year in and for which such respective assessments ought to be made; and in cases where such assessments respectively shall be made, then the sums respectively to be assessed for the maintenances of such clerks respectively, or in cases where no assessment shall be made, then the said sums of ten pounds, five pounds, or four pounds respectively, as the case may be, shall be added to and shall be equally and fairly apportioned amongst the other sums to be assessed by the inha-part thereof, by the churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden for the time being, or by any inhabitant or inhabitants of such parish, union, or chapelry, as shall be fit, and shall and may award costs to and against the petitioner or petitioners, and shall and may enforce the order and orders to be made on every such petition by process of attachment, sequestration, injunction, or otherwise, against such churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden, or inhabitant or inhabitants, as the case may require.

“XL. And be it further enacted, that every assessment and applotment, and every act, order, or charge made in vestry, in any parish, union, or chapelry, and every assessment and applotment made by authority of this act pursuant to such monition as aforesaid, against which, in the whole or in part, any appeal is hereby permitted to be made, if not duly appealed from within the time or times hereby as aforesaid prescribed for making such appeals respectively, and every order and determination which shall be made by the justices of the peace at the sessions of the peace, or adjournment thereof, as hereinbefore mentioned, which shall be made on the hearing of any appeal pursuant to this act, shall, from and after the expiration and end of such respective times within which such respective appeals are hereby permitted to be made, or from and after the making of the respective orders or determinations on the hearing of such appeals respectively, as the case may be, be final, binding, and conclusive to all intents and purposes, in law and equity, and shall not at any time or times thereafter be impeached, questioned, or set aside, or varied by or in any court of law or equity, or in or before any other court, jurisdiction, or place whatever; nor shall any such order or determination of the justices of the peace be removed or removable by writ of certiorari, or other process, to any of his majesty's courts.

“XLI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the justices at every such sessions of the peace or adjournment thereof as aforesaid, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, by their order or warrant, to levy any costs by them to be awarded or ordered, to be paid by any person or persons appealing in manner aforesaid, by distress and sale of his or their cattle, goods, and chattels, in case such person or persons shall, after demand made thereof, refuse, or neglect to pay the same to the churchwardens or chapelwardens respectively to whom the same shall have been so awarded; or it shall and may be lawful for such churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden to sue for and recover from such person or persons the amount of the costs so awarded, by action at law, or, if not exceeding fifty pounds, by civil bill, at the election of such churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden.

“XLII. And be it further enacted, that in all cases where, under and by virtue of the said act made in the parliament of Ireland in the twenty-first year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Second, intituled, ‘An Act for disappropriating Benefices belonging to Deans, Archdeacons, Dignitaries, and other Members of Cathedral Churches, and for appropriating others in their stead, and also for the Removal of the Sites of ruined Cathedral Churches,’ any parochial church shall have been or shall be made cathedral and parochial; and in all cases where, under and by virtue of an act made in the parliament of Ireland in the thirty-ninth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, ‘An Act for the repairing of Cathedral Churches, in Cases where the Parish Churches have been long in Ruins,’ any cathedral church shall have been or shall be made use of as a parish church; and it shall happen that no permanent agreement shall have been or shall be made by and between the dean and chapter or the chapter of such cathedral church, testified under their common seal, and the protestant inhabitants of the parish or union in which such church is or shall be situate, ascertaining the proportions in which such deans and chapters, or chapters, and the inhabitants, shall respectively contribute to the putting and keeping in repair such cathedral and parochial churches, at all times thereafter when such repairs shall be required; it shall be lawful for the archbishop or bishop of the diocese in which such churches are or shall be respectively situate, by any instrument under his archiepiscopal or episcopal seal, finally to adjust, settle, and “XLIII. And be it further enacted, that the amount of all and every sum and sums which shall from time to time be required to be raised, levied, and paid, for the purpose of rebuilding, enlarging, or putting and keeping in repair of every such church made cathedral and parochial, before any assessment thereof, or of any part or proportion thereof, shall be made on the inhabitants of any parish or union, shall be from time to time estimated, ascertained, and settled by such archbishop or bishop as aforesaid; and thereupon such part and so much of such respective sums as ought, according to any such permanent agreement made or to be made as aforesaid, or as shall be settled and ascertained by any such archbishop or bishop as aforesaid, to be borne and paid by the inhabitants of such parish or union, and no more, shall with all convenient speed be assessed on the inhabitants of such parish or union in vestry, according to the directions in this act in other cases of assessment; and so much and such parts of the amount of such sum or sums as ought, according to such agreement, or according to the allowance or direction of such archbishop or bishop, to be paid and borne by such dean and chapter or chapters, shall be paid and borne by them accordingly, when and as soon as the applotment of such assessment on the inhabitants of such parish, union, or chapelry, of their proportion shall have been finally settled and confirmed as aforesaid, and shall be a charge on the economy fund of such dean and chapter, or chapter, or on the rents, issues, and profits of the respective deaneries, dignities, prebends, and canonries holden by the dean and the respective dignitaries, prebendaries, and canons, in right of any such deanery, dignity, prebend, or canonry, in case there shall not be any economy fund, or that such economy fund shall not be sufficient for the purpose; and in such case the whole of such sum or sums of money, or so much as shall be deficient, shall be paid by such deans, dignitaries, and prebendaries, and canons, out of the issues and profits of such their respective deaneries, dignities, prebends, and canonries, in and according to the proportions to be settled amongst themselves by such deans and chapter or chapters respectively; and in case such proportion shall not be so settled, or in case the sum or sums which ought so to be paid by such deans and chapters, or chapters, shall not be paid to such person or persons as such archbishop or bishop shall by writing signed by him appoint within thirty days next after the confirmation of the applotment of such parochial assessment, it shall be lawful for any such archbishop or bishop to settle and ascertain such proportions as aforesaid, if necessary, and to enforce the payment of all and every sum so proportioned, either by such deans and chapters, or chapters, or by such archbishop or bishop, by sequestration of the rents, issues and profits of any and every such deanery, dignity, prebend, or canonry, as the case may require, until such payment shall be so made by such dean and chapter, or chapter as aforesaid, of the sum or sums which they shall be so liable to bear and pay, and of the costs of such sequestration.

“XLIV. And be it further enacted, that a vestry shall be called and holden on the Monday or Tuesday in Easter week in every year, in every parish, union, and chapelry in Ireland, for the election or nomination or appointment of churchwardens or chapelwardens or warden, and that such election or nomination or appointment shall be duly entered at such vestry in the vestry book of the parish, union, or chapelry; and that every person who shall be so elected or nominated or appointed (and not being exempted or disqualified under the provisions of this act) shall be deemed and taken to be and is hereby declared to be a legal churchwarden or chapelwarden of such parish, union, or chapelry, to all intents and purposes, and shall be compelled and compellable (unless in cases excepted by this act) to take upon him such office, and to perform the duties of the said office in person or by deputy, according to the directions of this act; and the entry of such election or nomination or appointment shall be signed by the incumbent or curate, or minister acting as such, or one of them, and three of the inhabitants at least, qualified to vote at such vestry, if so many inhabitants shall be present at such vestry, or otherwise by all the inhabitants present at such vestry; and the said act of vestry so signed shall be considered and received as conclusive evidence of the election, nomination, or appointment of such churchwardens or chapelwardens, although the same shall not be signed by such churchwardens or chapelwardens or either of them.

“XLV. And be it further enacted, that in case any churchwarden or chapelwarden of any parish, chapelry, or union shall die, or shall become insolvent, or shall be imprisoned for debt or other cause, or shall become fugitive from Ireland, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful for the vestry duly assembled in such parish, chapelry, or union, after such notice as by this act is required, to elect a churchwarden or chapelwarden in the room of such churchwarden or chapelwarden so dying, becoming insolvent, imprisoned, or fugitive, and such new churchwarden or chapelwarden shall take the oath prescribed by this act, and shall be to all intents and purposes as fully churchwarden or chapelwarden as if he had been elected on the Easter Monday or Tuesday preceding.

“XLVI.(1) And be it further enacted, that every person who at any time after the commencement of this act shall be elected or nominated or appointed to be churchwarden or chapelwarden, or to be deputy to any churchwarden or chapelwarden of any parish, union, or chapelry in Ireland, shall take and subscribe an oath of office, in the form and to the effect following; (that is to say,)

“I, A. B., do swear, that I will truly, impartially, and faithfully execute the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden [or deputy churchwarden or chapelwarden] within the parish [union or chapelry] of _____ in respect of the parochial rates and assessments, and the collection and management of the same, and the other property and monies of the said parish [union and chapelry].

“So help me God.”

“And such oath shall and may be taken, made, and subscribed by any such person either before the incumbent or curate of the parish, union, or chapelry, or before any ecclesiastical judge, and which oath such incumbent, curate, or judge is hereby respectively empowered to administer, and shall administer, without fee or reward, to any such churchwarden or chapelwarden, or deputy churchwarden or chapelwarden: provided nevertheless, that the said oath of office, or anything contained therein, shall not be construed to exempt any such churchwarden or chapelwarden or deputy from the fulfilment of any duty by law required to be performed by such churchwarden or chapelwarden, and not specified in such oath.

“XLVII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that every preacher or teacher in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, being a minister, preacher, or teacher of a congregation, who shall have taken or shall take the oath, and who shall have made and subscribed or who shall make and subscribe the declaration required to be taken, made, and subscribed by the said act made in the parliament of Ireland in the sixth year of King George the First, for exempting protestant dissenters from certain penalties, shall be thenceforth exempted and incapacitated from being chosen or appointed to bear, and shall be exempted from and incapable of bearing the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden.

“XLVIII. And be it further enacted, that if any person (not being a preacher or teacher exempted or incapacitated by this act) who shall at any time be chosen or otherwise appointed to the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden in any parish, union, or chapelry, within four weeks next after his being so chosen or appointed shall state in writing signed with his name, to the minister of such parish, union, or chapelry, that he is desirous of executing the said office of churchwarden or chapelwarden by deputy, it shall and may be lawful for any such churchwarden or chapelwarden to nominate and appoint a good and sufficient person, who shall be approved by the incumbent or curate of such parish, union, or chapelry, to be his deputy churchwarden or chapelwarden; and such deputy churchwarden or chapelwarden shall take and make and subscribe the oath required by this act accordingly: provided always, that every person who shall execute the office of a churchwarden or chapelwarden by deputy, shall be liable and answerable for all money which shall come to the hands of his deputy by reason of such office, and for the acts, neglects, and defaults of such deputy in respect of the collection and disposition of the parish cesses and rates, in such and the same manner, and as fully to all intents and purposes as if such office had been executed in person by such churchwarden or chapelwarden, and as if such monies and all sums assessed and apportioned in vestry had come to the hands of such churchwarden or chapelwarden; and every such churchwarden or chapelwarden shall account for the same accordingly.

“XLIX. And be it further enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any vestry in Ireland to elect, nor for any ordinary, incumbent, or curate to appoint any person to fill the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden in and for any parish, union, or chapelry, for the year next and immediately succeeding the year in which such person shall have served for the whole period of one entire year the office of churchwarden or chapelwarden of the same parish, chapelry, or union, in person or by deputy, if it shall be made appear to the satisfaction of such vestry, ordinary, incumbent, or curate, that there is any other person liable to serve and duly qualified to exercise such office in such parish, union, or chapelry.

For providing for the maintenance of parish clerks, assessments shall be made of certain annual sums.

“V. Provided always, and be it enacted, that any owner or proprietor of any rectory impropriate, having the patronage of the vicarage of the church of such rectory, shall not, by presenting in his turn a clerk to any union, under or by virtue of this act, be judged in law to disappropriate his rectory, unless such person making such presentation shall, by express words contained therein, plainly signify his design and intent to make such disappropriation, and that such presentation be under the hand and seal of the patron so presenting, attested by two or more credible persons; any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

“VI. And whereas, in many places in Ireland, deans, archdeacons, dignitaries, prebendaries, and canons of cathedral churches have one or more rectory or rectories, or part or parts of one or more rectory or rectories or parishes, and the rectorial tithes thereof respectively, annexed and appropriated to one deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, within which rectories there are vicars endowed, so that such dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon have not the actual cure of souls within the said parishes or rectories or part of rectories so appropriated to their dignities, the actual cure being in the respective vicars: and whereas the vicarial tithes of such parishes aforesaid, in which there are vicarages endowed, are often of very inconsiderable value, and inadequate in many instances to the suitable maintenance of their respective vicars, by whom they are received: and whereas it will be beneficial, that the rectorial tithes or the parts thereof of the said several and respective parishes or rectories so as aforesaid appropriated to such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, should be disappropriated, disunited, and divested out of such dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon, and vested in the respective vicars of the said parishes: be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, and his majesty's privy council there, with the assent, advice, approbation, and consent of all such persons, and in such manner as is hereinbefore mentioned, to disappropriate, disunite, and divest any rectory or rectories, or part or parts of any rectory or rectories, and the rectorial tithes thereof, from and out of any such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, and the dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon thereof respectively, and to unite any such rectory or rectories to their respective vicarages, so that each and every of such rectories, or parts of rectories, when so disappropriated, shall, with its vicarage, form a distinct parish or benefice; and also, in lieu of any rectory or rectories, or part thereof, so disunited, to unite and appropriate to such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, any benefice or benefices, with cure of souls, in value at least equal to the rectory or rectories, or part or parts of such rectory or rectories, so then disappropriated from such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry; saving always to all deans, deans and chapters, archdeacons, dignitaries, prebendaries, and canons, and all other incumbents, at the time of such disappropriation or union respectively, during the respective incumbencies, and to all patrons and ordinaries, all their respective rights, titles, and interests in and to any such disappropriated rectory or rectories, or part or parts thereof, or to such united benefices, or to any of them; and saving also to every archbishop and bishop, register and schoolmaster, their respective dues, payable out of any and every such parish, rectory, or part thereof, or other benefice; saving also to all tenants who have any lease or leases of any glebe or tithes belonging to any part of such disappropriation, union, parish, rectory, or benefice, all their right and interest during their respective leases.

“An Act to consolidate the Laws in force in Ireland for the Disappropriation of Benefices annexed to Dignities, and for the Appropriation of others in their stead, and for uniting Benefices with Dignities; and to make further Provisions for the like Purposes.”

“Whereas it is desirable that certain provisions contained in several acts in force in Ireland, relating to the appropriation or disappropriation of benefices, and uniting benefices with dignities, should be consolidated and embodied together in one act; and that certain powers should be given to the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors, and his majesty’s privy council in Ireland, with respect to the disappropriation of rectories or parts of rectories, and the rectorial tithes thereof, belonging to deans, archdeacons, dignitaries, prebendaries, and canons of cathedral churches, and uniting them to their respective vicarages; be it therefore enacted by the king’s most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act, so much and such parts of several acts, passed in the parliament of Ireland, shall be repealed, as are hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, so much of an act passed in the parliament of Ireland, in the second year of the reign of King George the First, intituled, ‘An Act for real Union and Division of Parishes,’ as relates to the uniting or appropriating of any benefice or benefices to any dignity or prebend, or as relates to any dignitary or prebendary to whose dignity or prebend any benefice shall be united, or as relates to the disappropriation of any rectory by the owner or proprietor of any rectory appropriate, or as relates to the enrolment of any appropriations; and also so much of an act made in the parliament of Ireland in the tenth year of the reign of the said King George the First, (for explaining and amending the said first-recited act, and for other purposes,) as relates to the uniting or appropriating of any benefice or benefices to any dignity or prebend, or to the consent of his majesty, his heirs and successors, to any such union; and also so much of another act passed in the parliament of Ireland in the said tenth year of the reign of the said King George the First, intituled, ‘An Act for amending an Act, intituled, ‘An Act for confirming the several Grants made by Her late Majesty of the First-fruits and Twentieth Parts, payable out of the Ecclesiastical Benefices in this Kingdom; and also for giving the Archbishops and other ecclesiastical Persons four years’ time for the Payment of First-fruits, and for incorporating the Trustees and Commissioners of the said First-fruits,’ as relates to the payment of first-fruits by appropriated benefices; and also so much of an act passed in the parliament of Ireland in the twenty-first year of the reign of King George the Second, intituled, ‘An Act for disappropriating Benefices belonging to Deans, Archdeacons, Dignitaries, and other Members of Cathedral Churches, and for appropriating others in their stead; and also for the Removal of the Sites of ruined Cathedral Churches,’ as relates to the disappropriation of benefices belonging to deans, archdeacons, dignitaries, and other members of cathedral churches, and the appropriation of others in their stead, and as relates to the consent of his majesty, his heirs and successors, to the making of any union, appro-

“II. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, whenever it shall happen that any dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon of any cathedral church in Ireland, shall have one or more benefice or benefices appropriated to any such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, situated at great distances from such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, or from each other, it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, with the assent of the major part of his majesty's privy council in Ireland, in council assembled, six at least assenting, and with the advice and approbation of the archbishop of the province and bishop of the diocese, certified under their hands and archiepiscopal or episcopal seals, and with the consent of the king's majesty, where he shall be patron, signified in such manner as hereinafter directed, and with the consent of all other patrons, and of all incumbents, certified under their hands and seals respectively, and attested by two or more credible witnesses, to disappropriate such benefice or benefices, and to disunite the same from such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, and to unite and appropriate to such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, any other parish or parishes, of a value at least equal to such disappropriated benefice or benefices, and which may be contiguous or convenient to each other, or to such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, and afterwards to unite such disappropriated benefice or benefices to such other parish or parishes, or to unite such other parish or parishes to them, or any of them, as lie convenient for such an union, or to erect such disappropriated benefice or benefices into a separate and distinct benefice, or into separate and distinct benefices; saving always to all deans, deans and chapters, archdeacons, dignitaries, prebendaries, and canons, and all other incumbents, at the time of any such union, appropriation, or disappropriation, during their respective incumbencies, and to all patrons and ordinaries, all their respective rights, titles, and interests in and to such united or appropriated or disappropriated benefices, or to any of them; and saving to any and every archbishop and bishop, register and schoolmaster, their respective dues payable out of such parish so united; saving also to all tenants who have any lease or leases of any glebes or tithes belonging to any part of such union, or appropriation or disappropriation, all their rights and interests during their respective leases.

“III. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, with the assent, advice, approbation, and consent of his majesty's privy council, and of such persons and in such manner as is hereinbefore directed, to unite or appropriate any benefice or benefices having actual cure of souls to a dignity or prebend without cure, or to unite and appropriate any benefice or benefices without cure of souls to a dignity or prebend having actual cure of souls annexed; saving to every dean, dignitary, prebendary, and incumbent, at the time of such union or appropriation, during their respective incumbency, and to the respective patrons and ordinaries, all their right, title, and interest in and to such united or appropriated benefices; and saving also all rights to the dean and chapter of each cathedral church, and to the prebendary of the prebend to which any benefice with cure of souls, or without cure of souls, shall be united or appropriated.

“IV. And be it further enacted, that where any of the deaneries, archdeaconries, dignities, prebends, canonries, parishes, or benefices, to be united or appropriated as aforesaid, shall have several and distinct patrons, and that the king's majesty, his heirs and successors, is, are, or shall be entitled to the presentation to any of them, in such case his majesty, his heirs and successors, shall immediately from and after such union, upon the then first vacancy, have the first presentation of an incumbent unto such union, by the name by which it shall be called in the instrument erecting the same, and that the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors, and his majesty's privy council in Ireland, with the advice and approbation of the archbishop of the province and bishop of the diocese, certified in the manner aforesaid, shall divide and settle the patronage by turns afterwards amongst the several patrons, giving a right to each of them to present oftener or seldomer, according to the true yearly value of the respective parish or parishes whereof they are patrons, the consent of each patron being first had thereto, and entered in the instrument erecting such union, and that such settlement shall be final and binding to all patrons, whether ecclesiastical or lay patrons, and to all parties, for ever.

“V. Provided always, and be it enacted, that any owner or proprietor of any rectory impropriate, having the patronage of the vicarage of the church of such rectory, shall not, by presenting in his turn a clerk to any union, under or by virtue of this act, be judged in law to disappropriate his rectory, unless such person making such presentation shall, by express words contained therein, plainly signify his design and intent to make such disappropriation, and that such presentation be under the hand and seal of the patron so presenting, attested by two or more credible persons; any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

“VI. And whereas, in many places in Ireland, deans, archdeacons, dignitaries, prebendaries, and canons of cathedral churches have one or more rectory or rectories, or part or parts of one or more rectory or rectories or parishes, and the rectorial tithes thereof respectively, annexed and appropriated to one deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, within which rectories there are vicars endowed, so that such dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon have not the actual cure of souls within the said parishes or rectories or part of rectories so appropriated to their dignities, the actual cure being in the respective vicars: and whereas the vicarial tithes of such parishes as aforesaid, in which there are vicarages endowed, are often of very inconsiderable value, and inadequate in many instances to the suitable maintenance of their respective vicars, by whom they are received: and whereas it will be beneficial, that the rectorial tithes or the parts thereof of the said several and respective parishes or rectories so as aforesaid appropriated to such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, should be disappropriated, disunited, and divested out of such dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon, and vested in the respective vicars of the said parishes: be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, and his majesty's privy council there, with the assent, advice, approbation, and consent of all such persons, and in such manner as is hereinbefore mentioned, to disappropriate, disunite, and divest any rectory or rectories, or part or parts of any rectory or rectories, and the rectorial tithes thereof, from and out of any such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, and the dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon thereof respectively, and to unite any such rectory or rectories to their respective vicarages, so that each and every of such rectories, or parts of rectories, when so disappropriated, shall, with its vicarage, form a distinct parish or benefice; and also, in lieu of any rectory or rectories, or part thereof, so disunited, to unite and appropriate to such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, any benefice or benefices, with cure of souls, in value at least equal to the rectory or rectories, or part or parts of such rectory or rectories, so then disappropriated from such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry; saving always to all deans, deans and chapters, archdeacons, dignitaries, prebendaries, and canons, and all other incumbents, at the time of such disappropriation or union respectively, during the respective incumbencies, and to all patrons and ordinaries, all their respective rights, titles, and interests in and to any such disappropriated rectory or rectories, or part or parts thereof, or to such united benefices, or to any of them; and saving also to every archbishop and bishop, register and schoolmaster, their respective dues, payable out of any and every such parish, rectory, or part thereof, or other benefice; saving also to all tenants who have any lease or leases of any glebe or tithes belonging to any part of such disappropriation, union, parish, rectory, or benefice, all their right and interest during their respective leases.

and to unite other benefices to the dignity.

Saving of rights.

STAT. 7 GEO.
4, c. 73. [I.R.]

Lord lieutenant and council may, by the same instrument disunite benefices or rectories from dignities, and unite such rectories to their vicarages, and appropriate benefices to dignities in lieu of disappropriations.

Disappropriated rectories shall be in the same patronage as the vicarage; and appropriated benefices in the same patronage as the deanery.

Lord lieutenant and council, &c. may direct the time and manner in which appropriation or disappropriation shall take effect.

If no time specified, appropriation, &c. shall not take effect until vacancy of dignity.

Dignitary not to be discharged from residence on benefice, but shall be subject to duties, &c. as a dignitary.

“VII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, and his majesty’s privy council in Ireland, if they shall so think fit, with the assent, advice, approbation, and consent of such persons, and in such manner as is hereinbefore mentioned, by the same instrument and at the same time that they shall disappropriate any benefice or benefices from any deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, by virtue of this act, to disappropriate, disunite, and divest any rectory or rectories, or part or parts of any rectory or rectories, and the rectorial tithes thereof, from and out of any such dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon, and reunite them to their respective vicarages, and to appropriate to such deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, any benefice or benefices with cure of souls; and that in such case it shall be sufficient, if the benefice or benefices so to be appropriated in the place and stead of such rectory or rectories, or part or parts of such rectory or rectories so disappropriated, shall be equal in value to the benefice, or to the rectory or part of a rectory so then disappropriated, or to both together, or to the benefices or rectories, or parts of rectories, or to all together; anything in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

“VIII. And be it further enacted, that every such rectory or part of a rectory, when so disappropriated as aforesaid, and united to their respective vicarages under this act, shall become, and shall for ever remain, from the time when such union shall take effect, in the gift and at the disposal of the patron or patrons who was or were entitled to the presentation to such respective vicarages before and at the time of such union; and that every benefice so to be appropriated as aforesaid to any deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, shall, from the time when such union and appropriation shall take effect, be and remain in the gift and at the disposal of the patron or patrons, whether the king’s majesty or any other person, who at the time when such appropriation as aforesaid shall take effect shall be entitled to the presentation or appointment to the deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry, to which such benefice or benefices shall be so appropriated.

“IX. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, and his majesty’s privy council there, if they shall think proper so to do, with the advice and consent of the archbishop of the province and bishop of the diocese, certified in manner as aforesaid, and with the consent of the king’s majesty, when he shall be patron, certified in such manner as by this act is directed, and with the consent of all other patrons and of all incumbents, certified under their hands and seals respectively, and attested by two or more credible witnesses, in and by the instrument by which any union or appropriation, or disunion or disappropriation, shall be made by virtue of this act, to direct, regulate, and appoint the time or times when, and the manner, conditions, and regulations in, on, and under which, according to the consent so given as aforesaid, any such union or appropriation, or disunion or disappropriation, shall first operate and take effect, whether during the incumbency of any dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon, or not; and in case no direction, regulation, or appointment shall be expressly made in manner aforesaid, as to the time or times when any such union or appropriation, or disunion or disappropriation, shall first operate and take effect, the same shall not operate or take effect until such time as the deanery, archdeaconry, dignity, prebend, or canonry to which such union or appropriation, or disunion or disappropriation, shall relate, shall become vacant and destitute of an incumbent.

“X. Provided always, and be it enacted, that every dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon, to whose dignity, prebend, or canonry, any benefice with cure of souls shall be united in pursuance of this act, shall not be discharged of residence in the church united to such dignity, prebend, or canonry, but shall be obliged to such residence as is required by an act passed in the fifth year of his present majesty, intituled, ‘An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws for enforcing the Residence of Spiritual Persons on their Benefices; to restrain Spiritual

Persons from carrying on Trade or Merchandize; and for the Support and Maintenance of Stipendiary Curates in Ireland; and every such dean, archdeacon, dignitary, prebendary, or canon, shall also be and remain subject, as a dignitary, prebendary, or canon, of such cathedral church, to all jurisdictions, duties, and penalties, in like manner as such dignitary, prebendary, or canon was subject to at the time of making such union.

“XI. And be it further enacted, that in all unions or appropriations, and in all disunions or disappropriations to be made by virtue of this act, of any dignities or benefices, the patronage whereof is or shall be in the king’s majesty, his heirs, or successors, the consent of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors for the time being, under his or their hands and seals, to the making of such union or appropriation, or disunion or disappropriation, shall be to all intents and purposes as good and valid in law as if the consent of his majesty, his heirs, and successors, were thereunto signified by letters patent under the great seal of Ireland.

The king’s assent, as patron, may be signified by the lord lieutenant.

“XII. And be it further enacted, that where any benefice or benefices shall be united or appropriated to any dignity or prebend, in pursuance of this act, and the incumbent of such benefice or benefices shall die, resign, or be removed, then the next incumbent or person succeeding in the place of him so dying, resigning, or being removed, shall be chargeable with, and shall accordingly pay the first-fruits of such benefice or benefices so united and appropriated, as if he were legally collated or instituted and inducted to the same; and to the end that such incumbent, dignitary, or prebendary, may be respectively charged with such first-fruits, the archbishops and bishops of Ireland shall, and they are hereby respectively required, each in their respective dioceses, to make and return to the first-fruits office a certificate of the death, removal, or resignation of any such incumbent or incumbents, of such benefice or benefices so united or appropriated, and the name of the next incumbent or person succeeding in the place of him so dying, resigning, or being removed as aforesaid, within such time and in such and the same manner as certificates are or usually have been made and returned upon the institution or collation of incumbents to livings or benefices in Ireland.

Where benefice is united to a dignity, incumbent, &c. succeeding shall pay the first-fruits.

Bishops shall return certificate of death, &c. of incumbent, and the name of the successor, &c.

“XIII. And be it further enacted, that all and every union or appropriation, or disunion or disappropriation, which shall be made by virtue of this act, shall be enrolled in the rolls office of the high court of Chancery in Ireland, within six calendar months next after the making thereof, for the enrolment whereof respectively the fee of thirteen shillings and four-pence shall be paid, and no more; and that every instrument under the hands of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, and his majesty’s privy council there, testifying any such union, appropriation, or disappropriation, shall contain therein a clause or proviso that the same shall be enrolled within six calendar months after the date thereof, or else to be void.”

Unions, &c. shall be enrolled in Chancery within six months, &c.

appurtenances, situate, lying, and being in Saint Martin's lane, and the churchyard of and in the said parish of Saint Martin in the Fields aforesaid, belonging to the said vicarage, and part of the glebe thereof, ten of which said messuages or dwelling houses are subject to leases granted thereof by the said vicar or his predecessors for terms of forty years, commencing at different periods, renewable at the end of every fourteen years, under certain annual rents, amounting together to the sum of sixty pounds or thereabouts; and the other of the said messuages or dwelling houses is now in the occupation of the said vicar: and whereas the said several messuages or dwelling houses, with their appurtenances, are part of the premises described in the herein before-mentioned plan, and the same being required to carry into effect and complete the improvements herein before-mentioned, the said commissioners for executing this act have agreed with the said vicar, by and with the consent and approbation of the Lord Bishop of London, for a conveyance to be made to the said commissioners of all the right, title, and interest of the said vicar in and to the several messuages or dwelling houses and premises herein before-mentioned, in exchange for a conveyance by the said commissioners on the part of his majesty, his heirs and successors, to the said vicar and his successors, of freehold messuages or dwelling houses, buildings, and premises, belonging to the crown, situate within the cities of London or Westminster, the same being of equal rent and value; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners for executing this act, and for the vicar of the said parish of Saint Martin in the Fields for the time being, to contract and agree for a conveyance to the said commissioners of all the right, title, and interest of the said vicar in and to the said eleven several messuages or dwelling houses, with the appurtenances, so vested in him as aforesaid, in exchange for a conveyance by the said commissioners, on the part of his majesty, his heirs or successors, to the said vicar and his successors, of freehold messuages or dwelling houses and hereditaments belonging to the crown, situate and being in the said cities of London and Westminster, or one of them, of equal rent and value; and the said last mentioned messuages or dwelling houses and premises shall, when so conveyed as aforesaid, be held by the said vicar and his successors, to, for, and upon, and under and subject to such and the same trusts, ends, intents, and purposes, as the said several messuages or dwelling houses and hereditaments so to be conveyed by him to the said commissioners, in exchange as aforesaid, are now subject to; provided, that it shall not be lawful for the said vicar and his successors at any time hereafter to grant any lease or leases of the said several messuages or dwelling houses and hereditaments so to be conveyed to the said vicar in exchange as aforesaid, or any of them, without reserving to the said vicar and his successors for the time being for ever such clear annual rent or rents as shall be equal to one moiety or half part at least of the gross yearly value of the premises to be comprised in and demised by such lease or leases; such rents or rent to be made payable to the vicar of the said parish and his successors during the whole term or time of the continuance of such lease or leases respectively.

No lease to be granted by the vicar, of such messuages, without reserving a rent equal to half the value.

Churchwardens may place a bar or chain across the west end of the new street during divine service on Sundays, &c.

"XXXIV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for the churchwardens of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields aforesaid, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to place or cause to be placed a bar or chain extending across the carriageway at the west end of the said new street to be made on the south side of the said church as aforesaid, in order to prevent noise by the passing and repassing of carriages along the said street during the time of divine service on Sundays, and on Christmas Day, Good Friday, and fast or thanksgiving days by proclamation; provided that such bar or chain shall not be used at any other time or times than during the time of divine service as aforesaid.

and appropriated to the bishopric of the diocese of Cloyne, and the bishops for the time being of the said diocese have received the rectorial tithes of the said parish, and have provided for the cure of souls in the said parish by two resident curates there, appointed by such bishops: and whereas it would be highly beneficial to the cure of souls in the said parish, that the said rectorial tithes of the said parish as aforesaid annexed and appropriated to the bishopric of the said diocese, should be disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the bishopric of the said diocese of Cloyne, and that the said parish should be a rectory or benefice with cure of souls in the collation of the Bishop of Cloyne, being warden of the said college of Youghal for the time being: may it therefore please your majesty, upon the petition of the lord bishop for the time being of the diocese of Cloyne, and warden of the college of Youghal, and the humble petition of the two resident curates of the said parish of Youghal for the time being, that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the expiration of six calendar months from and after the passing of this act, the rectory and rectorial tithes of the said parish of Youghal, so as aforesaid heretofore appropriated and united to the bishopric of the said diocese of Cloyne, shall become and be actually disappropriated, disunited, and divested from and out of the bishopric of the said diocese of Cloyne; and that the said rectory, when so disappropriated and disunited, shall be and become a rectory, parish, and collative benefice, with cure of souls, in the patronage and gift of the said Bishop of Cloyne, being warden of the said college of Youghal, and his successors from time to time for the time being; and that from and after the expiration of six calendar months from and after the passing of this act, the said Bishop of Cloyne and his successors, being wardens of the said college of Youghal, shall have the right of patronage and collation to the said rectory, and shall and may, from and after the expiration of six calendar months from and after the passing of this act, and so from time to time whenever the said rectory shall become or be vacant, collate any person to be rector and incumbent of the said parish or rectory, and shall and may cause such incumbent to be instituted and inducted into such rectory; and every such person so collated, instituted, and inducted, shall be and become rector and incumbent of such rectory, parish, and benefice, and shall have cure of souls in such rectory, parish, and benefice, and shall be entitled to the rectorial tithes, and to all other emoluments and profits of the said rectory, parish, and benefice, disappropriated and disunited from the bishopric of the said diocese.

"II. And whereas, by an act made in the parliament of Ireland in the second year of the reign of King George the First, intituled, 'An Act for the real Union and Division of Parishes,' it is among other things enacted, that all acts of parliament for the uniting or disuniting of particular parishes or parts of parishes, or erecting particular churches, shall be deemed as public and general acts in all courts and by all persons, and that no fees shall be paid or taken by any person or persons for passing any such act of parliament: and whereas it is expedient that a like provision should be made in this case, be it therefore enacted, that this present act is and shall be deemed a public and general act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such in all courts, and by all judges, justices, and others, without being specially pleaded; and that no fees shall be paid or taken by any person or persons for the passing the same."

"IV. (2) And, with regard to the place and mode of imprisonment for all indictable offences punishable under this act, be it enacted, that where any person shall be convicted of any felony or misdemeanour punishable under this act, for which imprisonment may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for the whole or any portion or portions of such imprisonment, or of such imprisonment with hard labour, as to the court in its discretion shall seem meet.

The court may for all offences within this act, order hard labour or solitary confinement.

"X. (3) And be it enacted, that if any person shall break and enter any church (4) or chapel (5), and steal therein any chattel (6), or having stolen any

Sacrilege, when capital.

(3) Repealed by Stat. 5 & 6 Gul. 4, c. 81.

(4) Church.—The tower of a parish church, having an internal communication with, and not being separated from, the body of the church, is a part of the church, within the meaning of Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29. Upon an indictment for breaking into a parish church, and stealing two surplices and a scarf, it appeared, that the surplices and scarf were stolen from a box kept in the church tower; the tower was built higher than the church, and had a separate roof, but it had no outer door, the only way of going into it, being through the body of the church, from which the tower was not separated by a door or partition of any kind: it was objected, that the stealing of these articles deposited in the tower was not sacrilege; but it was held, that a tower, circumstanced as such tower was, must be taken to be part of the church, and that the stealing of these articles in the tower was a stealing in the church, within the meaning of Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10. Res v. Wheeler, 3 C. & P. 585.

(5) Chapel.—The word "chapel," in Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10, means a chapel where the rites and ceremonies of the church of England are performed, and does not include the chapels of dissenters. Upon an indictment for breaking and entering a chapel, which, upon the evidence, turned out to be a dissenting chapel; Mr. Justice Gaselee and Mr. Baron Vaughan were of opinion, that as dissenting chapels were mentioned expressly in Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, which makes the burning of churches, &c. a capital offence, and were not mentioned in Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10, which stands in the statute book, as the chapter next preceding it, the omission must have been intentional, and consequently, that a dissenting chapel was not within Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10. Res v. Warren, 6 C. & P. 335, note (a). Vide etiam Res v. Richardson, 6 Ibid. 335. Res v. Nixon, 7 Ibid. 442. It should seem, that these cases are not applicable to the Irish act. 1 Russell on Crimes by Greaves, 844.

(6) Any chattel.—The words "any chattel," would probably be deemed to extend to articles in a church or chapel, though not used for divine service. The words "any goods," in the repealed statute, 1 Edw. 6, c. 12, were held not to be confined to goods used for divine service, but to extend to articles used in the church to keep it in proper order; and it was considered, that such articles were under the protection of the statute, whilst the church was in a course of being repaired, if they had not been brought in merely for the purpose of such repairs. Whilst a church was being repaired, the prisoner stole from it a pot used to hold charcoal for airing the vaults, and a snatch-block, used to raise weights, if the bells wanted repair. These articles had been kept in the church for years, and were not brought in for the repairs which were then in progress. Upon a case reserved, the judges were unanimous, that such goods were under the protection of the statute, and that a capital sentence ought to be passed upon the prisoner, as they thought, that the violation of the sanctity of the place, was what the statute was intended to prevent. Res v. Rourke, cit. Ibid. 845.

The word "chattel" does not include anything affixed to the freehold. Upon an indictment for breaking into a chapel, and stealing a bell and divers other articles, it appeared, that the bell was the only thing not fixed in the chapel, and it was held, that the case must be confined to the stealing of the bell; for although the same statute, by the forty-fourth section, enacted, that stealing fixtures might be the subject of larceny, yet it did not say that fixtures should be considered as chattels, which they must be, to bring them within the section, upon which that indictment was founded. Res v. Nixon, 7 C. & P. 442.

The goods of a dissenting chapel, vested in trustees, cannot be described as the goods of a servant, who has merely the care of the chapel and the things in it, to clean and keep them in order, though he have the key of the chapel, and no person except the minister have another key. Res v. Hutchinson, R. & R. 412. But books belonging to a society of dissenters, and stolen from their chapel, may be described as the property of one of the members of the society, chattel in any church or chapel, shall break out of the same, every such offender, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon.

"XXI. And be it enacted, that if any person shall steal, or shall for any fraudulent purpose take from its place of deposit for the time being, or from any person having the lawful custody thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously obliterate, injure, or destroy, any record, writ, return, panel, process, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, rule, order, or warrant of attorney, or any original document whatsoever, of or belonging to any court of record, or relating to any matter, civil or criminal, begun, depending, or terminated, in any such court, or any bill, answer, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, order, or decree, or any original document whatsoever of or belonging to any court of equity, or relating to any cause or matter begun, depending, or terminated, in any such court, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to suffer such other punishment by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as the court shall award, and it shall not in any indictment for such offence be necessary to allege that the article in respect of which the offence is committed is the property of any person, or that the same is of any value.

The stealing,
&c. of wills.

"XXII. And be it enacted, that if any person shall, either during the life of the testator or testatrix, or after his or her death, steal, or for any fraudulent purpose destroy or conceal, any will, codicil, or other testamentary instrument, whether the same shall relate to real or personal estate, or to both, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to any of the punishments which the court may award, as hereinbefore last mentioned; and it shall not in any indictment for such offence be necessary to allege that such will, codicil, or other instrument, is the property of any person, or that the same is of any value.

relating to real estate.

"XXIII. And be it enacted, that if any person shall steal any paper or parchment, written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, being evidence of the title or of any part of the title to any real estate, every such offender shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to any of the punishments which the court may award as hereinbefore last mentioned; and in any indictment for such offence it shall be sufficient to allege the thing stolen to be evidence of the title, or of part of the title, of the person or of some one of the persons having a present interest, whether legal or equitable, in the real estate to which the same relates, and to mention such real estate, or some part thereof; and it shall not be necessary to allege the thing stolen to be of any value.

the second degree and accessories.

"LXI. (1) And be it enacted, that in the case of every felony punishable under this act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable with death or otherwise, in the same manner as the principal

by name, "and others." Upon an indictment for stealing a Bible and hymn-book, the property of J. Bennett and others, it appeared that the books had been presented to the society of Wesleyan methodists, from whose chapel they had been stolen, and they had been bound at the expense of the society; Bennett was one of the trustees of the chapel, and a member of the society, but no trust deed was produced: it was held, that as Bennett was one of the society, the property in the books was well laid in him "and others." Rex v. Boulton, 5 C. & P. 537.

It has been holden that where the bells, books, or other goods belonging to a church, are stolen, they may be laid in the indictment to be the goods of the parishioners. 1 Hawk. P. C. c. 33, s. 45. 2 East. P. C. c. 16, s. 69, p. 631. And it is said, that he who takes away the goods of a chapel or abbey, in time of vacation, may be indicted, in the first case, for stealing bona capelle, being in the custody of such and such; and, in the second, for stealing bona domus et ecclesie, &c. Ibid. 1 Russell on Crimes by Greaves, 845.

(1) Mr. Lonsdale, (Cr. L. 130,) treats Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 61, as repealed, so far as relates to principals in the second degree and accessories before the fact, but subsisting as to accessories after the fact; but as the words are "any felony punishable under this act," and as sacrilege is not now punishable under Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, it may be doubted, whether the accessories after the fact are punishable under this section. If they are not, it should seem, that they are punishable under Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, ss. 8 & 9, and Stat. 7 Gul. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5, as for a felony, for which no punishment is specially provided. 1 Russell on Crimes, by Greaves, 846.

GEO. 4, c. 30.

"Whereas various statutes now in force in that part of the United Kingdom called England, relative to malicious injuries to property, are by an act of the present session of parliament repealed, from and after the last day of June in the present year, except as to offences committed before or upon that day; and it is expedient that the provisions contained in those statutes should be amended and consolidated into this act, to take effect at the same time as the said repealing act: be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that this act shall commence on the first day of July in the present year.

Commencement of act.

"II. And be it enacted, that if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any church or chapel, or to any chapel for the religious worship of persons disentering from the united church of England and Ireland, duly registered or recorded, or shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malthouse, hop oast, barn, or granary, or to any building or erection used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, whether the same or any of them respectively shall then be in the possession of the offender, or in the possession of any other person, with intent thereby to injure or defraud any person, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon.

"VIII. And be it enacted, that if any persons, riotously and tumultuously assembled together to the disturbance of the public peace, shall unlawfully and with force demolish (2), pull down, or destroy, or begin to demolish, pull down, or

(1) Vide Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 72; Stat. 5 & 6 Gul. 4, c. 81; and Stat. 6 & 7 Gul. 4, c. 4.

(2) Demolish:—If rioters, after proceeding a certain length, leave off of their own accord, before the act of demolition be completed, that is evidence from which a jury may infer that they did not intend to demolish the house.

A party of rioters came to a house about midnight, and in a riotous manner burst open the door, broke some of the furniture, all the windows, and one of the window-frames, and then went away, there being nothing to hinder them from doing more damage: it was held, that although the breaking and damage done was a sufficient beginning to demolish the house, yet unless the jury were satisfied, that the ultimate object was to destroy the house, and that, if they had carried their intentions into full effect, they would, in point of fact, have demolished it, it was not a beginning to demolish within the act. Res v. Thomas, 4 C. & P. 237. Regina v. Howell, 9 Ibid. 437. So where a mob pursued a person to a public house, where he took refuge, and the doors and windows were all secured, and the mob demanded that he should be given up to them, or they would pull the house down, and the front door and lower windows were beaten in, and the shutters and frames of some of them much broken, and part of the mob entered the house and did much damage to the furniture, but in about twenty minutes, being unable to find the person, who had there taken refuge, and a rumour being spread that the mayor was coming, they went away: it was held, that this offence was not within the act; for the persons committing the outrage must have the intention of destroying the house, before they can be charged with a felonious beginning to demolish, and here they had no such intention, but their intention was to get possession of the person who had entered the house. Res v. Price, 5 Ibid. 510.

But if rioters are interrupted in the work of demolition by the police or any other force, that is evidence to show, that they were compelled to desist from that which they had designed, and it is for the jury to infer, that they had begun to demolish within the meaning of the act. A party of coal-whippers, having a feeling of ill-will to a coal-lumper, who had paid less than the usual wages, created a mob, riotously went to the house where he kept his workshop, cried out that they would murder him, threw stones, brickbats, &c., broke windows and partitions, and threw down part of a wall in a yard, and continued, after no success, throwing stones at the house, till they were compelled to desist by the presence of the destroy, any church or chapel, or any chapel for the religious worship of persons dissenting from the united church of England and Ireland, duly registered or recorded, or any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malthouse, hop east, barn, or granary, or any building or erection used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, or any machinery, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture or in any branch thereof, or in any steam engine or other engine for sinking, draining, or working any mine, or any staith, building, or erection used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggonway, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon.

“XXVI. And be it enacted, that in the case of every felony punishable under this act every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable with death or otherwise, in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this act shall, on conviction, be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years; and every person who shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any misdemeanor punishable under this act, shall be liable to be indicted and punished as a principal offender.”

police: it was held, that this case was distinguishable from Rex v. Thomas, (4 C. & P. 237,) because the mob did not leave off voluntarily, but after the threats of the police, and that they might be convicted of beginning to demolish the house, though their principal object was to injure the lumper, provided it was also their object to demolish the house. Rex v. Batt, 6 Ibid. 329. The beginning to pull down, means not simply a demolition of a part, but a part with an intent to demolish the whole. In Ashton's case, (1 Lewin C. C. 296,) the prisoners were indicted for beginning to demolish a building used in carrying on a trade. It appeared that they began by breaking the windows and doors, and having afterwards entered the house, they set fire to the furniture, but no part of the house was burnt. Mr. Justice Parke directed the jury, that, “The beginning to pull down, means not simply a demolition of a part, but a part with an intent to demolish the whole. It is for you to say if the prisoners meant to stop where they did, and do no more; because if they did, they are not guilty; but if they intended, when they broke the windows and doors, to go farther, and destroy the house, then they are guilty of a capital offence. If they had the full means of going further, and were not interrupted, but left off of their own accord, it is evidence from which you may judge, that they meant the work of demolition to stop where it did. If you think that they originally came there without intent to demolish, and the setting fire to the furniture was an afterthought, but with that intent, then you must acquit, because no part of the house having been burnt, there was no beginning to destroy the house. If they came originally without such intent, but had afterwards set fire to the house, then the offence would be arson. If you have doubts, whether they originally came with a purpose to demolish, you may use the setting fire to the furniture under such circumstances, and in such manner, as that the necessary consequence, if not for timely interference, would have been the burning of the house, as evidence to show, that they had such intent, although they began to demolish in another manner.”

If a person forms part of a riotous assembly at the time the act of demolition commences, or if he wilfully joins such riotous assembly, so as to co-operate with them whilst the act of demolition is going on, and before it is completed, in either case he comes within the description of the offence, although he may not have assisted with his own hand in the demolition of the building. Per Chief Justice Tindal, Bristol Special Commission, 5 C. & P. 265, in not.

In order to prove that there was a beginning to demolish the house, it must be proved that some part of the freehold was destroyed; it is not therefore sufficient to prove that the window-shutters were demolished. Regina v. Howell, 9 Ibid. 437.

Although setting fire to a house is a substantive felony, yet if fire be made the means of attempting to destroy a house, it is as much a beginning to demolish, as if any other mode of destruction were resorted to. Ibid.

“It is a malicious act in contemplation of law, when a man wilfully does that which is illegal, and which, in its necessary consequence, must injure his neighbour; and it is unnecessary to observe, that the setting fire to another's house, whether the owner be a stranger to the prisoner, or a person against whom he had a former grudge, must be equally injurious to him; nor will it be necessary to prove, that the house which forms the subject of the indictment in any particular case, was that which was actually set on fire by the prisoner. It will be sufficient to constitute the offence, if he is shewn to have feloniously set on fire another house, from which the flames communicated to the rest. No man can shelter himself from punishment, on the ground that the mischief which he committed was wider in its consequences than he originally intended.” Per Chief Justice Tindal, Bristol Special Commission, 5 Ibid. 267, in not.

The foregoing principles, although applied to the demolition of houses, are equally applicable to the demolition of churches.

of any interest arising from such inhabitancy, be exempted or precluded from giving evidence either for the plaintiff or for the defendants.

"VIII. And whereas it is expedient to provide a summary mode of proceeding where the damage is of small amount; be it therefore enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any person to commence any action against the inhabitants of any hundred or other like district, where the damage alleged to have been sustained by reason of any of the offences in this act mentioned shall not exceed the sum of thirty pounds, but the party damnified shall, within seven days after the commission of the offence, give a notice in writing of his claim for compensation, according to the form in the schedule hereunto annexed, to the high constable or some one of the high constables (if there be more than one) of the hundred or other like district in which the offence shall have been committed; and such high constable shall, within seven days after the receipt of the notice, exhibit the same to some two justices of the peace of the county, riding, or division in which such hundred or district shall be situate, residing in or acting for such hundred or district, and they shall thereupon appoint a special petty session of all the justices of the peace of the county, riding, or division, acting for such hundred or district, to be holden within not less than twenty nor more than thirty days next after the exhibition of such notice, for the purpose of hearing and determining any claim which may be then and there brought before them on account of any such damage; and such high constable shall, within three days after such appointment, give notice in writing to the claimant, of the day and hour and place appointed for holding such petty session, and shall within ten days give the like notice to all the justices acting for such hundred or district; and the claimant is hereby required to cause a notice in writing, in the form in the schedule hereunto annexed, to be placed on the church or chapel door, or other conspicuous part of the parish, township, or place in which such damage shall have been sustained, on two Sundays preceding the day of holding such petty session.

"IX. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the justices, not being less than two, at such petty session or any adjournment thereof, to hear and examine upon oath or affirmation the claimant, and any of the inhabitants of the hundred or other like district, and their several witnesses, concerning any such offence, and the damage sustained thereby; and thereupon the said justices, or the major part of them, if they shall find that the claimant has sustained any damage by means of any such offence, shall make an order for payment of the amount of such damage to him, together with his reasonable costs and charges, and also an order for payment of the costs and charges (if any) of the high constable or inhabitants, and shall direct such order or orders to the treasurer of the county, riding, or division in which such hundred or district shall be situate, who shall pay the same to the party or parties therein named, and shall be reimbursed for the same in the manner hereinbefore directed.

"X. And be it enacted, that if any high constable shall refuse or neglect to exhibit or give such notice as is required in any of the cases aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the party damnified to sue him for the amount of the damage sustained, such amount to be recovered by an action on the case, together with full costs of suit.

"XI. And be it enacted, that every action or summary claim to recover compensation for the damage caused to any church or chapel by any of the offences in this act mentioned, shall be brought in the name of the rector, vicar, or curate of such church or chapel, or in case there be no rector, vicar, or curate, then in the names of the church or chapelwardens, if there be any such, and if not, in the name or names of any one or more of the persons in whom the property of such chapel may be vested; and the amount recovered in any such case shall be applied in the rebuilding or repairing such church or chapel; and where any of the offences in this act mentioned shall be committed on any property belonging to a body corporate, such body may recover compensation against the hundred or other like district, in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as any person damnified is by this act enabled to do: provided always, that the several conditions which are hereinbefore required to be performed by or on behalf of any person damnified, may, in the case of a body corporate, be performed by any officer of such body on behalf thereof." STAT. 7 & 8

the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons in this present parliament assembled, that whereas there are small or no tithes or other duties settled by law upon the incumbents who have actual cure of souls in the city and suburbs of Dublin, and the liberties thereunto adjoining, and in other cities, towns corporate of this your majesty's kingdom of Ireland: that it may be therefore enacted, and be it hereby enacted by your most excellent majesty, by and with the consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and the commons in parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors, and six or more of your majesty's privy council of this kingdom, to allot, ascertain, set forth, and charge, or cause to be allotted, ascertained, set forth, and charged, any sum or sums of money to be paid unto the several and respective incumbents, and their respective successors within the said city and suburbs of Dublin, and liberties thereunto adjoining, and other cities and towns corporate in this kingdom, who have actual cure of souls in each parish respectively, out of each house and houses belonging to the said parish, whether it be by apportioning the said money and payment according to the yearly value of each house, or otherwise, so as the same payment do not exceed twelpence sterling for every pound of the yearly value of each house, such yearly value always to be intended as the same shall be valued upon oath by persons to be nominated in that behalf, and authorized by commission under the great seal of this kingdom, by direction of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors for the time being of this your majesty's kingdom; in which valuation, if it shall happen that any house be valued above sixty pounds sterling per annum, yet the said commissioners, or other persons to be intrusted in the said valuations, are to return such house but at sixty pounds per annum; which said commission or commissions are from time to time returned under the hands and seals of the commissioners to the clerk of the council for the time being; and after such allotment so made, and sum or sums of money ascertained, charged and set forth to be paid as aforesaid, and approved by the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors, and council of this kingdom, such charge of each inhabitant of each house, shall be as good and effectual in law, as if the very same sum or sums which shall be so charged, had been particularly expressed and enacted to be paid out of each house; and the sum so allotted or charged upon each inhabitant shall be received by the churchwardens respectively, and by them paid to the several and respective incumbents, and their successors, by four equal portions every year, viz. the feast of the Nativity of our Blessed Lord and Saviour, the feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the feast of St. John the Baptist, and the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, by the inhabitants, or respective inhabitants thereof; and in case any inhabitant shall, upon demand by the churchwardens of the respective parishes, refuse or delay to pay such sum or sums of money as shall be so allotted or charged upon the house wherein he dwelleth, at any of the days or times aforesaid, that then it shall and may be lawful for the said churchwardens of each parish to enter into the said house and distrain on the several and respective persons so in arrear for the same, and the distress or distresses to carry away and sell to pay to the incumbent such money as shall be due unto him, and to deliver the remainder unto the said inhabitant; and if the churchwardens shall fail to do their duties therein, then, and in such case, such churchwardens to be punished for their neglects, as the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors and council of this kingdom shall think fit.

"II. Provided always, that no commission by virtue of this act shall be directed or issue for valuation into any one parish of any houses hereafter to be built, more or oftener than once in three years.

"III. And whereas the parish church of St. Andrew's in the county of the city of Dublin, hath been wholly demolished for these many years past, and no effectual care hitherto taken for the rebuilding thereof, whereby the inhabitants of the said parish, and of Lazar, alias Laxie-hill, have had no place within themselves for the public service of God, to the great dishonour of God, and the discomfort of the people: may it therefore please your most excellent majesty, that for the honour of God, and accommodation of the inhabitants aforesaid, it be enacted by your majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal and commons in this present parliament assembled, that the ambite and tract of ground commonly called the Stane, alias Lazar, alias Laxie-hill, be constituted and made part of the parish of St. Andrew's aforesaid; and that the inhabitants of the said parish be hereby authorized, by contribution amongst themselves, to rebuild the said church, in such manner as shall be agreed upon by them, or the major part of them; and that the said parish church shall for the time to come be presentative as a vicarage by the lord chancellor of Ireland, the lord archbishop of Dublin, the vice-treasurer of his majesty's revenue, the lord chief justice of his majesty's court of Chief Place, the lord chief justice of his majesty's court of Common Pleas, the lord chief baron of his majesty's court of Exchequer, and the master of the Rolls, and their successors for the time being, or by any four or more of them, whereof the Lord Archbishop of Dublin to be always one: and that Richard Lingart, the now professor of divinity in Trinity college near Dublin, be and is hereby constituted the first vicar or incumbent thereof.

other chief governor or governors, and six or more of his majesty's privy council in Ireland, to allot, ascertain, set forth, and charge certain sums of money to be paid to the several incumbents within the city and suburbs of Dublin, and liberties thereunto adjoining, and other cities and towns corporate in Ireland, who have actual cure of souls in each parish respectively, out of the houses belonging to such parish respectively, according to the yearly value of each house, to be allotted and charged on the inhabitants in manner in the said act mentioned; and that the sum so allotted and charged shall be received by the churchwardens of each parish respectively, and by them paid to the several and respective incumbents; and in case of refusal or delay of payment such churchwardens are by the said act empowered to levy such sums by distress and sale; and on failure of their duties therein such churchwardens are punishable as in the said act is provided: and whereas by an act made in the parliament of Ireland in the thirty-third year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act respecting the Collection of Public Money to be levied in the County of the City of Dublin by Presentment,' the churchwardens in the respective parishes in the county of the said city are required to return to the treasurer of the public money an exact account of the gross sum of ministers' money payable by the inhabitants of each and every such parish: and whereas the performance of the duties required by the said acts by the churchwardens of parishes is in many respects grievous to such churchwardens; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that at any time after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful for the several and respective incumbents, and their respective successors, within the city and suburbs of Dublin, and liberties thereunto adjoining, and within other cities and towns corporate in Ireland, who have actual cure of souls in each parish respectively, and such incumbents are hereby respectively authorized, empowered, and required from time to time, by any writing under the hand of any such incumbent

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that Arthur earl of Anglesey, his majesty's vice-treasurer, Sir John Temple, knight, master of the rolls, and Sir Maurice Eastace, knight, or the survivors of them, be and are hereby constituted and appointed churchwardens of the said parish for the first two years: and that they and their successors, churchwardens for the time being, be hereby empowered to rate and assess the several houses within the parish of St. Andrew's and Stane, alias Laxie-hill, in such manner as they shall think fit, with the consent of the said inhabitants, or the major part of them, at such meetings as shall be appointed to that purpose, for and towards the building of the said church, if the voluntary contributions already made, and to be made, will not do it; and for the relief of the poor, and other pious uses, as shall be thought necessary by the inhabitants of the parish, or the major part of them.

"V. And be it enacted, that the said churchwardens and their successors for the time being shall be a body corporate, and have power to sue and be sued by the name of the churchwardens of the parish of St. Andrew's, and by that name to purchase lands, tenements, and hereditaments of the yearly value of one hundred pounds sterling to the use of the said parish; the Statute of Mortmain, or any other law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding.

"VI. And whereas the rectory of the church of St. Andrew's aforesaid, together with certain houses and their back-sides, enclosed within the churchyard, have anciently belonged to the precentor of the cathedral church of St. Patrick's, near Dublin, as part of the corps of his precentorship: in consideration thereof, be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the now precentor of St. Patrick's, Dublin, aforesaid, and his successors, shall be rector or rectors of the said parish, and shall have the yearly sum of ten pounds sterling appropriated, and be it hereby appropriated, unto him and them, to be paid unto him and them by the vicar or incumbent of the said church of St. Andrew's for the time being, in two equal proportions at two set times of the year, (that is to say,) five pounds at or upon the feast day of St. John the Baptist, and other five pounds at or upon the feast day of the Nativity of our blessed Lord and Saviour; the first payment to begin at or upon the first of the said feast days as shall happen to be full six months next after the induction of the first vicar or incumbent aforesaid.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that such punishment as by this act shall or may be imposed by the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors and council for the time being, upon churchwardens for neglecting their duties required by this act, shall not extend to any other kind of punishment, than by one or more fine or fines, or imprisonment, not to exceed the sum of five pounds sterling for such respective offence, and such imprisonment not to exceed one month, at any one time, for any one offence, and the same to continue without bail or mainprize, if they shall so think fit."

newly-erected or united parish had been an old parish, and as if such proportion of glebe had been always held with and enjoyed as the glebe belonging to such newly-erected or united parish or parishes, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that where one or more parish or parishes, or part of one or more parish or parishes, shall be united to another parish or parishes, or to a part of any parish or parishes, in pursuance of this act, and the incumbent of any the said united parishes, or of the parish or parishes whereof part only shall be so united to any other parish or parishes, shall die, resign, or be removed, then the next incumbent or person succeeding in the place of him so dying, resigning, or being removed, shall be chargeable with and shall accordingly pay the first-fruits of such parish or parishes, or part of parish or parishes, so united, as if he were legally collated or instituted and inducted to the same; and to the end that such incumbent may be charged with such first-fruits, the archbishops and bishops of Ireland are hereby respectively required, each in his own diocese, to make and return to the first-fruits' office a certificate of the death, removal, or resignation of such incumbent or incumbents of any such parish or parishes, or part of parish or parishes, so united, and the name of the next incumbent or person succeeding in the place of him so dying, resigning, or being removed as aforesaid, together with the several and particular denominations of each divided and united parish or parishes, within such time and in such and the same manner as certificates are or usually have been made and returned upon the institution or collation of incumbents to livings or benefices in Ireland.

"V. And in order to prevent any disputes which might arise upon the apportioning the first-fruits, crown rents, port corn rents, pensions, procurations, synodals, and salaries payable to the schoolmasters of the diocesan schools by the several incumbents of such divided or united parishes, be it enacted, that upon the application of any incumbent of any such divided or united parish or parishes to the bishop of the diocese in which such divided or united parish lies, it shall be lawful for such bishop, and he is hereby empowered and directed, to inquire into the value of such parishes or parts of parishes as are separated and divided from the old parish, and erected into the new parish, and to settle and adjust the proportion of first-fruits, crown rents, port corn rents, pensions, procurations, and synodals, and the salaries of the said schoolmasters, which the incumbent of such old divided parish and newly-erected parish is to pay; which adjudication, being in writing, and signed and sealed by the said bishop, and registered in the register book of the said bishop, shall be the proportion which the incumbent of such newly-erected parish is to pay, and shall be binding and conclusive upon the several incumbents of such divided and united parish and parishes, and their successors; any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

"VI. And be it further enacted, that such adjudication being made by the bishop of the diocese in manner as aforesaid, a certificate of so much thereof as relates to the proportion of first-fruits, crown rent, and port corn rent, wherewith the said old divided parishes and new erected parishes are to be charged by the adjudication, shall be returned by the bishop of the diocese under his episcopal seal into his majesty's court of Exchequer, there to be filed of record; and such old divided parishes and newly-erected parishes shall be charged in all process to be issued out of the said court for first-fruits, crown rent, and port corn rent, according to the proportion certified as aforesaid, and not otherwise; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that after presentation and institution or collation, and also induction of any clerk or incumbent to any such parish or part of parish which shall be then vacant and become part of such united parish, shall proceed to the election and appointment of churchwardens and other parish officers, as by law they might have done if the other part of such united parish had become void; which churchwardens and other parish officers shall from time to time be elected and appointed in manner required by law, as if such united parish had been an old parish, and as if such proportion of glebe had been always held with and enjoyed as the glebe belonging to such newly-erected or united parish or parishes, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

Incumbent of divided parish shall receive from his successor, a proportion of amount of such improvements, although exceeding two years' income.

On death or removal of incumbent of any newly-erected parish, the patron entitled to the first avoidance may present to such new parish.

Clerk so presented may be inducted; and may qualify in any church in the vacant part, or in the old parish church, and enter on the cure of souls, &c.

On death or removal of the other incumbents, the clerk so presented shall be the full inother parish officers are in other parishes elected and appointed, till the other parts of such united parish shall become void; and after such avoidance the election and appointment of such churchwardens and other parish officers of such united parish shall be in the same manner, and at the same time, and by the same persons, as is required by law in the other parishes of the diocese in which such united or newly-erected parish lies and is situated.

“VIII. And be it further enacted, that where any large parish shall be divided in manner as in this act is mentioned, and that the incumbent of any such divided parish shall be entitled to receive any sum of money from his next successor in any such parish, in case the same had not been divided, on account of any purchase of glebe or addition to the glebe, or of any buildings or improvements made on the glebe of such parish, or any money paid by him to his predecessor on such account, according to the laws in force for that purpose, such incumbent shall have and be entitled to receive from his next successor in that part of such divided parish within which such additional glebe shall be situate, or on which such buildings and improvements shall have been made, the same sum as he would have been entitled to receive if the said parish had not been divided, although the sum so to be received should exceed two years' income of that part of the parish; and such incumbent, having paid such proportion of the said money, shall be entitled to receive such proportion of the money so to be paid from his successors, according to the laws in force for that purpose, in such manner as he ought in case such parish had not been divided.

“IX. And be it further enacted, that where any such union or unions shall be made by virtue of this act, and a new parish erected, and it shall happen that any incumbent enjoying any parish or part of a parish so united to any other parish or part of a parish constituting the newly-erected parish shall die or be removed, whereby the parish or part of a parish which such incumbent so dying or removed held and enjoyed is no longer an old parish or part of an old parish, but is become part of the united and newly-erected parish, it shall and may be lawful, from and after the death or removal of such incumbent, to and for the patron or patrons of such united and newly-erected parish, who by law is or are entitled to present or collate to the first turn upon the avoidance of such newly-erected parish, to present or collate his clerk to such newly-erected parish by the name or description which such newly-erected parish is distinguished or called by in the act of council establishing such union and erecting such parish, as if all the incumbents of such united and newly-erected parish were then dead or removed, and as if such united and newly-erected parish were then entirely void; and upon such presentation, and institution thereupon, or collation, the clerk so presented and instituted or collated shall be entitled to induction to the said united and newly-erected parish, as if all the incumbents were dead or removed, and may be inducted into the parish or part of a parish which shall be then void, without waiting for the death or removal of the other incumbent or incumbents, and may perform all matters and things for the qualifying or entitling himself, as by law is required, to the said united parish, in any church, if any such there be in that parish or part of a parish then become vacant, and in case there be no church upon such parish or part of a parish so vacant, then in the old parish church of the parish from whence such part of a parish is taken; and such clerk so presented and instituted or collated, and also inducted, shall then enter upon the cure of souls, and take and receive all such tithes, duties, or other profits, in such vacant parish or part of a parish, in as large and ample a manner as the old and former incumbent so dying or removed was by law entitled to have, take, and receive in such parish or part of a parish before it became void.

“X. And be it further enacted, that such clerk so presented and instituted or collated, and so inducted, in pursuance of this act, into such united or newly-erected parish, upon the death or removal of the other incumbent or incumbents of the other parishes or parts of a parish, constituting such union, and erected into the said new parish, as they respectively become void, shall and may enter upon the cure of souls, and take and receive such tithes, duties, and other profits, as the said governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, under his and their hands and seals, to such unions and divisions, or establishment of perpetual curacies and chapels of ease, shall to all intents and purposes be as good and valid in law as if the consent of his majesty, his heirs or successors, was thereunto signified by letters patent under the great seal of Ireland; provided always, that such consent of the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors as aforesaid, be enrolled in the rolls office of the high court of Chancery of Ireland within six calendar months after the date thereof; for the enrolment whereof three shillings and four pence and no more shall be paid, over and above the expenses usually paid to the engrossing clerk for the same.

“XV. And be it further enacted, that any disappropriation of appropriate parishes, in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, shall not be made in any diocese, unless with the consent of the dean and chapter, under their corporate seal, two thirds at least of the members of such chapter being present and consenting; or where there is not any dean and chapter, with the consent of the archdeacon and major part of the beneficed clergy of such diocese, to be testified in writing under their respective hands and seals.

“XVI. And be it further enacted, that when any parish or parishes appropriate belong to and are annexed to any archbishopric or bishopric in Ireland, it shall and may be lawful for any archbishop, with the consent of the dean and chapter of the diocese, and where there is not any dean and chapter, then with the consent of the major part of the beneficed clergy of the diocese, and also of the archbishop of the province and patron of such parish, under their hands and seals, to unite two or more of such appropriate parishes into one perpetual cure, and to unite one or more such appropriate parish or parishes to any one benefice or benefices contiguous thereto, provided the entire value of each of such respective unions do not exceed one hundred pounds by the year.

“XVII. And whereas in the union of the several parishes which may hereafter be united by virtue of this act there may be several appropriate rectories, and no vicarage within the same; and the rectorial tithes and other profits arising within such respective rectories are to remain, notwithstanding such union, payable to the appropriators or impropiators thereof, and who by reason thereof might by law be obliged to repair the respective chancels belonging to such rectories, and to find a sufficient curate or curates for the performance of divine service and for the cure of souls within the same, before such union; be it enacted, that wherever it shall happen in any union to be made by virtue of this act, that there shall be an impropriate or appropriate rectory within the same, the rector, impropiator, or possessor of which was, before the making of such union, by law obliged to repair the chancel belonging to the parish church of the said rectory, such rector, impropiator, or possessor respectively, his heirs, successors, and assigns, shall, from and after such union so made by virtue of this act, during the continuance of such union, be discharged from repairing of such chancel respectively, and shall, in lieu and instead of repairing the chancel of such rectory, be obliged to contribute a rateable share or proportion, according to the value of the profits arising out of such rectories, to and for the repair of the new chancel of the said united parishes; and such rateable share or proportion shall be settled and adjusted by consent of all parties concerned in interest before such union be made; or in case of any failure of such consent, then such share or proportion shall be ascertained by a decree or order of the court of Chancery in Ireland, on proper application thereto: and if any other person was obliged to repair the chancel of any of the other parish churches so united before such union, every such person and his successors shall be obliged to pay a rateable share towards the repair of the new chancel.

“XVIII. And whereas in some impropriate parishes the impropiators or possessors of the tithes of such parishes are obliged by law to find a curate to serve the cure of the said parishes; be it therefore enacted, that in case such parishes so appropriate or impropriate shall be united pursuant to this act to any other parish or parishes, such impropiator or possessor shall be discharged of and from finding a curate for such parishes so united, and shall be only obliged to contribute his

"XIX. And be it further enacted, that when two or more churches or parishes shall be united into one in pursuance of this act, having formerly had distinct patrons, in such cases the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, and council as aforesaid, with the advice and approbation of the respective archbishop and bishop in whose province and diocese the said churches were situate, shall divide the patronage by turns among the patrons, giving to each of them a right to present oftener and seldomer, according to the true yearly value of the respective parish or parishes whereof they are patrons, the consent of each patron being first had and entered in the instrument for erecting the said union; and such settlement or settlements as aforesaid shall be final and binding to all patrons, whether ecclesiastical or lay patrons, and to all parties, for ever; reserving always unto every archbishop and bishop, registrars and school-masters, their respective dues payable out of every such parish so united: provided always, that where the king's majesty, his heirs and successors, is or shall be entitled to the presentation of any of the said parish churches so to be united, he and they shall, from and immediately after such union, upon the then first vacancy, have the first presentation of an incumbent unto such united church, and afterwards, upon the then next vacancy, the other respective patrons severally, as the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors and council aforesaid, with the advice and approbation aforesaid, shall direct and appoint, regard being had to the respective values of the several parishes so to be united as aforesaid; and so in course respectively in manner aforesaid.

"XX. And be it further enacted, that no owner or proprietor of any rectory inappropriate, having the patronage of the vicarage of the church, shall, by only presenting in his turn a clerk to any union made by virtue of this act, be judged in law to disappropriate his rectory, unless such person making such presentation shall, by express words contained therein, plainly signify his design and intent to make such disappropriation, and that such presentation be under the hand and seal of the patron so presenting, attested by two or more credible persons; any former law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

"XXI. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, any archbishop or bishop of any diocese in Ireland who shall unite any two or more benefices or parishes together, shall, within fourteen days after making the order of such union, report the same, together with the reasons for making such union, to the lord lieutenant in council; and if such union be not disapproved by the lord lieutenant in council within six weeks from the date of such order being received at the council office in Dublin Castle, such union shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever; but that all and every archiepiscopal or episcopal union of benefices or parishes which shall not be so reported, or which shall be within such period as aforesaid disapproved by the lord lieutenant in council, shall be null and void, without any suit, judgment, or process of law.

"XXIV. And be it further enacted, that before any such church or chapel shall be erected in or for any district, the bounds for such district shall be ascertained by an instrument in manner following; that is to say, the archbishop or bishop of the diocese, by writing under his hand and archiepiscopal or episcopal seal, shall and may set out and describe the bounds of such district, and the several townlands which shall be comprised within any such district respectively; and a copy of such instrument shall, within fourteen days from the date thereof, be transmitted to each of the several incumbents of the parishes from which such district shall be formed, and also to the lord lieutenant in council; and the lord lieutenant in council shall hear and determine any objections which may be made by or on behalf of any such incumbents, and shall confirm or alter the bounds of the district so set out and described in such instrument, as the circumstances of the case may appear to require, and shall order such instrument to be altered accordingly: provided always, that such instrument so altered by any such order, or if no order shall be made thereupon by the lord lieutenant in council within six weeks after the date of the transmission of the copy of such instrument to the council office in Dublin Castle, then such instrument, as originally transmitted, shall be entered in the registry of the diocese, for which entry the sum of thirteen shillings and four-pence, and no more, shall be paid to the registrar, and shall also be enrolled in the rolls office of the court of Chancery in Ireland, for which enrolment the sum of thirteen shillings and four-pence, and no more, shall be paid, over and above the expenses usually paid to the ingrossing clerk for the same.

"XXV. And be it further enacted, that upon and after the registry and enrolment of any such instrument, the district therein set out and described shall be deemed and reputed to be a several and distinct district or parish for the purposes of this act, and shall be called and known by such name as shall be given thereto by such instrument; and every church or chapel to be erected in such district shall be deemed a perpetual cure: and the curate of every such church or chapel respectively, when duly nominated and licensed, and his successors, shall be and become bodies politic and corporate, and shall be capable of receiving any endowment from any archbishop or bishop respectively, or their successors, or from the rectors or incumbents of such adjoining parishes, or their successors or any other bodies corporate or politic, or any other person or persons, and to take and receive augmentations from the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of ecclesiastical benefices, in such manner as any curate of any inappropriate or appropriate parish, or chapel of ease or perpetual cure, is by any laws in force in Ireland qualified to take the same; and from and after the time when any of the said cures shall be endowed with sufficient quantity of glebe, it shall and may be lawful for any such curate, with the approbation of the archbishop or bishop of the diocese, to make such buildings and improvements on such glebe, and he shall be entitled to receive such proportion of the money expended in making or building the same from his next successor, as any curate of any inappropriate or appropriate parish, or chapel of ease or perpetual cure, is or shall be entitled unto for buildings on the glebe of his curacy; and all other provisions for encouraging the making buildings and improvements on glebes belonging to the curates of impropriate or appropriate parishes, or chapels of ease or perpetual cures, shall extend to curates of perpetual cures under this act respectively, in the same manner as they now do to the curates of impropriate or appropriate parishes, or chapels of ease or perpetual cures.

“XXVI. And be it further enacted, that from and after the execution, registry, and enrolment of any such instrument, as before directed, it shall and may be lawful for the archbishop or bishop of the diocese to appoint vestries to be held for any and every such intended district, as a separate parish, and two churchwardens to be chosen, and sums of money to be assessed, in the same manner and subject to the same provisions as vestries are directed to be held, and churchwardens chosen, and sums assessed for chapels of ease or perpetual cures, under the directions of the said recited acts of the eleventh and twelfth years of King George the Third; and that every such district or new parish shall be subject to all the same provisions with regard to vestries, elections of churchwardens and other parochial officers, church rates, assessments and applotments, and salaries for parish clerks and sextons, as other impropriate or appropriate curacies, or chapels of ease or perpetual cures, are now subject by the said act, or by any other act or acts in force in Ireland.

“XXVII. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the archbishop or bishop of the diocese in which any such district or new parish shall be formed, and he is hereby required to determine, in and by such instrument as aforesaid, the rates and proportions of salary which each of the incumbents of the adjoining parishes out of which such district shall be formed shall pay to the curate of such district or parish, and to regulate the manner in which each of such incumbents shall, on vacancies of the said curacy, nominate to the said archbishop or bishop, or their successors, a sufficient curate, and also to appoint which of the incumbents shall first nominate, and the order in which the several incumbents of all such adjoining parishes shall in their turn nominate such curate; and so soon as any such church or chapel shall be erected and set apart for divine worship, the rector or incumbent of one of the said adjoining parishes, whose turn it shall be, shall nominate to the said archbishop or bishop of the diocese a sufficient curate for such church or chapel; and such curate shall be approved of and licensed by such archbishop or bishop, in such manner as other curates are by law to be licensed and approved of; and upon every vacancy of any such cure, by the death or removal of such curate, or by his acceptance of any other cure, or of any benefice with cure of souls, another curate shall be nominated by the rector or incumbent of such of the said adjoining parishes whose turn it shall be so to nominate, in manner aforesaid; and in case the rector or incumbent of any such adjoining parish for the time being, whose turn it shall be so to nominate, shall fail or neglect to nominate a curate for the space of two months next after any such church or chapel shall be erected and set apart, or next after any such vacancy shall happen, such incumbent shall forfeit and lose his turn for that time, and it shall and may be lawful for the archbishop or bishop respectively to appoint and license a curate for the district where such failure shall happen; and such archbishop or bishop shall in all cases allocate such salary for every such curate, so to be nominated and appointed and licensed for any of the said cures, as such archbishop or bishop is enabled to do by the laws in force in Ireland in other cases of perpetual cures.

“XXVIII. And be it further enacted, that if the rector or incumbent of any of such adjoining parishes shall by deed in writing, with the consent of the archbishop or bishop of the diocese, and of the patron, and the dean and chapter of the said diocese where there is a dean and chapter, or in any diocese where there is no dean and chapter, then by the consent of the major part of the beneficed clergy at their respective visitations, testified by their being parties to and affixing their hands and seals to such writing, endow any such cure with a competent portion of glebe or tithes for or towards the maintenance of the curate, such rector or Districts under this act shall have all parochial rights.

“XXIX. And be it further enacted, that every such district or new parish, to be formed under the authority of this act, shall have all parochial rights by law appertaining to any parish, for the purposes in this act mentioned as aforesaid, and for all other purposes whatsoever, in like manner to all intents and purposes as other parishes may by law be entitled unto; and that every such district or new parish shall be discharged and exempted from all claims and charges whatsoever, as part of any former parish or parishes; saving nevertheless to the rectors or incumbents of the several adjoining parishes, and their successors, all their rights as rectors or incumbents of the respective portions of such districts.

Cure of souls shall remain in incumbents of former parishes.

“An Act to provide for the Payment of a Salary (in lieu of Fees) to the Judge of the Prerogative Court and Court of Faculties in Ireland.”

The offices of judge of the Prerogative and Faculty courts in Ireland shall be considered and held as one office.

“Whereas the offices of judge or commissary of his majesty's court of Prerogative for causes ecclesiastical, and commissary of his majesty's court of Faculties, in and throughout the whole of that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, are judicial offices, and have always hitherto been held and enjoyed by one and the same person: and whereas it is expedient that provision should be made for the payment of a certain annual salary to the judge or person holding or who shall hold the said offices jointly, and that such salary should be in lieu of all fees and emoluments whatsoever receivable by such judge or person, and that all such fees should be applied to the public use: be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act, the office of judge or commissary of his majesty's court of Prerogative for causes ecclesiastical, and the office of commissary of his majesty's court of Faculties, in and throughout that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, both which offices are held and enjoyed by the present judge or commissary thereof, shall from thenceforth for ever continue to be jointly held and enjoyed by one and the same person, and shall from time to time for ever be granted and held as one office, and that the person holding such office shall be styled the judge or commissary of his majesty's court of Prerogative for causes ecclesiastical and court of Faculties in and through-

"II. And whereas the protestant episcopal church of England and Ireland, and the doctrine, discipline, and government thereof, and the protestant presbyterian church of Scotland, and the doctrine, discipline, and government thereof, are by the laws of this realm severally established, permanently and inviolably: and whereas it is just and fitting, that on the repeal of such parts of the said acts as impose the necessity of taking the sacrament of the Lord's supper according to the rites or usage of the church of England, as a qualification for office, a declaration to the following effect should be substituted in lieu thereof; be it therefore enacted, that every person who shall hereafter be placed, elected, or chosen in or to the office of mayor, alderman, recorder, bailiff, town clerk, or common councilman, or in or to any office of magistracy, or place, trust, or employment relating to the government of any city, corporation, borough, or cinque port within England and Wales or the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, shall, within one calendar month next before or upon his admission into any of the aforesaid offices or trusts, make and subscribe the declaration following:

"I, A. B., do solemnly and sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify, and declare, upon the true faith of a christian, that I will never exercise any power, authority, or influence which I may possess by virtue of the office of to injure or weaken the protestant church as it is by law established in England, or to disturb the said church, or the bishops and clergy of the said church, in the possession of any rights or privileges to which such church, or the said bishops and clergy, are or may be by law entitled."

"III. And be it enacted, that the said declaration shall be made and subscribed as aforesaid in the presence of such person or persons respectively who, by the charters or usages of the said respective cities, corporations, boroughs, and cinque ports, ought to administer the oath for due execution of the said offices or places respectively, and in default of such, in the presence of two justices of the peace of the said cities, corporations, boroughs, and cinque ports, if such there be, or otherwise in the presence of two justices of the peace of the respective counties, ridings, divisions, or franchises wherein the said cities, corporations, boroughs, and cinque ports are; which said declaration shall either be entered in a book, roll, or other record to be kept for that purpose, or shall be filed amongst the records of the city, corporation, borough, or cinque port.

"IV. And be it enacted, that if any person, placed, elected, or chosen into any of the aforesaid offices or places, shall omit or neglect to make and subscribe the said declaration in manner above mentioned, such placing, election, or choice shall be void; and that it shall not be lawful for such person to do any act in the execution of the office or place into which he shall be so chosen, elected, or placed.

"V. And be it further enacted, that every person who shall hereafter be admitted into any office or employment, or who shall accept from his majesty, his heirs and successors, any patent, grant, or commission, and who by his admittance into such office or employment or place of trust, or by his acceptance of such patent, grant, or commission, or by the receipt of any pay, salary, fee, or wages by reason thereof, would by the laws in force immediately before the passing of this act have been required to take the sacrament of the Lord's supper according to the rites or usage of the church of England, shall, within six calendar months after his admission to such office, employment, or place of trust, or his acceptance of such patent, grant, or commission, make and subscribe the aforesaid declaration, or in default thereof his appointment to such office, employment, or place of trust, and such patent, grant, or commission, shall be wholly void.

“VI. And be it further enacted, that the aforesaid declaration shall be made and subscribed in his majesty’s high court of Chancery, or in the court of King’s Bench, or at the quarter sessions of the county or place where the person so required to make the same shall reside; and the court in which such declaration shall be so made and subscribed shall cause the same to be preserved among the records of the said court.

“VII. Provided always, that no naval officer below the rank of rear admiral, and no military officer below the rank of major general in the army or colonel in the militia, shall be required to make or subscribe the said declaration, in respect of his naval or military commission; and that no commissioner of customs, excise, stamps, or taxes, or any person holding any of the offices concerned in the collection, management, or receipt of the revenues which are subject to the said commissioners, or any of the officers concerned in the collection, management, or receipt of the revenues subject to the authority of the postmaster general, shall be required to make or subscribe the said declaration, in respect of their said offices or appointments: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend to require any naval or military officer, or other person as aforesaid, upon whom any office, place, commission, appointment, or promotion shall be conferred during his absence from England, or within three months previous to his departure from thence, to make and subscribe the said declaration until after his return to England, or within six months thereafter.

“VIII. And be it further enacted, that all persons now in the actual possession of any office, command, place, trust, service, or employment, or in the receipt of any pay, salary, fee, or wages, in respect of or as a qualification for which, by virtue of or under any of the before-mentioned acts or any other act or acts, they respectively ought to have heretofore taken or ought hereafter to receive the said sacrament of the Lord’s supper, shall be and are hereby confirmed in the possession and enjoyment of their said several offices, commands, places, trusts, services, employments, pay, salaries, fees, and wages respectively, notwithstanding their omission or neglect to take or receive the sacrament of the Lord’s supper in manner aforesaid, and shall be and are hereby indemnified, freed, and discharged from all incapacities, disabilities, forfeitures, and penalties whatsoever, already incurred or which might hereafter be incurred in consequence of any such omission or neglect; and that no election of or act done or to be done by any such person or under his authority, and not yet avoided, shall be hereafter questioned or avoided by reason of any such omission or neglect, but that every such election and act shall be as good, valid, and effectual as if such person had duly received the said sacrament of the Lord’s supper in manner aforesaid.

“IX. Provided nevertheless, that no act done in the execution of any of the corporate or other offices, places, trusts, or commissions aforesaid, by any such person omitting or neglecting as aforesaid, shall by reason thereof be void or voidable as to the rights of any other person not privy to such omission or neglect, or render such last-mentioned person liable to any action or indictment.”

and inland bills of exchange and promissory notes falling due on any Sunday are properly payable on the Saturday next before such Sunday, or on the Monday next after such Sunday: now therefore, for the better observance of Good Friday and Christmas Day, and such days of fasts and thanksgiving as aforesaid, and also for the removing such doubts as aforesaid, and assimilating the law of Ireland to that of England in such respects, be it enacted, that in all cases where any such bill of exchange or promissory note in Ireland shall fall due on any Sunday, or on any Good Friday, or on any Christmas Day, or on any such day of fast or day of thanksgiving, the same shall be payable on the day next preceding such Sunday or such Good Friday, or on the day (not being a Sunday) next preceding such Christmas Day or day of fast or day of thanksgiving respectively; and that in case of nonpayment of such bill of exchange or promissory note, the same may be noted and protested on such preceding day as if the same were payable on such day; and that whenever such Christmas Day shall fall on, or such day of fast or day of thanksgiving shall be appointed on a Monday, every such bill of exchange or promissory note, which would be payable on such Christmas Day or day of fast or day of thanksgiving, shall be payable on the Saturday preceding such Christmas Day or day of fast or day of thanksgiving respectively, and in case of nonpayment, being first duly demanded, may be noted and protested for payment on such preceding Saturday.

In such cases notice of the dishonour thereof not necessary to be given until the day next after such Good Friday, &c.

“X. And be it further enacted, that from and after the first day of September, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, in cases of bills of exchange and promissory notes falling due on any Sunday, Good Friday, or any Christmas Day, or on any day of fast or day of thanksgiving as aforesaid, as well as in the cases of foreign or inland bills of exchange and promissory notes falling due in Ireland on the day preceding any Sunday, or any Good Friday, or any Christmas Day, or any such day of fast or day of thanksgiving, it shall not be necessary for the holder or holders of such bills of exchange or promissory notes to give notice of the dishonour thereof until the day next after such Sunday, or Good Friday, or Christmas Day, or day of fast or day of thanksgiving; and in case such Christmas Day shall fall, or such day of fast or day of thanksgiving shall be appointed on a Saturday, it shall not be necessary for the holder or holders of such bills of exchange or promissory notes to give notice of the dishonour thereof until the Monday next after such Christmas day or day of fast or thanksgiving; and that whensoever such Christmas Day shall fall on, or such day of fast or day of thanksgiving shall be appointed on a Monday, it shall not be necessary for the holder or holders of such bills of exchange and promissory notes, as shall either, by virtue of this act or otherwise, be payable on the preceding Saturday, to give notice of the dishonour thereof until the Tuesday next after such Christmas Day or day of fast or day of thanksgiving respectively; and that every such notice so given as aforesaid shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes.

Good Friday, &c. for the purposes of this act, to be considered the same as Sunday.

“XI. And be it further enacted, that from and after the said first day of September, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, Good Friday and Christmas Day, and every such day of fast and thanksgiving so appointed by his majesty, is and shall, for all other purposes whatsoever as regards bills of exchange and promissory notes, be treated and considered in Ireland as the Lord's day, commonly called Sunday.”

(1) Apprehended.—It was held, on Stat. 1 Jac. 1, which had only the word "apprehended," that if a prisoner be apprehended for another offence, and be detained in the same county for bigamy, the detainer is such an apprehension, as will warrant the indicting him in that county. A prisoner was taken up in Worcestershire for a larceny; while in the house of correction for that offence, a bill for bigamy was found against him, and upon which he was tried at the assizes for that county. The judges were of opinion, that as the prisoner was in custody on a criminal charge, he was liable to be tried where he was imprisoned; although the second marriage was not contracted in Worcestershire. Rex v. Gordon, R. & R. 48. Vide Digbies (Lord) case, Hutt. 131. A chaplain to

"XXXII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in every case where a county lunatic asylum shall be provided, a chaplain shall be appointed (1) for the

(1) Chaplain shall be appointed:—In Regina v. Middlesex Pauper Lunatic Asylum (Visiting Justices of), (2 Q. B. 433,) it was held, that under Stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 40, s. 30, the visiting justices of county lunatic asylums have the power of appointing and dismissing the chaplain at their discretion, though, by sect. 32, the chaplain appointed must be licensed by the bishop of the diocese, and though the bishop has power to revoke such licence. Therefore, where a chaplain, appointed by the visiting justices, and afterwards licensed by the bishop, was dismissed by the justices, and another appointed in his stead, but the bishop refused to revoke his first licence, or to license the new appointee, the court of Queen's Bench refused to issue a mandamus commanding them to admit the first appointee to perform the duties of chaplain in the asylum:—Lord Denman observing, "This rule calls on the visiting justices of the Middlesex Lunatic Asylum to show cause why they should not be commanded by mandamus to admit Mr. Tebbutt into the asylum, that he may perform his duties as chaplain, and to pay the arrears of his salary. It appears to me, that they have shown sufficient cause, and that the rule must be discharged. If we felt any reasonable doubt, we would call for a return, in order that the question might be solemnly discussed: but it does not seem to me, that any reasonable doubt has been raised. I found my opinion on the 30th and 32nd sections, which are quite essential to the creating of any power of appointment at all. The 32nd section provides that a chaplain shall be appointed for the asylum, who shall be licensed by the bishop, and that such licence is to be revocable by the bishop, at his discretion. It is contended, that this power of revocation gives the bishop, in effect, the power of appointment and dismissal. But it seems to me, that the only rational mode of expounding the 32nd section is to read it together with the 30th, which enacts that the visiting justices 'may appoint a treasurer, and such other officers and servants, together with such number of assistants as they shall from time to time find necessary,' and may dismiss any such officer, servant, or assistant, if they see occasion.' If it had been intended, that any other than the magistrates should appoint and dismiss the chaplain, there would have been an exception in respect of him in sect. 30, or an express provision for his appointment and dismissal, in sect. 32. But the 32nd section merely requires, that the power of appointment shall be exercised by the appointment of a chaplain, subject to the bishop's power of withholding or revoking the licence. No power to appoint the chaplain is directly given, unless he is included in the 30th section under the word 'officers.' We may perhaps regret, that the expression in the act is not more directly pointed. But I think the chaplain would be considered an officer here, as he was under Stat. 4 & 5 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 46, in Regina v. Braintree Union (The Guardians of the Poor of), 1 Q. B. 130. Under the Gaol Act, 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 30, the sessions have power to remove a chaplain who refuses or neglects to conform to the regulations made under that act. By that act, though the chaplain is same, which chaplain shall be in full orders, and shall be licensed by the bishop of the diocese; and the said licence shall be revocable by the bishop whenever he shall think fit to withdraw it; and such chaplain shall perform on each Sunday, and on the great festivals, the divine service of our church, according to the forms by law established."

"An Act to abolish Church Briefs, and to provide for the better Collection and Application of Voluntary Contributions for the purpose of enlarging and building Churches and Chapels."

"Whereas an act was passed in the fourth year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled, 'An Act for the better collecting Charity Money on Briefs by Letters Patent, and preventing Abuses in relation to such Charities;' and it is expedient to repeal the said act, and to provide for the better collection and application of voluntary contributions for enlarging, building, rebuilding, and repairing churches and chapels in England and Wales: and whereas in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighteen a society was instituted, by the name of 'The Society for promoting the Enlargement and Building of Churches and Chapels,' consisting of persons who had contributed or should contribute twenty guineas in one donation, or two guineas annually; which society, governed under certain rules and regulations, has tended greatly to promote the good and laudable objects for which it was instituted, and would be enabled to promote the same still more effectually if the said society were incorporated, with such powers and privileges as are hereinafter mentioned: be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the said act of Queen Anne shall be and the same is hereby repealed, except as to such appointed by the sessions, (sect. 28,) he cannot officiate till licensed by the bishop, (sect. 29.) There, however, sect. 30 confers certain powers and imposes certain duties on the chaplain; which might entitle him to say, in the event of dismissal, that the case was not within the act. But here there may well be strong reasons for giving a larger discretion to the justices. Where the persons whom the chaplain is to attend are in possession of their reason, it may be proper to specify more distinctly the grounds which shall authorize the removal of the chaplain. But, in the case of persons in a lunatic asylum, instances may occur in which it would be dangerous even to touch upon religious subjects. The observations made on sect. 12 scarcely require notice. That section merely enacts that the sessions shall have power to defray the expenses by laying special county rates; but the powers relating to the execution of the details of the act are left untouched. I do not know that it is necessary to show, that the bishop has not the power of appointment; though I think that he has only to take care not to give a licence where the person appointed is not a clergyman of the church of England, able, fit, and willing to perform the duties. But the duties cannot be the same in all cases. A patient, when recovering, may require constant personal attendance; but in a different stage of the disease, a different course may be advisable. We are not here to revise the discretion exercised by the justices, or to assume that it has been exercised perversely: where a discretion is given, we must suppose that they will perform properly the serious duties thrown upon them. On comparing this act with the Gaol Act, 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, we find that in the Gaol Act, the justices have power, by sect. 12, to make regulations in addition to those laid down by the act, as may seem to them expedient: in this act, by sect. 30, the justices have power to dismiss if they see occasion. A large discretion is given in each instance: but, as might be expected, the discretion as to the dismissal of officers is larger in the case of a lunatic asylum than in that of a gaol."

And be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this act all such persons as now are or hereafter may become members of the said society shall be and are hereby declared to be a body corporate, by the name of 'The Incorporated Society for promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels.'

"III. And be it enacted, that the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being shall be the president of the said society, and that the Archbishop of York for the time being, and the bishops of the two provinces for the time being, shall be vice-presidents thereof, together with such lay peers and commoners, being twenty-five in number, as now are vice-presidents of the said society; and that all vacancies which shall from time to time occur in that number of the vice-presidents shall be filled up from the lay members of the society by the committee thereof.

"IV. And be it enacted, that the said society shall be governed by a committee, which shall consist of the president, vice-presidents, and treasurer, who shall be members thereof in virtue of their several offices, and of thirty-six members elected from the society, one half at least of whom shall be laymen; and the treasurer, together with one fourth of the thirty-six elected members of the committee in rotation, shall vacate their offices at the annual general court, but shall be capable of immediate re-election: provided always, that all such persons as before the passing of this act shall have been elected to and are now filling the respective stations of treasurer, or of members of the committee of the said society, shall continue to fill the same, without any fresh election, until vacated as aforesaid.

"V. And be it enacted, that all persons who shall contribute ten guineas in one donation, or one guinea annually, shall be members of the said society, and have a right to vote at general courts, and be eligible to the committee, provided such annual subscriptions shall not then be in arrear.

"VI. And be it enacted, that a general court shall be holden annually in May, and oftener if the committee shall think it expedient; and that at the general court three auditors shall be appointed for the year ensuing, a treasurer elected, and the vacancies in the committee filled up from a double list prepared by the president and vice-presidents, and that all such elections and appointments shall be by ballot.

"VII. And be it enacted, that every order to be made and act to be done by the committee for the time being of the said society shall be made and done with the consent of the majority of the members present at any meeting of the committee, such meeting to consist of not less than five; and the committee, or the major part of them at any such meeting, shall have full power and authority to make all such laws and regulations, not being repugnant to the laws of this kingdom, or to the express provisions of this act, as to them shall from time to time seem expedient, for the management and government of the said society, and for carrying its designs into effect; and shall have the sole management, control, and disposition of the estates, funds, revenues, and other property which now or may hereafter belong to the said society; and shall have the power of affixing the common seal of the said society, or directing it to be affixed, to such instruments as the said committee or such major part of them shall think fit; and shall have the sole control over the appointment of all officers, agents, or servants whom it may be thought expedient to employ in the service of the said society, or in any of the concerns relating thereto: provided always, that such laws and regulations so to be made as aforesaid shall not be of any force or effect unless the same shall be confirmed by the members of the committee, or the major part of them, who shall be present at the next meeting of the said committee after the same shall have been first made, such next meeting to consist of not less than five.

"VIII. Provided always and be it enacted, that the committee of the said society, in the selection of parishes and extra-parochial places to which they shall grant any part of their funds toward the enlarging or building of any churches or chapels, shall have regard to the amount of the population, and also to the disproportion between the number of inhabitants and the present accommodation for attendance upon divine service according to the rites of the united church of England and Ireland; and in giving preference among such parishes and extra-parochial places, shall have regard to the proportion of the expense which shall be offered to be contributed or raised by such respective parishes or places, towards the enlargement or building of churches or chapels therein, and to the pecuniary ability of the inhabitants thereof.

"An Act for erecting a Chapel of Ease at Killiney, in the Parish of Monkstown, in the County and Diocese of Dublin, and for providing for the due Celebration of Divine Service therein."

"Whereas the parish of Monkstown, in the county and diocese of Dublin, has of late years become very populous, and a considerable number of inhabitants reside at Killiney, in the said parish, at a distance of two miles and upwards from the parish church, which is not sufficiently large to accommodate the increasing population of said parish; and the parishioners dwelling in the neighbourhood of Killiney aforesaid are very much in need of a particular place of worship nearer their homes, to which they may resort for the service of God, at morning and evening prayers, and for the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's supper: and whereas it will much tend to the advancement of religion in the said neighbourhood if the want of a proper place of worship should be supplied, and a chapel of ease be erected for that purpose upon a convenient site: and whereas the cure of souls in the parish of Monkstown is in the perpetual curate thereof; and the said curacy is appropriated to the deanery of the cathedral of the holy and undivided Trinity, commonly called Christchurch, in the city of Dublin, and the patronage and nomination thereof belong to the dean of the said cathedral: and whereas the Reverend Charles Lindsay is the present ecclesiastical incumbent or perpetual curate of the said parish; and whereas many inhabitants of the said parish have expressed an earnest desire that said chapel of ease should be forthwith erected, and that it is in contemplation to promote said design by creating proper and sufficient funds for the purpose: and whereas the most reverend father in God William Lord Archbishop of Dublin and ordinary of the said diocese, the Dean of Christchurch aforesaid, to whose patronage and nomination the said benefice of Monkstown belongs, the said Charles Lindsay the present curate or ecclesiastical incumbent thereof, and the parishioners of the same, have respectively testified their consent to the erecting of the said chapel of ease, and to the endowment of a chaplain in manner hereinafter provided: and whereas the said parish of Monkstown does not come within the provisions and operation of the several statutes in force in that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called

Ireland, for the promoting and regulating the building of chapels of ease in the cases therein provided, and it is necessary to have special provision for the same; and it is also necessary, for the purposes aforesaid, that a piece of land should be set apart and appropriated in the vicinity of Killiney, as a site for the said intended chapel, and that there should be an endowed chaplain of the said chapel; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for any proprietor of any ground within the said parish of Monkstown, or any part thereof, within the ancient pariah of Killiney, now forming a part of the said parish of Monkstown, notwithstanding any such proprietor may be seised only for an estate for life or in tail therein, to grant and convey to the perpetual curate or minister of the said parish of Monkstown, and his successors, a sufficient quantity of ground, not exceeding one acre, English statute measure, for the purpose of building, erecting, and making a chapel of ease, with all buildings necessary thereto, in like manner and as fully and effectually as persons are authorized to grant or set out ground for such or the like purposes by any law now in being, such grant and conveyance to be in trust for the inhabitants of the said parish for ever; and that the said perpetual curate or minister of the said parish be and is hereby enabled to take such grant and conveyance, the statute of mortmain or any other law to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that if at any time after the making of the said grant and conveyance of the said ground, and before the building of the said chapel, it shall be found necessary or convenient to change such site of the said intended chapel, it shall be lawful for the said perpetual curate or minister of the said parish, with the consent of the ordinary of the diocese, the Dean of Christchurch, and the proprietor who shall or may have granted any ground for the site for the said chapel, to exchange such ground so granted as a site for the same for any ground of equal or greater quantity in the vicinity of Killiney aforesaid; which said ground so given in exchange shall be conveyed to the said incumbent for the purposes aforesaid, and shall be and is hereby vested in the said incumbent and his successors, in like manner as the ground originally granted would have been had it remained for the purposes aforesaid.

4, c. 52. [1A.]

Authorizing the conveyance of land for erecting a chapel of ease
in Killiney.

"II. And be it further enacted, that when and so soon as a proper site shall have been chosen and granted, in manner aforesaid, for the place of the said intended chapel, that then and as soon thereafter as conveniently may be, it shall and may be lawful for his grace William Lord Archbishop of Dublin, or his successors, Archbishops of Dublin, to erect or cause to be erected upon the ground so given and conveyed for the purposes aforesaid a chapel of ease, with all necessary accommodations; which chapel, when built, shall be consecrated, and shall be dependent upon the mother church of the said parish of Monkstown, as a parochial chapel of ease annexed to the said church; and it shall and may be lawful to celebrate the morning and evening service of the united church of England and Ireland, and administer the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's supper, and to preach the word of God therein: provided always, that nothing in this act shall be construed to extend so as to endow the said chapel with any right, privilege, or liberty of a parochial church or independent district chapel, or to authorize the performance therein of the service of confirmation, matrimony, and burial of the dead, or any or either of them, but that all such services shall continue as before to be solemnized in the parish church only.

and granted, a chapel of ease
to be erected under the direc-
Lord Archbishop of Dublin.

"III. And be it further enacted, that there shall be a chaplain of the said chapel, with constant and perpetual successive chaplains, to be appointed, constituted, and endowed in manner hereinafter provided, for the due celebration of divine service and preaching the word of God in the said chapel; which said chaplain and his successors shall be subject to the visitation and power of the ordinary of the diocese, and the laws and canons ecclesiastical, in like manner as chaplains with perpetual succession usually are and of right ought to be subject.

be appointed.

"IV. And whereas it is necessary to make a provision for the endowment of the said chaplaincy, and for the maintenance of the chaplain and his successors;

Endowment of the chapel.

4, c. 52. [1A.]

and that the Dean of Christchurch aforesaid, to whose deanery the said parish of Monkstown is appropriate, has proposed and is willing, as far as in him lies, and with the consent of the chapter of the said cathedral, to give certain lands and tenements, with their appurtenances, belonging to the deanery aforesaid, situate within the parish aforesaid at Dalkey, consisting of twelve acres one rood and eight perches, English statute measure, described in a certain lease bearing date the fifteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, and made between the Dean of Christchurch aforesaid of the one part, and Henry Lindsay, esquire, of the other part, as part endowment of the said chaplaincy, and to settle and convey the same to the use of the first and other chaplains thereof in perpetuity; and Henry Lindsay, the tenant in possession of the said land and tenements, holding of the said dean under the said lease, has proposed and is willing to surrender his lease and interest in the same to the said dean; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said Dean of Christchurch, and his successors, Deans of Christchurch, at any time after the passing of this act, to grant and convey to the said Reverend Charles Lindsay, the incumbent or perpetual curate aforesaid, and his successors, the aforesaid lands and tenements, with their appurtenances, belonging to the deanery aforesaid, situate within the parish aforesaid, of Dalkey, consisting of twelve acres one rood and eight perches, English statute measure as aforesaid, and for any other proprietor of land within the said parish of Monkstown, notwithstanding such proprietor may be seised only for an estate for life or in tail therein, at any time after the passing of this act, to grant and convey to the said Reverend Charles Lindsay, the incumbent or perpetual curate aforesaid, and his successors, any quantity of land within the said parish of Monkstown, or any of the ancient parishes now forming the parish of Monkstown, not exceeding eight acres English statute measure, in trust and to and for the sole use and benefit of the first and other chaplains to be constituted and appointed in manner hereinafter provided; and that so soon as any chaplain shall have been duly appointed under the provisions of this act, then and from thenceforth the said lands and tenements, with their appurtenances, so granted or to be granted by the said dean, and any other proprietor of ground in said parish, to the use of the said chaplain, and all the right, title, and interest therein of them the said dean and such proprietor as aforesaid, shall become vested in possession in the said chaplain and his successors, chaplains of the said chaplaincy, for ever, and he and they shall thenceforth stand seised thereof in like manner as if the said grant and conveyance or grants and conveyances had been made directly to themselves, any statute of mortmain or any other law to the contrary notwithstanding: provided, however, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to diminish, or in anywise affect, save as aforesaid, the interests of any tenant or tenants of any of the lands proposed to be conveyed, and now holding the same by virtue of any subsisting demise under the said dean or such proprietor as aforesaid.

the chaplain.

“V. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in case a chaplain shall have been duly constituted and appointed, pursuant to the provisions of this act, before the said grants and conveyances, or either of them, shall have been duly made and carried into effect, then and in such case it shall and may be lawful for the said dean and such other proprietor, or either of them, to convey the said lands and tenements, with their appurtenances, and other land, not exceeding eight acres English statute measure, in respect to such proprietor, to such chaplain and his successors, to his and their own sole use and benefit; any statute of mortmain or other law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Enabling
chaplain to grant leases

“VI. And whereas the value of the said lands and tenements, with their appurtenances, belonging to the deanery aforesaid, proposed to be granted and conveyed by the said dean to the use and benefit of the first and other chaplains aforesaid in perpetuity, would be much augmented and increased, if the said chaplain and his successors, chaplains of the said chaplaincy, were empowered by law to grant leases of the same, so as to bind their successors for a term of years; be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said chaplain and his successors, when duly constituted and appointed in manner hereinafter provided, with the consent in writing of the Archbishop of Dublin and the Dean of Christchurch aforesaid respectively for the time being, to grant a lease of the said lands and tenements, with their appurtenances, or of any part thereof, for any term of years not exceeding sixty years from the time of the execution of such lease, at the full improved yearly value of said lands and tenements with their appurtenances, without taking any fine, or any other pecuniary consideration whatsoever: provided always, that if any fine or other pecuniary consideration should be taken by said chaplain or his successors, or if he should grant a lease of said lands and tenements, with their appurtenances, or any part thereof, without the consent in writing of the said Archbishop of Dublin and the said Dean of Christchurch respectively for the time being first had and obtained, in such case, or in either of such cases, the said lease so granted shall be ipso facto void, without any process or judgment of law.

“VII. And be it further enacted, that the patronage of the said chaplaincy shall be in the perpetual curate of Monkstown, and his successors; and that it shall and may be lawful for the said Charles Lindsay, the now perpetual curate of the said parish of Monkstown, or his successors, perpetual curates of the same, at any time after the passing of this act, to nominate to his grace William Lord Archbishop of Dublin, and his successors, Archbishops of Dublin, a fit and proper person, being a priest in holy orders of the established church, and not being possessed of any other cure or benefice, or ecclesiastical preference with cure of souls, to be licensed and appointed to the chaplaincy of the said chapel of Killiney; and that the said chaplain, when so nominated, licensed, and appointed, shall be perpetual chaplain of the said chaplaincy, and shall officiate as such; and that then and thereafter, and so often as the said chaplaincy shall become void by the death, resignation, or other removal of any first or other chaplain filling the same, it shall be lawful for the perpetual curate of said parish of Monkstown, and his successors, to nominate to the Archbishop of Dublin for the time being a fit and proper person, being a priest in holy orders, and not being possessed of any other cure or benefice, or ecclesiastical preferment with cure of souls, to be licensed and appointed as aforesaid, who shall thereafter and by virtue of such nomination and licence forthwith be entitled to officiate as chaplain, and to take and receive to his own use all the fruits, profits, rents, and emoluments whatsoever unto the said chaplaincy belonging; and that the said chapel, when built as provided, and the chaplains thereof for the time being, shall be for ever subject to the visitation of the said Archbishop of Dublin and his successors.

“VIII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in case the said perpetual curate of Monkstown shall omit or neglect, for the space of three calendar months, to nominate a fit person to the said archbishop and his successors, to be licensed and appointed as aforesaid, that then and in such case it shall and may be lawful for the said Archbishop of Dublin, and his successors, Archbishops of Dublin, to appoint a chaplain as in a case of lapse, and such chaplain shall be the lawful successor in the said chaplaincy; provided, however, that if any chaplain shall die, resign, or be removed during any vacancy of the said perpetual cure or benefice of Monkstown, no time running during such vacancy shall be counted as a lapse of the right of nomination to such chaplaincy, or as any part of the period of three months constituting a lapse, or as in any manner defeating or running against the said right of patronage of the incumbent of Monkstown, but that such period of time shall be counted only during the plenarty of the said benefice or appropriate curacy of Monkstown, and begin to run only from the time when the said curacy or benefice of Monkstown shall be full of a curate or incumbent.

“IX. And be it enacted, that the said chaplain and his successors, chaplains as aforesaid, shall be and they and each of them are and is hereby incorporated and made one body politic and corporate, by the name of chaplains of the chapel of Killiney in the parish of Monkstown, and that they and every of them shall be capable to sue and be sued in all courts and places in that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called Ireland, and by such name to take and receive any lands, tenements, or property whatsoever, real or personal, not exceeding in the whole the clear yearly value of two hundred pounds, by gift, grant, devise, or otherwise in augmentation of the said endowment, and to the use and behoof of them and their successors for ever; and that the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of the several benefices of Ireland may grant to the said chaplain and chaplains, and any of them in succession, any sum of money out of the funds vested in them for public purposes, either by way of gift or loan, for the enabling said chaplain, or any succeeding chaplain, to build a house of residence, and also for the enabling him to purchase any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, as an additional endowment of the said chaplaincy; and that the said trustees and commissioners may exercise all such powers and authority in favour of the said chaplain, and his successors, chaplains of the said chapel of Killiney, as they are empowered to do in favour of any perpetual curate by any law now in being; and that all laws and statutes now in force in that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, for and in relation to the purchase, procuring, building, and improving on glebes and glebe lands to be held, provided, and enjoyed by perpetual curates, shall be and are hereby enacted to extend to the said chaplaincy of the chapel of Killiney, and the lands, houses, and improvements to belong and to be made, erected, and procured by the chaplains of the said chaplaincy for the time being.

Chaplain to reside within
Monkstown.

“X. And be it further enacted, that the said chaplain, and his successors, chaplains of the said chapel of Killiney, shall reside within the parish of Monkstown, and as near as conveniently may be to said chapel when erected, and shall be bound to the duty of residence as any perpetual curates are by law bound; and that if any such chaplain shall at any time be nominated and licensed or presented to any other curacy, or presented, instituted, or collated to any benefice or ecclesiastical preferment with cure of souls, then and in such case the said chaplaincy of the chapel of Killiney aforesaid shall be ipso facto void, and the acceptance of such curacy, preferment, or benefice, shall be held to be and amount to a resignation of the said chaplaincy of Killiney, to which it shall be thereupon lawful for the incumbent of Monkstown to nominate another fit person as aforesaid to be licensed by the archbishop; and in failure of such nomination within those months from such acceptance, to be counted and computed as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the archbishop to appoint a chaplain as in a case of lapse as aforesaid; and such chaplain, so appointed by the archbishop, shall be the lawful successor in the said chaplaincy.

Commissioners
of first-fruits may advance money for
chapel.

“XI. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of the benefice in Ireland, to give any sum of money which may appear to them proper and sufficient for the building and completing of the said intended chapel of ease at Killiney aforesaid, and to exercise for that purpose all such powers and authority as are now vested in them, in respect of the building new churches and chapels in that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called Ireland.

Chapel, when completed, to be maintained and repaired at the expense of
Monkstown.

“XII. And be it further enacted, that the said chapel of ease, when built and completed, shall thenceforward be maintained and repaired, and found in all needful things, at the expense of the said parish of Monkstown, in like manner as other parochial chapels of ease are maintained, repaired, and provided, by the laws and statutes now in being; and that the ordinary of the diocese of Dublin, in which said parish of Monkstown is situate, and the minister and churchwardens of the said parish, and the inhabitants of the same in vestry assembled, shall have and exercise all such powers, and be subject to all such duties in respect of said chapel, as in like cases ordinaries, ministers, churchwardens, and vestries, exercise or are subject to by any law now in being, or by any statute hereafter to be enacted, and particularly under and by virtue of a certain statute made in the seventh year of his present majesty, intituled, ‘An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws which regulate the Levy and Application of Church Rates and Parish Cesses, and the Election of Churchwardens, and the Maintenance of Parish Clerks, in Ireland.’

"V. And whereas it was by the said in part recited act of the seventh year of the reign of his present majesty, amongst other things, further enacted, that it should be lawful for the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said act to take or use, for the purposes of the said act, so much of the burial ground in the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields as lay on the south side of the church as might be required for the purpose, and the ground so taken, and the fee simple and inheritance thereof, should be and were thereby vested in the king's majesty, his heirs and successors, for the purposes of the said act; and it was further enacted, that whenever it should be necessary, in pursuance and execution of the said in part recited act, to open or disturb any grave or graves, or any burial vault or vaults, in the said present burial ground of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields, on the south side of the said church aforesaid, it should be lawful for the heirs, executors, administrators, relations, or friends of any person or persons who should have been interred or deposited in such grave or graves, vault or vaults, with the consent of the vicar and churchwardens of the said parish, or the major part of them, to remove and carry away the remains of any such person or persons, and place the same in such new burial ground as therein mentioned, or any other churchyard or consecrated ground, in such manner as the Lord Bishop of London for the time being, or such person as he might appoint, should direct; and that the expenses of such removing, carrying away, and placing (not exceeding in any one case the sum of ten pounds) should be paid, by the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said in part recited act, out of the monies to be applied for the purposes of the said act; and that the remains of such person or persons as should have been interred or deposited in the graves or vaults so to be opened and disturbed as aforesaid, which should not be removed or carried away as aforesaid, should (except such graves or vaults should be finally closed up), at the expense of the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said act, to be paid out of the monies to be raised by virtue of the said act, be removed from such graves or vaults into and be interred in such new burial ground as aforesaid, in such manner as the Lord Bishop of London for the time being, or such person or persons as he should appoint, should direct: and whereas in order to facilitate the removal of the remains of the various persons who have been interred or deposited in the graves or vaults of the present burial ground of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields, on the south side of the said church aforesaid, it is expedient, and would be of great saving to the public, if the said powers given by the said in part recited act for the removal of such remains as aforesaid were repealed, and such new provisions made in respect thereof as hereinafter is mentioned; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act so much of the said in part recited act as relates to the removal of the remains of the various persons who have been interred or deposited in the graves or vaults of the said burial ground of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields, on the south side of the said church as aforesaid, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

(1) Estate or interest.—In Doe d. Graham v. Hawkins, (2 Q. B. 212,) it was held, that a clause of redemption in a mortgage, is not a power of revocation, or a condition, &c., for the benefit of the grantor, within the meaning of the Mortmain Acts, Stat. 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 1, and Stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 1. Therefore, if a mortgage to a charitable foundation executed before Stat. 9 Geo. 4 has not been duly enrolled, but is otherwise regular, it is rendered valid by Stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 1, though containing a clause for redemption on payment of the principal money and interest:—Lord Denman observing, “This rule would not have been granted, if the question upon the Mortmain Acts had been the only one. It is clear that the legislature, when they introduced into those acts the condition against powers and agreements for the benefit of the grantor, did not contemplate an application of it to mortgages. The words alluded to at the end of Stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 1, were intended to prevent fraudulent revocations. As to the question of evidence; there is no doubt that the writing of a clerk, so recognized as the entries were in this case, is that of the steward who recognises it. It would be very unreasonable, that a man's writing with his own pen should fix him with a declaration against his interest, but that his writing with the pen of another should not have that effect. The decision in Baron de Rotsen v. Farr, (4 A. & E. 53,) is not adverse to the plaintiff, because there it was not proved, as it is here, that the clerk by whom the entries were written was authorized by the steward to make those entries.”

The foregoing judgment was supported by Mr. Justice Patteson in the following language: “I doubt if mortgages were at all within the contemplation of the legislature in passing Stat. 9 Geo. 2, c. 36; though they may be so far within the words, that enrolment may be necessary, Stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 1, curing only past omissions. But the proviso for redemption in a mortgage cannot be called a condition for the benefit of a grantor. It only ensures his having back the land which was granted but as a security; it cannot be called a ‘benefit’ within the act, for that means something given collusively, and making the deed inconsistent with that which it professes to be. As to the evidence; the entries must be taken to be Melliar's, being made by a person in his employment, and adopted by Melliar, which was equivalent to his having ordered them. It is as if the clerk has made them in his presence, his own hand being disabled: the writing by an authorized agent was the same, as if it had been by himself. It may be difficult, after a long interval of time, to prove that entries have been made in this manner; but here that was proved. That the clerk who wrote was not called might be matter of observation to the jury; but it was enough to prove that, by whomsoever the entries were made, Melliar adopted them.”

should be absolutely and to all intents and purposes null and void: and whereas the said provision contained in the said recited act, in relation to the purchase of any estate or interest in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, for a full and valuable consideration, was only intended to prevent such purchases from being avoided by reason of the death of the grantor within twelve calendar months after the sealing and delivery of the deed or deeds relating thereto: and whereas it has notwithstanding been generally apprehended that the said last-mentioned provision was intended wholly to exempt such purchases from the operation of the said act, and in consequence thereof the formalities by the said act prescribed, in relation to the conveyance of hereditaments to charitable uses, have in divers instances been omitted on purchases for a full and valuable consideration, and by reason of such omission the title to such hereditaments may be considered defective: and whereas it is expedient that provision should be made for remedying such defect in manner hereinafter mentioned: may it therefore please your majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that where any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any estate or interest therein, have or has been purchased for a full and valuable consideration, in trust or for the benefit of any charitable uses whatsoever, and such full and valuable consideration has been actually paid for the same, every deed or other assurance already made for the purpose of conveying or assuring such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, estate or interest as aforesaid, in trust or for the benefit of such charitable uses, (if made to take effect in possession, for the charitable use intended, immediately from the making thereof, and without any power of revocation, reservation, trust, condition, limitation, clause, or agreement whatsoever, for the benefit of the grantor, or of any person or persons claiming under him,) shall be as good and valid, and of the same effect, both for establishing derivative titles, and in all other respects, as if the several formalities by the said act prescribed had been duly observed and performed.

"II. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to give effect to any deed or other assurance heretofore made, so far as the same has been already avoided by suit at law or in equity, or by any other legal or equitable means whatsoever, or to affect or prejudice any suit at law or in equity actually commenced for avoiding any such deed or other assurance, or for defeating the charitable uses in trust or for the benefit of which such deed or other assurance may have been made.

"III. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to dispense with any of the said several formalities prescribed by the said recited act, in relation to any deed or other assurance which shall be made after the passing of this present act."

"An Act for rendering valid Bonds, Covenants, and other Assurances, for the Resignation of Ecclesiastical Preferments, in certain specified Cases."

"Whereas it is expedient that certain bonds, covenants, and other assurances for the resignation of ecclesiastical preferments, should be rendered valid in the cases and subject to the limitations hereinafter specified; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that every engagement by promise, grant, agreement, or covenant, which shall be really and bonâ fide made, given, or entered into at any time after the passing of this act, for the resignation of any spiritual office, being a benefice with cure of souls, dignity, prebend, or living ecclesiastical, to the intent or purpose, to be manifested by the terms of such engagement, that any one person whosoever, to be specially named and described therein, or one of two persons to be specially named and described therein, being such persons as are hereinafter mentioned, shall be presented, collated, nominated, or appointed to such spiritual office, or that the same shall be given or bestowed to or upon him, shall be good, valid, and effectual in the law to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and the performance of the same may also be enforced in equity; provided always, that such engagement shall be so entered into before the presentation, nomination, collation, or appointment of the party so entering into the same as aforesaid.

"II. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that where two persons shall be so specially named and described in such engagement, each of them shall be, either by blood or marriage, an uncle, son, grandson, brother, nephew, or grand-nephew of the patron or of one of the patrons of such spiritual office, not being merely a trustee or trustees of the patronage of the same, or of the person or one of the persons for whom the patron or patrons shall be a trustee or trustees, or of the person or one of the persons by whose direction such presentation, collation, gift, or bestowing shall be intended to be made, or of any married woman whose husband in her right shall be the patron or one of the patrons of such spiritual office, or of any other person in whose right such presentation, collation, gift, or bestowing shall be intended to be made.

"III. And be it further enacted, that no presentation (1), collation, gift, or bestowing to or of any such spiritual office of or upon any spiritual person, to be made after the passing of this act, nor any admission, institution, investiture, or induction thereupon, shall be void, frustrate, or of no effect in law for or by reason of any such engagement so to be made, given, or entered into by such spiritual person, or any other person or persons, to or with the patron or patrons of such spiritual office, or to or with any other person or persons, for the resignation of the same as aforesaid; and that it shall not be lawful for the king's most excellent majesty, his heir or successors, for or by reason of any such engagements as aforesaid to present or collate unto, or give or bestow such spiritual office; and that such spiritual person, and patron or patrons, or other person or persons respectively, shall not be liable to any pains, penalty, forfeitures, loss, or disability, nor to any prosecution or other proceeding, civil, criminal, or penal, in any court, ecclesiastical or temporal, for or by reason of his, her, or their having made, given, or entered into, or accepted or taken such engagement as aforesaid; and that every such presentation or collation, or gift or bestowing, to be made after the passing of this act, and every admission, institution, investiture, and induction thereupon, shall be as valid and effectual in the law to all intents and purposes whatsoever as if such engagement had not been made, given, or entered into, or accepted or taken; anything in an act passed in the thirty-first year of the reign of her late majesty Queen Elizabeth, intituled, 'An Act against Abuses in Elections of Scholars and Presentations to Benefices,' or in any other act, statute, or canon, or any law, to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

"IV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act shall extend to the case of any such engagement as aforesaid, unless one part of the deed, instrument, or writing by which such engagement shall be made, given, or entered into, shall, within the space of two calendar months next after the date thereof, be deposited in the office of the registrar of the diocese wherein the benefice with cure of souls, dignity, prebend, or living ecclesiastical, for the resignation whereof such engagement shall be made, given, or entered into as aforesaid, shall be locally situate, except as to such benefices with cure of souls, dignities, prebends, or livings ecclesiastical, as are under the peculiar jurisdiction of any archbishop or bishop, in which case such document as aforesaid shall be deposited in the office of the regis-equally strong for a general toleration of them, provided their separation was founded only upon difference of opinion in religion, and their principles did not also extend to a subversion of the civil government. their seven sacraments, their purgatory, and aricular confession; their worship of relics and images; nay, even their transubstantiation. But while they acknowledge a foreign power, superior to the sovereignty of the kingdom, they cannot complain if the laws of that kingdom, will not treat them upon the footing of good subjects.

“Let us, therefore, now take a view of the laws in force against the papists; who may be divided into three classes,—persons professing popery, popish recusants convict, and popish priests. 1. Persons professing the popish religion, besides the former penalties for not frequenting their parish church, are disabled from taking their lands either by descent or purchase, after eighteen years of age, until they renounce their errors; they must, at the age of twenty-one, register their estates before acquired, and all future conveyances and wills relating to them; they are incapable of presenting to any advowson, or granting to any other person any avoidance of the same; they may not keep or teach any school under pain of perpetual imprisonment; and, if they willingly say or bear mass, they forfeit, the one two hundred, the other one hundred marks, and each shall suffer a year's imprisonment. Thus much for persons, who, from the misfortune of family prejudices, or otherwise, have conceived an unhappy attachment to the Romish church from their infancy, and publicly profess its errors. But if any evil industry is used to rivet these errors upon them, if any person sends another abroad to be educated in the popish religion, or to reside in any religious house abroad for that purpose, or contributes to their maintenance when there; both the sender, the sent, and the contributor, are disabled to sue in law or equity, to be executor or administrator to any person, to take any legacy or deed of gift, and to bear any office in the realm, and shall forfeit all their goods and chattels, and likewise all their real estate for life. And where these errors are also aggravated by apostasy or perversion, where a person is reconciled to the see of Rome, or procures others to be reconciled, the offence amounts to high treason. 2. Popish recusants, convicted in a court of law of not attending the service of the church of England, are subject to the following disabilities, penalties and forfeitures, over and above those before mentioned. They are considered as persons excommunicated; they can hold no office or employment; they must not keep arms in their houses, but the same may be seized by the justices of the peace; they may not come within ten miles of London, on pain of 100*l.*; they can bring no action at law, or suit in equity; they are not permitted to travel above five miles from home, unless by licence, upon pain of forfeiting all their goods; and they may not come to court under pain of 100*l.* No marriage or burial of such recusant, or baptism of his child, shall be had, otherwise than by the ministers of the church of England, under other severe penalties. A married woman, when recusant, shall forfeit two-thirds of her dower or jointure, may not be executrix or administratrix to her husband, nor have any part of his goods; and during the coverture may be kept in prison, unless her husband redeems her at the rate of 10*l.* a month, or the third part of all his lands. And lastly, as a feme covert recusant may be imprisoned, so all others must, within three months after conviction, either submit and renounce their errors, or, if required so to do by four justices, must abjure and renounce the realm; and if they do not depart, or if they return without the king's licence, they shall be guilty of felony, and suffer death as felons without benefit of clergy. There is also an inferior species of recusancy, (refusing to make the declaration against popery enjoined by Stat. 30 Car. 2, St. 11., when tendered by the proper magistrate,) which, if the party resides within ten miles of London, makes him an absolute recusant convict; or, if at a greater distance, suspends him from having any seat in parliament, keeping arms in his house, or any horse above the value of five pounds. This is the state, by the laws now in being, (Stat. 23 Eliz. c. 1; Stat. 27 Eliz. c. 2; Stat. 29 Eliz. c. 6; Stat. 35 Eliz. c. 2; Stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 4; Stat. 3 Jac. 1, cc. 4 & 5; Stat. 7 Jac. 1, c. 6; Stat. 3 Car. 1, c. 3; Stat. 25 Car. 2, c. 2; Stat. 30 Car. 2, St. 11.; Stat. 1 G. & M. cc. 9, 15, & 26; Stat. 11 & 12 Gul. 3, c. 4; Stat. 12 Ann. St. 11., c. 14; Stat. 1 Geo. 1, St. 11., c. 55; Stat. 3 Geo. 1, c. 18; Stat. 12 Geo. 2, c. 17,) of a lay papist. But, 3. The remaining species or degree, viz., popish priests, are in a still more dangerous condition. For by Stat. 11 & 12 Gul. 3, c. 4, popish priests or bishops, celebrating mass or exercising any part of their functions in England, except in the houses of ambassadors, are liable to perpetual imprisonment. And by Stat. 27 Eliz. c. 2, any popish priest, born in the dominions of the crown of England, who shall come hither from beyond sea, unless driven by stress of weather and tarrying only a reasonable time, (Clark's (Sir Simon) case, Latch. 1.) or shall be in England three days without conforming and taking the oaths, is guilty of high treason; and all persons harbouring him are guilty of felony without the benefit of clergy.

“This is a short summary of the laws against the papists, under their three several classes, of persons professing the popish religion, popish recusants convict, and popish priests. Of which the President Montesquieu, (b. 19, c. 27,) observes, that they are so rigorous, though not professedly of the sanguinary kind, that they do all the hurt that can possibly be done in cold blood. But in answer to this, it may be observed, (what foreigners who only judge from our statute book are not fully apprised of,) that these laws are seldom exerted to their utmost rigour; and, indeed, if they were, it would be very difficult to excuse them. For they are rather to

"I, A. B., do sincerely promise and swear, that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to his majesty King George the Fourth, and will defend him to the utmost of my power, against all conspiracies and attempts whatever, which shall be made against his person, crown, or dignity; and I will do my utmost endeavour to disclose and make known to his majesty, his heirs, and successors, all treasons and traitorous conspiracies which may be formed against him or them; and I do faithfully promise to maintain, support, and defend, to the utmost of my power, the succession of the crown, which succession, by an act, intituled, 'An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and better securing the Rights and Liberties of the Subject,' is and stands limited to the Princess Sophia, electress of Hanover, and the heirs of her body, being protestants; hereby utterly renouncing and abjuring any obedience or allegiance unto any other person claiming or pretending a right to the crown of this realm; and I do further declare, that it is not an article of my faith, and that I do renounce, reject, and abjure the opinion, that princes excommunicated or deprived by the Pope, or any other authority of the see of Rome, may be deposed or murdered by their subjects, or by any person whatsoever; and I do declare, that I do not believe that the Pope of Rome, or any other foreign prince, prelate, person, state, or potentate, hath or ought to have any temporal or civil jurisdiction, power, superiority, or pre-eminence, directly or indirectly, within this realm. I do swear that I will defend, to the utmost of my power, the settlement of property within this realm, as established by the laws; and I do be accounted for from their history, and the urgency of the times which produced them, than to be approved, (upon a cool review,) as a standing system of law. The restless machinations of the Jesuits during the reign of Elizabeth, the turbulence and uneasiness of the papists under the new religious establishment, and the boldness of their hopes and wishes for the succession of the Queen of Scots, obliged the parliament to counteract so dangerous a spirit by laws of a great, and then perhaps necessary severity. The powder-treason, in the succeeding reign, struck a panic into James the First, which operated in different ways: it occasioned the enacting of new laws against the papists, but deterred him from putting them in execution. The intrigues of Queen Henrietta, in the reign of Charles the First, the prospect of a popish successor in that of Charles the Second, the assassination plot in the reign of King William, and the avowed claim of a popish pretender to the crown in that and subsequent reigns, will account for the extension of these penalties at those several periods of our history. But if a time should ever arrive, and perhaps it is not very distant, when all fears of a pretender shall have vanished, and the power and influence of the pope shall become feeble, ridiculous, and despicable, not only in England, but in every kingdom of Europe, it probably would not then be amiss to review and soften these rigorous edicts; at least till the civil principles of the Roman catholics called again upon the legislature to renew them: for it ought not to be left in the breast of every merciless bigot to drag down the vengeance of these occasional laws upon inoffensive, though mistaken subjects, in opposition to the lenient inclinations of the civil magistrate, and to the destruction of every principle of toleration and religious liberty."

hereby disclaim, disavow, and solemnly abjure any intention to subvert the present church establishment as settled by law, within this realm; and I do solemnly swear, that I never will exercise any privilege to which I am or may become entitled, to disturb or weaken the protestant religion or protestant government in the United Kingdom; and I do solemnly, in the presence of God, profess, testify, and declare, that I do make this declaration, and every part thereof, in the plain and ordinary sense of the words of this oath, without any evasion, equivocation, or mental reservation whatsoever.

“III. And be it further enacted, that wherever, in the oath hereby appointed and set forth, the name of his present majesty is expressed or referred to, the name of the sovereign of this kingdom for the time being, by virtue of the act for the further limitation of the crown and better securing the rights and liberties of the subject, shall be substituted from time to time, with proper words of reference thereto.

“IV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that no peer professing the Roman catholic religion, and no person professing the Roman catholic religion, who shall be returned a member of the house of commons after the commencement of this act, shall be capable of sitting or voting in either house of parliament respectively, unless he shall first take and subscribe the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, before the same persons, and at the same times and places, and in the same manner as the oaths and the declaration now required by law are respectively directed to be taken, made, and subscribed; and that any such person professing the Roman catholic religion, who shall sit or vote in either house of parliament, without having first taken and subscribed, in the manner aforesaid, the oath in this act appointed and set forth, shall be subject to the same penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities, and the offence of so sitting or voting shall be followed and attended by and with the same consequences, as are by law enacted and provided in the case of persons sitting or voting in either house of parliament respectively, without the taking, making, and subscribing the oaths and the declaration now required by law.

“V. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman catholic religion to vote at elections of members to serve in parliament for England and for Ireland, and also to vote at the elections of representative peers of Scotland and of Ireland, and to be elected such representative peers, being in all other respects duly qualified, upon taking and subscribing the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, and instead of the declaration now by law required, and instead also of such other oath or oaths as are now by law required to be taken by any of his majesty’s subjects professing the Roman catholic religion, and upon taking also such other oath or oaths as may now be lawfully tendered to any persons offering to vote at such elections.

“VI. And be it further enacted, that the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth shall be administered to his majesty’s subjects professing the Roman catholic religion, for the purpose of enabling them to vote in any of the cases aforesaid, in the same manner, at the same time, and by the same officers or other persons as the oaths for which it is hereby substituted are or may be now by law administered; and that in all cases in which a certificate of the taking, making, or subscribing, of any of the oaths or of the declaration now required by law is directed to be given, a like certificate of the taking or subscribing of the oath hereby appointed and set forth shall be given by the same officer or other person, and in the same manner as the certificate now required by law is directed to be given, and shall be of the like force and effect.

“VII. And be it further enacted, that in all cases where the persons now authorised by law to administer the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, to persons voting at elections, are themselves required to take an oath previous to their administering such oaths, they shall, in addition to the oath now by them taken, take an oath for the duly administering the oath hereby appointed and set forth, and for the duly granting certificates of the same

“VIII. And whereas in an act of the parliament of Scotland made in the eighth and ninth session of the first parliament of King William the Third, intituled, ‘An Act for the preventing the Growth of Popery,’ a certain declaration or formula is therein contained, which it is expedient should no longer be required to be taken and subscribed; be it therefore enacted, that such parts of any acts as authorize the said declaration or formula to be tendered, or require the same to be taken, sworn, and subscribed, shall be and the same are hereby repealed, except as to such offices, places, and rights, as are hereinafter excepted; and that from and after the commencement of this act it shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman catholic religion to elect and be elected members to serve in parliament for Scotland, and to be enrolled as freeholders in any shire or stewartry for Scotland, and to be chosen commissioners or delegates for choosing burgesses to serve in parliament for any districts of burghs in Scotland, being in all other respects duly qualified, such persons always taking and subscribing the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance and abjuration as now required by law, at such time as the said last-mentioned oaths, or either of them, are now required by law to be taken.

“IX. And be it further enacted, that no person in holy orders in the church of Rome shall be capable of being elected to serve in parliament as a member of the house of commons; and if any such person shall be elected to serve in parliament as aforesaid, such election shall be void; and if any person, being elected to serve in parliament as a member of the house of commons shall, after his election, take or receive holy orders in the church of Rome, the seat of such person shall immediately become void; and if any such person shall, in any of the cases aforesaid, presume to sit or vote as a member of the house of commons, he shall be subject to the same penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities, as are enacted by an act passed in the forty-first year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, ‘An Act to remove Doubts respecting the Eligibility of Persons in Holy Orders, to sit in the House of Commons;’ and proof of the celebration of any religious service by such person, according to the rites of the church of Rome, shall be deemed and taken to be prima facie evidence of the fact of such person being in holy orders, within the intent and meaning of this act.

“X. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any of his majesty’s subjects professing the Roman catholic religion to hold, exercise, and enjoy all civil and military offices and places of trust or profit under his majesty, his heirs, or successors, and to exercise any other franchise or civil right, except as hereinafter excepted, upon taking and subscribing, at the times and in the manner hereinafter mentioned, the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, and instead of such other oath or oaths as are or may be now by law required to be taken for the purpose aforesaid by any of his majesty’s subjects professing the Roman catholic religion.

“XI. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to exempt any person professing the Roman catholic religion from the necessity of taking any oath or oaths, or making any declaration, not hereinbefore mentioned, which are or may be by law required to be taken or subscribed by any person on his admission into any such office or place of trust or profit as aforesaid.

“XII. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to enable any person or persons professing the Roman catholic religion to hold or exercise the office of guardians and justices of the United Kingdom, or of regent of the United Kingdom, under whatever name, style, or title such office may be constituted; nor to enable any person, otherwise than as he is now by law enabled, to hold or enjoy the office of lord high chancellor, lord keeper or lord commissioner of the great seal of Great Britain or Ireland; or the office of lord lieutenant, or lord deputy, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland; or his majesty’s high commissioner to the general assembly of the church of Scotland.

“XIII. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect or alter any of the provisions of an act passed in the seventh year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws which regulate the Levy and Application of Church Rates and Parish Cesses, and the Election of Churchwardens, and the Maintenance of Parish Clerks, in Ireland.'

"XIV. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any of his majesty's subjects professing the Roman catholic religion to be a member of any lay body corporate, and to hold any civil office or place of trust or profit therein, and to do any corporate act, or vote in any corporate election or other proceeding, upon taking and subscribing the oath hereby appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration; and upon taking also such other oath or oaths as may now by law be required to be taken by any persons becoming members of such lay body corporate, or being admitted to hold any office or place of trust or profit within the same.

"XV. Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, that nothing herein contained shall extend to authorize or empower any of his majesty's subjects professing the Roman catholic religion, and being a member of any lay body corporate, to give any vote at, or in any manner to join in the election, presentation, or appointment of any person to any ecclesiastical benefice whatsoever, or any office or place belonging to or connected with the united church of England and Ireland, or the church of Scotland, being in the gift, patronage, or disposal of such lay corporate body.

"XVI. Provided also, and be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to enable any persons, otherwise than as they are now by law enabled, to hold, enjoy, or exercise any office, place, or dignity of, in, or belonging to the united church of England and Ireland, or the church of Scotland, or any place or office whatever of, in, or belonging to any of the ecclesiastical courts of judicature of England and Ireland respectively, or any court of appeal from or review of the sentences of such courts, or of, in, or belonging to the commissary court of Edinburgh, or of, in, or belonging to any cathedral or collegiate or ecclesiastical establishment or foundation; or any office or place whatever of, in, or belonging to any of the universities of this realm; or any office or place whatever, and by whatever name the same may be called, of, in, or belonging to any of the colleges or halls of the said universities, or the colleges of Eton, Westminster, or Winchester, or any college or school within this realm; or to repeal, abrogate, or in any manner to interfere with any local statute, ordinance, or rule, which is or shall be established by competent authority within any university, college, hall, or school, by which Roman catholics shall be prevented from being admitted thereto, or from residing or taking degrees therein: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to enable any person, otherwise than as he is now by law enabled, to exercise any right of presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice whatsoever; or to repeal, vary, or alter in any manner the laws now in force in respect to the right of presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice.

"XVII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that where any right of presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice shall belong to any office in the gift or appointment of his majesty, his heirs or successors, and such office shall be held by a person professing the Roman catholic religion, the right of presentation shall devolve upon and be exercised by the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being.

"XVIII. And be it enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any person professing the Roman catholic religion, directly or indirectly, to advise his majesty, his heirs or successors, or any person or persons holding or exercising the office of guardians of the United Kingdom, or of regent of the United Kingdom, under whatever name, style, or title such office may be constituted, or the lord lieutenant, or lord deputy, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, touching or concerning the appointment to or disposal of any office or preferment in the united church of England and Ireland, or in the church of Scotland; and if any such person shall offend in the premises, he shall, being thereof convicted by due course of law, be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and disabled for ever from holding any office, civil or military, under the crown.

“XIX. And be it enacted, that every person professing the Roman catholic religion, who shall after the commencement of this act be placed, elected, or chosen in or to the office of mayor, provost, alderman, recorder, bailiff, town clerk, magistrate, councillor, or common councilman, or in or to any office of magistracy or place of trust or employment relating to the government of any city, corporation, borough, burgh, or district within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, shall, within one calendar month next before or upon his admission into any of the same respectively, take and subscribe the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, in the presence of such person or persons respectively as by the charters or usages of the said respective cities, corporations, burghs, boroughs, or districts ought to administer the oath for due execution of the said offices or places respectively; and in default of such, in the presence of two justices of the peace, councillors or magistrates of the said cities, corporations, burghs, boroughs, or districts, if such there be; or otherwise, in the presence of two justices of the peace of the respective counties, ridings, divisions, or franchises wherein the said cities, corporations, burghs, boroughs, or districts are; which said oath shall either be entered in a book, roll, or other record to be kept for that purpose, or shall be filed amongst the records of the city, corporation, burgh, borough, or district.

“XX. And be it enacted, that every person professing the Roman catholic religion, who shall after the commencement of this act be appointed to any office or place of trust or profit under his majesty, his heirs or successors, shall within three calendar months next before such appointment, or otherwise shall, before he presumes to exercise or enjoy or in any manner to act in such office or place, take and subscribe the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, either in his majesty's high court of Chancery, or in any of his majesty's courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, at Westminster or Dublin; or before any judge of assize, or in any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace in Great Britain or Ireland, for the county or place where the person so taking and subscribing the oath shall reside; or in any of his majesty's courts of Session, Justiciary, Exchequer, or jury court, or in any sheriff or steward court, or in any burgh court, or before the magistrates and councillors of any royal burgh in Scotland, between the hours of nine in the morning and four in the afternoon; and the proper officer of the court in which such oath shall be so taken and subscribed shall cause the same to be preserved amongst the records of the court; and such officer shall make, sign, and deliver a certificate of such oath having been duly taken and subscribed, as often as the same shall be demanded of him, upon payment of two shillings and sixpence for the same; and such certificate shall be sufficient evidence of the person therein named having duly taken and subscribed such oath.

“XXI. And be it enacted, that if any person professing the Roman catholic religion shall enter upon the exercise or enjoyment of any office or place of trust or profit under his majesty, or of any other office or franchise, not having in the manner and at the times aforesaid taken and subscribed the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, then and in every such case such person shall forfeit to his majesty the sum of two hundred pounds; and the appointment of such person to the office, place, or franchise so by him held shall become altogether void, and the office, place, or franchise shall be deemed and taken to be vacant to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

“XXII. Provided always, that for and notwithstanding anything in this act contained, the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth shall be taken by the officers in his majesty's land and sea service, professing the Roman catholic religion, at the same times and in the same manner as the oaths and declarations now required by law are directed to be taken, and not otherwise.

“XXIII. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no oath or oaths shall be tendered to or required to be taken by his majesty's subjects professing the Roman catholic religion, for enabling them to hold or enjoy any real or personal property, other than such as may by law be tendered to and required to be taken by his majesty's other subjects; and that the oath herein appointed and set forth, being taken and subscribed in any of the courts, or before any of the persons above mentioned, shall be of the same force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as, and shall stand in the place of, all oaths and declarations required or prescribed by any law now in force for the relief of his majesty's Roman catholic subjects from any disabilities, incapacities, or penalties; and the proper officer of any of the courts above mentioned, in which any person professing the Roman catholic religion shall demand to take and subscribe the oath herein appointed and set forth, is hereby authorized and required to administer the said oath to such person, and such officer shall make, sign, and deliver a certificate of such oath having been duly taken and subscribed, as often as the same shall be demanded of him, upon payment of one shilling; and such certificate shall be sufficient evidence of the person therein named having duly taken and subscribed such oath.

"XXIX. And be it further enacted that if any jesuit, or member of any such religious order, community, or society as aforesaid, shall, after the commencement of this act, come into this realm, he shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be sentenced and ordered to be banished from the United Kingdom for the term of his natural life.

Natural-born subjects, being jesuits, may return into the kingdom and
be registered.

"XXX. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in case any natural-born subject of this realm, being at the time of the commencement of this act a jesuit, or other member of any such religious order, community, or society as aforesaid, shall, at the time of the commencement of this act, be out of the realm, it shall be lawful for such person to return or to come into this realm; and upon such his return or coming into the realm he is hereby required, within the space of six calendar months after his first returning or coming into the United Kingdom, to deliver such notice or statement to the clerk of the peace of the county or place where he shall reside, or his deputy, for the purpose of being so registered and transmitted, as hereinbefore directed; and in case any such person shall neglect or refuse so to do, he shall for such offence forfeit and pay to his majesty, for every calendar month during which he shall remain in the United Kingdom without having delivered such notice or statement, the sum of fifty pounds.

The principal secretaries of state may grant licences to jesuits, &c. to come into the kingdom;

and may revoke the same.

"XXXI. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, it shall be lawful for any one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, being a protestant, by a licence in writing, signed by him, to grant permission to any jesuit, or member of any such religious order, community, or society as aforesaid, to come into the United Kingdom, and to remain therein for such period as the said secretary of state shall think proper, not exceeding in any case the space of six calendar months; and it shall also be lawful for any of his majesty's principal secretaries of state to revoke any licence so granted before the expiration of the time mentioned therein, if he shall so think fit; and if any such person to whom such licence shall have been granted shall not depart from the United Kingdom within twenty days after the expiration of the time mentioned in such licence, or if such licence shall have been revoked, then within twenty days after notice of such revocation shall have been given to him, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and being thereof lawfully convicted shall be sentenced and ordered to be banished from the United Kingdom for the term of his natural life.

licences to be parliament.

"XXXII. And be it further enacted, that there shall annually be laid before both houses of parliament an account of all such licences as shall have been granted for the purpose hereinbefore mentioned within the twelve months then next preceding.

Admitting
such religious
a misdemeanor.

"XXXIII. And be it further enacted, that in case any jesuit, or member of any such religious order, community, or society as aforesaid, shall, after the commencement of this act, within any part of the United Kingdom, admit any person to become a regular ecclesiastic, or brother or member of any such religious order, community, or society, or be aiding or consenting thereto, or shall administer or cause to be administered, or be aiding or assisting in the administering or taking, any oath, vow, or engagement purporting or intended to bind the person taking the same to the rules, ordinances, or ceremonies of such religious order, community, or society, every person offending in the premises in England or Ireland shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland shall be punished by fine and imprisonment. STAT. 10 GEO. 4, c. 7.

“XXXIV. And be it further enacted, that in case any person shall, after the commencement of this act, within any part of this United Kingdom, be admitted or become a jesuit, or brother or member of any other such religious order, community, or society as aforesaid, such person shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being thereof lawfully convicted shall be sentenced and ordered to be banished from the United Kingdom for the term of his natural life. Any person so admitted a member of a religious order to be banished.

“XXXV. And be it further enacted, that in case any person sentenced and ordered to be banished under the provisions of this act shall not depart from the United Kingdom within thirty days after the pronouncing of such sentence and order, it shall be lawful for his majesty to cause such person to be conveyed to such place out of the United Kingdom as his majesty, by the advice of his privy council, shall direct. The party offending may be banished by his majesty;

“XXXVI. And be it further enacted, that if any offender, who shall be so sentenced and ordered to be banished in manner aforesaid, shall, after the end of three calendar months from the time such sentence and order hath been pronounced, be at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without some lawful cause, every such offender being so at large as aforesaid, on being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be transported to such place as shall be appointed by his majesty, for the term of his natural life. and if at large after three months, may be transported for life.

“XXXVII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend in any manner to affect any religious order, community, or establishment consisting of females bound by religious or monastic vows. Not to extend to female societies.

“XXXVIII. And be it further enacted, that all penalties imposed by this act shall and may be recovered as a debt due to his majesty, by information to be filed in the name of his majesty's attorney-general for England or for Ireland, as the case may be, in the courts of Exchequer in England or Ireland respectively, or in the name of his majesty's advocate-general in the court of Exchequer in Scotland. Penalties, how to be recovered.

“XXXIX. And be it further enacted, that this act, or any part thereof, may be repealed, altered, or varied at any time within this present session of parliament. Act may be altered this session.

“XL. And be it further enacted, that this act shall commence and take effect at the expiration of ten days from and after the passing thereof. Commencement of act.

"An Act to regulate the Duties, Salaries, and Emoluments of the Officers, Clerks, and Ministers of certain Ecclesiastical Courts in England."

"Whereas the commissioners authorized and appointed by several commissions and warrants, as well from his late majesty King George the Third, as from his present majesty, to make a diligent examination of the duties, salaries, and emoluments of the several officers, clerks, and ministers of justice of and within all ecclesiastical courts (amongst other courts) in England, and to inquire what regulations might be fit to be established respecting such duties, salaries, and emoluments, have, in pursuance of the said several commissions and warrants, made two several reports to his present majesty, one dated the sixteenth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, as to the duties, salaries, and emoluments of the officers, clerks, and ministers of justice of the court of Arches, Prerogative court, and court of Peculiars of the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury respectively, and the other dated the fourth day of July one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, as to the duties, salaries, and emoluments of the officers, clerks, and ministers of justice of the Consistory court and Commissary court of the Lord Bishop of London respectively; and whereas the said commissioners have in their said several reports recommended the regulation of the duties, salaries, and emoluments of the officers, clerks, and ministers of justice of the said several courts respectively, and it is expedient that such recommendation of the said commissioners should be carried into effect, and that some provision should be made for the permanent regulation of the said duties, salaries, and emoluments; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for the official principal of the said court of Arches, together with the chancellor of the diocese of London and the commissary of the diocese of Canterbury, or together with either of them, and they are hereby required, to take into consideration the said reports and recommendations of the said commissioners, and to establish and ordain tables of fees to be thereafter taken by the several officers, clerks, and ministers of the said several courts respectively, such tables respectively to contain the fees recommended by the said commissioners in their said reports to be taken by the several officers, clerks, and ministers of the said several courts respectively, and no other fees or emoluments whatsoever; which tables of fees, when so established and ordained, shall be entered or enrolled in the public books or records of the courts to which they respectively relate, in such manner as the persons establishing the same shall think fit.

Tables of fees to be established, and enrolled in the books of the courts.

"II. And be it further enacted, that the fees so established and ordained shall, from and after the establishment and ordaining thereof, and the entry or enrolment of such tables as aforesaid, and after notice thereof given to the officers, clerks, and ministers respectively whom they may concern, in such manner as the persons establishing the said tables shall direct, be the lawful fees of such officers, clerks, and ministers respectively, and that none other (except such as may be altered or ordained as hereinafter provided) shall be demanded, received, or taken by such officers, clerks, and ministers respectively, under any colour or pretence whatsoever.

The fees in such tables to be the only lawful fees.

"III. And whereas some alteration in such tables of fees, after the same shall have been so entered and enrolled as aforesaid, may from time to time become expedient and necessary; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said persons for the time being by whom such tables of fees shall be established as aforesaid from time to time to alter such tables of fees, and also to establish and ordain other reasonable, new, or additional fees to be demanded, received, and taken by such officers, clerks, and ministers respectively, and to cause such altered, new, or additional fees to be entered or enrolled in the public books or records of the courts to which they respectively relate; and which altered, new, or additional fees, when so entered or enrolled, shall be the lawful fees of such offi-

"IV. And be it further enacted, that the several tables of fees so ordained and established as aforesaid, together with any subsequent alterations that may from time to time be made therein as aforesaid, shall be respectively kept hung up in some conspicuous part of the office or place of business to which they relate; and that extracts from such tables shall be hung up in some conspicuous part of the office or place of business of each officer, clerk, or minister of the said several courts respectively, containing such parts thereof as shall concern such officer, clerk, or minister.

"V. Provided always and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to any charges or fees made or received by any proctor of the same courts, or of any of them, in respect of business done by such proctor in his character and profession of proctor only, and not as such officer, clerk, or minister as aforesaid.

"VI. And whereas various important duties are required to be performed by the deputy registrars and clerks of seats in the office of the Prerogative court, and by the other officers, clerks, and ministers employed in the registry and in other offices of the several before-mentioned courts, the due performance of which it is expedient to regulate and enforce, and to provide for the due qualification of the persons appointed to such offices; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said persons for the time being respectively hereinbefore authorized to establish fees, and they are hereby required, forthwith to inquire into the performance of such duties, and from time to time to make such regulations respecting the same, and the performance thereof by the several officers, clerks, and ministers aforesaid, as to them shall seem expedient; which regulations, having been approved and confirmed by the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, when they relate to the said court of Arches, Prerogative court, and court of Peculiars, or either of them, and having been approved and confirmed by the Lord Bishop of London, when they relate to the said Consistory court and Commissary court, or either of them, shall be entered or enrolled in the public books or records of the courts to which they shall relate respectively, and shall from the time of such entry or enrolment be in full force with respect to such officers, clerks, and ministers respectively, and binding upon them and each of them.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no person shall be appointed to the office of deputy registrar, entering clerk, record keeper, clerk of the seats, or examiner in any of the said several courts respectively, unless the appointment of such person to such office shall be previously approved by the judges for the time being of the said several courts respectively, and confirmed by the Archbishop of Canterbury or Bishop of London, as such appointment may relate to the respective courts of such archbishop or bishop, such approbation and confirmation to be signified in writing, and to be registered.

"VIII. And be it enacted, that no person shall be hereafter appointed clerk of a seat in the office of the said Prerogative court, unless he be a notary public, and have duly served a clerkship of seven years to a proctor practising as such in one of the said courts; and such clerk of a seat shall execute his duties in person, except when prevented by reasonable cause; and when so prevented, he shall procure the assistance of some other notary public, to be approved by the judge: provided always that nothing herein contained shall extend or apply to any clerk of a seat in the office of the Prerogative court, duly appointed thereto before or at the time of passing this act.

“IX. And whereas delay in the progress of causes in the said several courts, and in the high court of Delegates, is occasioned by some of the present rules of practice (1), and particularly by rules respecting causes proceeding in panam contumacia, where the parties cited do not appear; be it therefore enacted, that it shall

(1) Rules of practice:—In Jolly v. Baines, (12 A. & E. 201.) it was held, on motion for a prohibition, that the court of Queen’s Bench will not enter into questions as to the practice of the ecclesiastical courts; as, whether witnesses in a suit have been examined conformably to a general order of the court of Arches, although such order was made by virtue of Stat. 10 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 9.

It was likewise held, that a cause of subtraction of church rate may be carried into the Arches court by letters of request from the commissary of the diocese, or other jurisdiction, in which the cause originates, under Stat. 23 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 3, without any proceeding having been first taken in the court of that jurisdiction; and that it is sufficient ground for such removal that matters of difficulty may arise, in which the parties desiring letters of request can have assistance of counsel in the superior court, not attainable in the inferior:—Lord Denman stating, “This was a motion for a prohibition to the court of Arches, in a suit for subtraction of church rate.

“Two objections were urged. First, that the depositions were improperly taken, with reference to the statute 10 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 9. The answer is clear, that, even if it were so, it is a matter of irregularity in practice only, and no ground for this court to interfere by writ of prohibition.

“Secondly, that the party was cited out of his diocese, and that a suit of subtraction of church rates cannot, by the law, civil or canon, be referred by letters of request to the superior ecclesiastical court, and so is not within the exception of the statute 23 Hen. 8, c. 9. No authority was cited for this position, nor any reason assigned at the bar, why a suit for subtraction of church rate might not be so referred as much as a suit for subtraction of tithes, or for brawling, or any other contentious matter. But it was said by counsel, that they were not aware of any instance in which it had been done.

“We have made inquiry, and find that suits for subtraction of church rate have frequently been referred by letters of request, and that no objection has ever been taken on that ground, although in several such instances a prohibition has been moved for on other grounds. The ground usually assigned in the letters of request is, that the parties can, in the superior court, have the benefit of counsel learned in the law, which advice cannot be had in the inferior jurisdiction; and this ground is obviously applicable to the case in question.

“We see, therefore, no reason to doubt that the letters of request were in this case proper; and the rule must be discharged.”

The citation in the foregoing case was addressed by Herbert Jenner, &c., official principal, &c., “To all and singular clerks, and literate persons,” in the province of Canterbury, and recited as follows. “Whereas we have lately received letters of request from the worshipful Christopher Hodgson, M.A., commissary of the Right Reverend Father in God, Johs, by divine permission Lord Bishop of Lincoln, in and for the archdeaconry of Leicester, lawfully constituted, of the tenor following, to wit: ‘Whereas *W. “Whereas an act was passed in the parliament of Ireland in the ninth year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled, ‘An Act for uniting several Parishes, and building several Parish Churches in more convenient Places,’ whereby, after reciting that the parishes of Oran and Drumtemple in the diocese of Elphin were fit to be united, and that the ancient church of Oran within the said parish of Oran was conveniently situated for the parishioners of the said parishes to repair unto, were the same rebuilt, it was enacted, that it should and might be lawful to and for the bishop of the said diocese, with the approbation of the archbishop of the province, and the consent of the respective patrons, incumbents, and the major part of the inhabitants of the said parishes, to order the church to be rebuilt at Oran in the said parish of Oran, and to unite the said parishes of Oran and Drumtemple; and that the said parishes so united should be called by the name of the parish of Oran; and that the inhabitants of the said united parish should from time to time be liable to and chargeable with building and keeping in repair the said church of Oran, which was for ever to be deemed and taken to be one parish to all intents and purposes whatsoever: and whereas after the passing of the said act the said parishes of Oran and Drumtemple were episcopally united with three other parishes, namely, the parish of Donamon, the parish of Kilcrowan, and the parish of Ballynakill, all in the said diocese of Elphin, which union still subsists; and whereas, in consequence of the great extent of the said union, it may be expedient hereafter to disunite the said parishes, or to divide the said union into two parts, one to consist of the said parishes of Oran and Drumtemple, and the other to consist of the said parishes of Donamon, Kilcrowan, and Ballynakill; and whereas no church has since the passing of the said act been built or rebuilt, pursuant thereto, in the said parishes thereby united, or either of them; and the said union of the said five parishes now contains only one church, which is in the said parish of Donamon, and is extremely remote from other parts of the said union; and whereas the trustees and commissioners of the first-fruits of the several benefices in Ireland have granted the sum of nine hundred pounds, late Irish currency, for building a church in the said parish of Drumtemple, being part of the union created by the said act; and a site for such new church has been selected in the village of Ballymoee in the said parish, as being more eligible than the site of Oran, mentioned in the said act; but such new church cannot, by reason of the said act, be erected

"III. And whereas by an act passed in the parliament of Ireland in the second year of the reign of King George the First, intituled, 'An Act for real Union and Division of Parishes,' reciting that there might be occasion thereafter for making an act or acts of parliament for the uniting or disuniting of particular parishes or parts of parishes, or erecting particular churches, it was enacted, that all such acts of parliament for the aforesaid purposes only, or any of them, should be deemed as public and general acts in all courts and by all persons, and that no fees should be paid or taken by any person or persons for passing any such act of parliament: and whereas it is expedient that a like provision should be made in this case; be it therefore enacted, that this present act shall be deemed a public and general act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such in all courts, and by all judges, justices, and others, without being specially pleaded, and that no fees shall be paid or taken by any person for passing the same."

"VIII. And whereas by the said in part recited act of the seventh year of the reign of his present majesty it was enacted, that it should be lawful for the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said act to take or use, for the purposes of the said act, so much of the burial ground of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields as lay on the south side of the said church as might be required for the purpose, and the ground so taken and the fee-simple and inheritance thereof should be and were thereby vested in the king's majesty, his heirs and successors, for the purposes of the said act; and it was thereby further enacted, that the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said act should be and were thereby empowered and required, out of the monies to be applied for the purposes of the said act, to purchase or otherwise provide a piece or parcel of ground, to be approved by the Lord Bishop of London and the vicar of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields for the time being, to be appropriated in enlarging that part of the then present burial ground as was situated on the north and east sides of the said church, such additional ground to be used as and for a burial ground for the parishioners of the said parish of Saint Martin in the Fields; and to procure the same to be consecrated and settled for that purpose, in such manner as the Lord Bishop of London for the time being, or such person as he should appoint, should direct; and to cause such burial ground to be made under pavement, and inclosed in such manner as the Lord Bishop of London, and the vicar of the said parish of Saint Martin in the Fields for the time being should approve; and the said commissioners should cause a proper gate or gates to be erected as an entrance thereto, with locks and other fastenings; and such new burial ground, and the soil thereof, and the freehold and inheritance of the same in fee-simple, should be vested in the same manner, and should be subject to the same peculiar jurisdictions and visitations, as the then present burial ground of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields: and whereas by an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act to alter and enlarge the Powers of an Act passed in the seventh year of the Reign of His present Majesty, for extending to Charing Cross, the Strand, and Places adjacent, the Powers of an Act for making a more convenient Communication from Mary-le-bone Park, and for enabling the Commissioners of His Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues to grant Leases of the Site of Carlton Palace, and for other Purposes relating thereto,' it was amongst other things enacted, that whenever, at any time after the passing of the now reciting act, it should be necessary, in pursuance and execution of the said therein and hereinbefore in part recited act, to open or disturb any grave or graves, or any burial vault or vaults, in the said burial ground of the said parish of Saint Martin in the Fields on the south side of the said church, it should be lawful for the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said recited act, with the consent of the vicar and churchwardens for the time being of the said parish of Saint Martin in the Fields, or the major part of them, to remove and carry away the remains of any such person or persons as should have been interred or deposited in such grave or graves, vault or vaults, and place the same either in such new burial ground as by the said therein and hereinbefore in part recited act the said commissioners were empowered and required to provide, or in any other churchyard or consecrated ground, in such manner as the Lord Bishop of London for the time being, or such person or persons as he might appoint, should direct, and that the expenses of such removing and carrying away and placing (not exceeding in any one case the sum of ten pounds) should be paid by the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said therein and hereinbefore in part recited act, out of the monies to be applied for the purposes of the said act: and whereas, for the greater accommodation of the interment of bodies within the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields aforesaid, and in order more effectually to enable the commissioners acting in the execution of the said recited act of the seventh year of the reign of his present majesty, to remove the remains of the persons now interred in the present burial ground of the said parish, the said commissioners have proposed to make a vault or vaults for that purpose under the present churchyard, on the north, east, and south sides of Saint Martin's church aforesaid; be it therefore further enacted, that the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said recited act of the seventh year of the reign of his present majesty as aforesaid, shall be and they are hereby authorized and empowered, by and with the consent of the vicar and churchwardens of the said parish of Saint Martin in the Fields or the major part of them, when and so soon as they shall think it expedient so to do, to make, form, and complete a vault or vaults under the north, east, and south sides of the present churchyard of the parish of Saint Martin in the Fields aforesaid, or under such part or parts thereof as they shall think necessary and proper for that purpose; such vault or vaults to be approved by the Lord Bishop of London, and to be used as and for a burial vault or vaults for the parishioners of the said parish.

"An Act to render valid Marriages solemnised in certain Churches and Chapels."

4 Geo. 4, c. 76. "Whereas, by an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act for amending the Laws respecting the Solemnization of Marriages in England,' it is provided, that if the church of any parish, or chapel of any chapelry, wherein marriages have been usually solemnized, be demolished in order to be rebuilt, or be under repair, and on such account be disused for public

(1) The object of Stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Gul. 4, c. 18, is to legalize marriages solemnized in chapels, of which the consecration was doubtful. For a similar purpose Stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 92, was passed, namely, to legalize marriages celebrated in churches or chapels built and consecrated since Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, and Stat. 44 Geo. 3, c. 77, but in which banns had not usually been published before Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, and which did not fall under the qualifying provisions of Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76.

There are several ancient chapels, such as the inns of court, and the chapel of the Savoy, in which marriages cannot now legally be solemnized, banns not having been published in them before Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33. In Tunstall v. Wyborn, (2 Camp. 297,) Lord Ellenborough held, that the existence of a registry of marriages from 1578, and of the publication of banns from 1754, coupled with the deposition of the clergyman, that marriages had to his knowledge been frequently solemnized there, founded a sufficient presumption, that banns had been published there, before Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33 (ante 847). Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 2 (ante 1226), enacts, that marriage shall be solemnized in one of the parish churches or public chapels in which the banns shall have been published; and further defines "chapel" as that "in which banns of matrimony may now or may hereafter be lawfully published;" and by its 22nd section, renders void all marriages knowingly celebrated by both parties in any other place.

In Stallwood v. Tredger, (2 Phill. 299,) Sir John Nicholl stated, and his opinion was confirmed by the court of Delegates, that the provisions of Stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, were not contravened, where a church being under repair, (vide Stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 13; Stat. 5 Geo. 4, c. 32, ss. 2 & 3; and Stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Gul. 4, c. 18, s. 2,) and shut up, the banns had been published in the church of a parish adjoining to that, in which they were married; but he said, "I am not disposed to go to the extent of giving an opinion, that under no circumstances would a marriage be void if contrary to this provision, and had elsewhere than in the church in which the banns were published; for instance, if the banns were bond fide and honestly published at York, and the parties were to come to London to be married, whether such a marriage would be void." Vide 2 Burn's E. service, it shall be lawful for the banns to be proclaimed in a church or chapel of any adjoining parish or chapelry in which banns are usually proclaimed, or in any place within the limits of the parish or chapelry which shall be licensed by the bishop of the diocese for the performance of divine service during the repair or rebuilding of the church as aforesaid; and whereas by an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act to amend an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament, intituled, An Act for amending the Laws respecting the Solemnization of Marriages in England,' it was enacted, that all marriages which had been theretofore solemnized, or which should be thereafter solemnized, in any place within the limits of such parish or chapelry so licensed as aforesaid for the performance of divine service during the repair or rebuilding of the church of any parish, or chapel of any chapelry, wherein marriages had been usually solemnized, or if no such place should be so licensed, then in a church or chapel of any adjoining parish or chapelry in which banns were usually proclaimed, whether by banns lawfully published in such church or chapel, or by licence lawfully granted, should not have their validity questioned on account of their having been so solemnized, nor should the ministers who had so solemnized the same be liable to any ecclesiastical censure or to any other proceeding whatsoever; and whereas the ministers of certain parish churches and chapels of chapelries have, during the repair or rebuilding of such churches or chapels, published the banns of marriages in some places within the limits of their parishes or chapelries respectively wherein divine service has been usually performed during the time of such repair or rebuilding, but have solemnized the marriages themselves in the churches or chapels of the same or of some adjoining parishes or chapelries; and whereas other clergymen, during the time of such repair or rebuilding, have published banns of marriage and solemnized marriages in places duly licensed for the performance of divine worship, according to the forms of the united church of England and Ireland, within their respective parishes or chapelries, but not licensed specially for such performance during such time as aforesaid; and whereas it is expedient that the marriages so solemnized should not on that account have their validity questioned; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that all marriages, the banns whereof have been published in any place used for the performance of divine service within the limits of any parish or chapelry, during the repairs or rebuilding of the church or chapel thereof, which marriages have been solemnized either in the said place so used or in the church or chapel of the same or of some adjoining parish or chapelry during such repair or rebuilding, shall not have their validity questioned on account of having been so solemnized.

"II. And be it further enacted, that in every case in which the church of any parish or place, in which banns of marriage may be published and marriages solemnized, shall be pulled down, or be rebuilding or under repair, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese to order and direct that banns of marriage may be published and marriages solemnized (1) in any consecrated chapel of such parish or place which he shall by order in writing direct, until the church shall again be opened for the performance of divine service; and during all such period the said consecrated chapel shall, for all purposes relating to the publication of banns of marriage and to the solemnization of marriages, be deemed and taken to be the church of the parish, anything in any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding; and the fees in respect thereof shall be applied, during such period, as the bishop of the diocese shall, with the consent of the incumbent, order and direct.

"LV. And be it enacted, that when any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, who shall have belonged to any ship of his majesty, shall have died, leaving a will, no wages, prize money, or other allowances of money shall be paid over to or recovered by his executor or executors except upon the probate of the will, to be obtained in the following manner; videlicet, after such will shall have been so transmitted, registered, and approved as hereinbefore directed, the inspector shall cause to be issued to the person named therein as executor a cheque in lien thereof, containing directions to return the same, with his or her signature thereto, upon the testator's death, to the treasurer of his majesty's navy, which cheque shall be in the form heretofore used in such cases, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem most expedient and conducive to the purposes of this act, and shall have the requisite certificates in blank subscribed thereto, to be filled up as hereinafter mentioned; and in the event of the testator's death, the minister or curate of the parish in which the party named as executor shall then reside shall, upon the application of the executor examine him, and such two inhabitant householders of the parish as may be disposed to certify their personal knowledge of the holder of the cheque, touching his claim, and that they are satisfied of his being the person therein described as executor; and the said executor shall subscribe his name to the application, and the two householders their names to the certificate for that purpose subjoined to the cheque, (the blanks therein being first filled up agreeable to truth,) in the presence of the minister or curate, for which respective purposes the said executor and householders shall attend at such time and place as shall be appointed by the minister or curate, who being, upon examination of the several parties, satisfied with their answers, and that the person holding the cheque is the executor therein named, and that the two persons certifying as before required are inhabitant householders of the parish, and having seen the said parties sign the application and certificate respectively, (which he is hereby required to do,) shall add thereto a description of the height, complexion, colour of eyes and hair, age, and any particular marks about the person of the party claiming as executor, and, after the several blanks shall have been filled up agreeable to truth, shall certify to the several particulars by subscribing his signature thereto; and the said executor shall, before signing the application, pay to the said minister or curate a fee of two shillings and sixpence for his trouble on the occasion; and the said application and certificates being in all things completed according to the directions therein and hereby given, the same shall be transmitted by the said minister or curate by the general post, addressed to the Treasurer of the Navy, London; and the said original will having been passed in the manner directed by this act, the inspector shall note thereon the amount of the wages due to the deceased, as calculated on the search to be obtained from the navy office, and shall then forward such will to a proctor, in order to his obtaining probate thereof; and in case the executor shall not reside within the bills of mortality, the inspector shall also forward to such proctor a letter addressed to the minister, in the usual or other requisite form, for the purpose of its being transmitted to him with the commission for administering the necessary oath to the party as executor; and such proctor, having received the will and the said letter of the inspector, (in case such letter shall be necessary,) shall immediately sue out the previous commission or requisition, or take such other steps as may be necessary towards enabling the executor to obtain probate, and shall inclose in the said letter a copy of the will and the commission or requisition, with instructions for executing the same, and forward the same to the minister by the general post, agreeably to the address put thereon by the inspector.

"LVI. And be it further enacted, that when any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, shall die intestate, leaving any wages, prize money, or other allowances of money of any kind due to him in respect of services in his majesty's navy, the same shall not be paid to his representatives, except upon letters of administration to be obtained in the following manner; videlicet, the person claiming administration shall send a letter to the inspector, stating his place of abode, the parish in which the same is situate, his degree of relationship to the deceased, the name of the deceased, and of the ship or ships to which he belonged, that he has been informed of the intestate's death, and requesting the inspector to give such directions as may enable him to procure letters of administration to the deceased's effects, or to the like effect, upon receipt whereof the inspector shall send by post, under cover of the minister of the parish wherein the claimant shall reside, a petition in the form heretofore in such cases used, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem most expedient and conducive to the purposes of this act, together with the requisite certificates in blank, to be filled up as hereafter mentioned, and a letter pointing out the steps to be taken thereon as hereinafter in that behalf contained, and shall also send to the claimant a letter advising him of the forwarding of the said petition or paper as aforesaid, and pointing out the measures to be taken by him for substantiating his claim; and upon receipt of the said petition the minister, officiating minister, or curate shall, on the application of the claimant, examine him, and also such two inhabitant householders of the parish as may be disposed to certify their personal knowledge of him, and their belief of his right to administer to the effects of the intestate, according to the degree of relationship set forth at the head of the petition; and the minister or curate being, upon due examination of the claimant and the said two householders, satisfied of the truth of their answers, and having seen the claimant sign the application, and the two householders sign the certificate, (which the minister is required to do,) shall add thereto a description of the height, complexion, colour of eyes and hair, age, and any particular marks about the person of the claimant, and after the blanks in the said petition, certificates, and description for those several purposes shall have been filled up agreeable to truth, shall certify to the several particulars by subscribing his signature thereto, for which respective purposes the said claimant and the householders shall attend at such time and place as the minister or curate shall appoint; and the claimant shall, before signing the petition, pay to the minister or curate a fee of two shillings and sixpence for his trouble on the occasion; and the said paper being in all things completed according to the directions therein and hereby given, the minister shall return the same by the general post, addressed to the treasurer of the navy, London; and upon the receipt thereof at the navy pay office, the inspector shall examine the same, and, being satisfied of the claim, he shall transmit to a proctor a certificate thereof; (in the form heretofore used, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem expedient;) and in case the claimant shall not reside within the bills of mortality, the inspector shall at the same time inclose and send to the said proctor a letter addressed to the minister and churchwardens or elders (as the case may be) of the parish within which the claimant then shall reside, signifying the transmission of a commission (which the proctor is to obtain) for swearing the claimant as administrator, with the necessary instructions for executing the same; and the proctor shall, upon receipt thereof, take the requisite steps towards enabling the claimant to obtain letters of administration, and shall, in the inspector's letter to the minister, inclose the commission or other necessary instrument, with instructions for executing the same, and shall forward such letter and inclosures by the general post, agreeably to the address put thereon by the said inspector.

Minister or curate rejecting petition to state his reasons.

"LVII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in case the minister or curate shall reject any petition for want of satisfactory proof of the claim, he shall state his reasons for such rejection on the said petition, and forthwith return the same to the treasurer of the navy as aforesaid; and in case no application shall be made to the minister or curate by the claimant, or no effectual steps shall be taken by him to complete the petition and the certificates within the space of two calendar months from the date of the inspector's letter accompanying such petition, the minister or curate shall, at the expiration of that time, return the petition to the treasurer of the navy as aforesaid, with his reason for doing so noted thereon.

“LVIII. And be it enacted, that every minister to whom any such letter, with a commission or requisition for swearing any executor or administrator, shall be transmitted, shall, immediately upon the receipt thereof, take the necessary steps for procuring the execution of the same, and shall transmit the same, when executed, directed to the treasurer of his majesty's navy, London; and if the executor or administrator shall reside at a distance from the place where the wages or other allowances of money are payable, he shall specify the name and residence of the nearest or most convenient collector of customs or of excise; and upon receipt of the said commission at the navy pay office, the same shall be forwarded to the proctor, who, in pursuance thereof, shall forthwith procure the requisite probate or letters of administration, and when obtained transmit the same to the inspector at the navy pay office.

“LIX. And be it further enacted, that when any probate or letters of administration shall have been so obtained, the proctor employed therein shall immediately send the same to the treasurer of the navy, with a copy of the will, (in the case of probate,) and an account of his charges for the same; and upon receipt thereof the inspector shall issue a check containing the heads of such probate or letters of administration, and shall note thereon the amount of the proctor's charges and the address of the claimant, which check shall be in the form heretofore used in the navy pay office, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem most expedient for the purpose; and so soon as the wages and prize money due to the deceased shall have been calculated in the proper departments, the amount shall be noted on the check, and, after abating the proctor's charges, the balance shall be paid to the party personally, or by means of a remittance bill, in the manner and under similar regulations as are hereinbefore provided with respect to other remittances of wages, and the check shall then be delivered to the party to stand instead of probate or letters of administration, to enable him to receive whatever other sums may become payable to the deceased's estate.

“LX. And be it further enacted, that if any proctor, registrar, or other officer of any ecclesiastical court, shall deliver or cause to be delivered any letters of administration, probate of will, or letters of administration with will annexed, to any other person than the treasurer of the navy or the said inspector, in the manner directed by this act, such proctor or other officer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds; and if any agent or agents for prizes shall pay any prize money due to a petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, under any authority whatever, other than the inspector's check directed by this act, such payment shall be null and void, and the agent or agents so paying the same shall forfeit for every and each such offence a sum equal to the amount of the prize money paid.

the treasurer of the navy, and if he shall disapprove thereof, the same shall be taxed by the proper officer of the court, without fee or reward, unless the charges shall have arisen in consequence of any litigation or suit, in which case a fee of three shillings shall be allowed to the officer for taxation.

“LXII. And be it further enacted, that if any officer, proctor, or other person shall take more than the several sums allowed in the said schedule, every person so offending shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds, with full costs of suit; or if any registrar, proctor, or other officer of any ecclesiastical court shall knowingly or willingly be aiding or assisting in procuring probate of any will or letters of administration, whereby any person may be enabled to claim any wages, pay, prize money, or allowance of money of any kind for the services of any such petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, otherwise than in the manner prescribed by this act, every such registrar, proctor, or other officer shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of five hundred pounds, and shall moreover forfeit his office and be rendered incapable of acting in any capacity in any court of admiralty or ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

“LXIII. And be it further enacted, that when the executor or administrator of a deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, shall die before he shall have received the wages, prize money, or other allowances payable to his testator or intestate, it shall be lawful for the inspector to investigate the right of any person claiming payment of the same, or to represent according to law the person of such deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, and, being satisfied of such right, to certify the name and place of abode of such person upon the check or certificate, and that in his judgment the claimant is the rightful representative of such deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, and entitled to receive whatever may remain due in respect of his services as aforesaid; and thereupon, if the wages, prize money, and other allowances remaining unpaid shall appear to the inspector not to amount nor likely to amount to more than the sum of twenty pounds, then it shall be lawful for the said treasurer, and also for any agent or agents for prizes respectively, to pay to such person all wages, pay, prize money, bounty money, and other allowances of money so due or to become payable, without requiring him to take out fresh letters of administration; but if the same shall amount or appear to the said inspector to be likely to amount to more than that sum, then the same shall only be paid upon fresh letters of administration, to be obtained in the manner hereinbefore directed.

“LXIV. And for preventing frauds, which have been frequently practised by persons falsely pretending to be creditors of deceased seamen and marines, be it further enacted, that no letters of administration shall be granted to any person claiming as a creditor of any deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, but that every such creditor shall be entitled to receive the amount of his claim (if just) out of the assets of the deceased, or so far as the same will extend for that purpose, when the just amount of the debt or claim shall have been ascertained and approved as hereinafter provided; (that is to say,) that every person claiming as a creditor shall deliver to the said inspector an account in writing, subscribed with his name, stating the particulars of the demand and the place of his abode, and verified by his oath, or, being a Quaker, by his affirmation in writing taken before any justice of the peace, which oath or affirmation any such justice is hereby empowered to administer; and if any application for a certificate to obtain probate of the will or letters of administration to the effects of the deceased shall be made, the inspector shall give notice to the applicant of the name and place of abode of the creditor, and the amount of the debt, and shall also cause notice to be given to the creditor of the place of abode of such applicant; but if no such application shall have been made at the time of the delivery of the claim, the inspector or other person authorized by the said treasurer shall proceed to investigate the account of such creditor, for which purpose he is hereby empowered and directed to require from such creditor a production before him of all books, accounts, vouchers, and papers relating to his demand, and satisfactory evidence thereof; and if such creditor shall, by due proof, satisfy the said inspector or other authorized person of the justice of the demand in part or in the whole, then the same shall be allowed as shall appear just; but if all books, accounts, vouchers, and papers shall not be produced, or a sufficient reason assigned for not producing the same, or if the said inspector or other authorized person shall not be satisfied of the justice of the demand, then he shall disallow the same: provided always, that in case such creditor shall be dissatisfied, he shall be at liberty to appeal against such decision to the said treasurer, who shall thereupon inquire into the same by the examination of the parties and their witnesses upon oath or affirmation taken or made before the said treasurer or any justice of the peace, (which oath or affirmation the said treasurer and any justice as aforesaid are hereby severally authorized to administer,) and to allow or disallow the claim, in part or in the whole, as to the said treasurer shall seem fit, and the decision of the said treasurer shall be final and conclusive in the premises: provided always, that no claim of any creditor shall be admitted or allowed unless the same be made within two years next after the death of the party upon whose assets the claim is made, nor unless the same shall appear to have accrued within three years next before the death of such party.

“LXV. And be it further enacted, that if within the space of twelve calendar months from the delivery of the claim no application shall have been made by any person in the character either of executor or administrator, the creditor shall be entitled to receive so much as shall have been allowed to be due to him as aforesaid out of the monies payable in respect of the services of the deceased, so far as they will extend to satisfy the same, and thereupon the inspector shall grant to the creditor a certificate of the allowance of such claim in the form heretofore used, or in such other form as shall by the said treasurer be deemed expedient, and so much of such wages as shall be sufficient to satisfy the claim so allowed shall be paid or remitted to the creditor in the manner herein provided for the remittance of wages to executors or administrators: provided always, that if any prize money or bounty money shall be due to the deceased, the same shall be payable to such creditor only in the manner hereinafter directed; (that is to say,) if the wages and other allowances of money shall not be sufficient to discharge the claim, the proper officer in the navy pay office shall state at the foot of the certificate the amount paid to the creditor, and it shall not be lawful for the creditor to demand or receive from any person any prize money or bounty money due to the deceased except as hereinafter next mentioned; (that is to say,) such prize and bounty money, if the same shall be in the hands of an agent, shall be paid over as in cases of unclaimed prize money, and the creditor, on the production of such certificate to the officer appointed to pay the prize money, shall be entitled to receive from him so much of the deceased's prize money or other allowances as shall be sufficient to discharge his demand, and upon the same being satisfied the inspector shall retain the certificate as a voucher or document of office: provided also, that if there shall be more creditors than one they shall be satisfied according to the priority of the allowance of their respective claims, but so as not to deprive any creditor of any priority he may by law be entitled to by reason of any specialty, provided notice in writing of the particulars of such specialty shall have been given to the treasurer of the navy in due time.

“LXXXV. And be it further enacted, that if any person shall fraudulently and deceitfully take a false oath, in order to obtain probate of any will or letters of administration of the effects of any deceased commission, warrant, or petty officer, or seaman, or commission or non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine; or if any person shall fraudulently receive or demand any wages, pay, prize money, bounty money, pension, or any part thereof, or any allowance of money whatever, payable or supposed to be payable in respect of the services of any such officer, seaman, or marine, or from the compassionate fund of the navy, or any pension to the widow of an officer, upon or by virtue of any probate of a will or letters of administration, knowing such will to be forged, or such probate or letters of administration to have been obtained by means of a false oath, with “LXXXVI. And be it further enacted, that if any person shall subscribe any false petition or application to the treasurer of his majesty’s navy or to the paymaster of royal marines, falsely and deceitfully representing himself or himself therein to be the widow, executer, nearest or one of the nearest of kindred of any deceased commission or warrant officer of the navy, or commission officer of marines, or of any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, or shall utter or publish any such petition or application, knowing the same to be false, in order to procure, or to enable any other person to procure, a certificate from the said inspector of seamen’s wills or from the paymaster of royal marines as hereinbefore respectively provided, thereby to obtain, or to enable any other person to obtain, without probate or letters of administration, payment of any wages, pay, half pay, or pension, or any allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy, or payment of any wages, prize money, or allowances payable in respect of the services of any officer, seaman, or marine in the royal navy, or thereby to obtain, or to enable any other person to obtain, probate of the will or letters of administration of the effects of any deceased petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine; or if any person shall receive or demand any wages, pay, half pay, prize money, bounty money, pension, or arrears thereof, or any other allowance due or payable in respect of the services of any commission or warrant officer of the navy, or commission officer of royal marines, or of any petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, upon or by virtue of any certificate of the inspector of seamen’s wills or paymaster of royal marines respectively as aforesaid, knowing any such certificate to have been obtained by any false representation or pretence; every such offender shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years and not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years nor less than one year.

Punishment
for forging

“LXXXVII. And be it further enacted, that if any person shall forge, or shall utter, offer, or exhibit, knowing the same to be forged, any paper writing purporting to be an extract from any register of marriage, baptism, or burial, or any certificate of marriage, baptism, or burial, in order to sustain any claim to any wages, prize money, or other monies due or payable in respect of the services of any officer, seaman, or marine in his majesty’s navy, or to sustain any claim to any half-pay payable to an officer of the royal navy or marines, or to any pension as the widow of an officer, or to any payment or allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy, or to any gratuity or bounty of his majesty given to the relatives of persons slain in fight with the enemy; or if any person shall make any false affidavit, or utter or exhibit any false affidavit, certificate, or other voucher or document, in order fraudulently to procure any person to be admitted a pensioner as the widow of an officer of the royal navy, or in order to sustain any claim to any wages, prize money, or other monies, or to any half-pay or pension, or arrears thereof, or any allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy, or to any gratuity or bounty as aforesaid, with intent to defraud any person whomsoever; every person in any of the said cases offending shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years and not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years nor less than one year.’

chancellor, intrusted as aforesaid, or the court of Chancery, or any of the judges thereof, is by law authorized and empowered to grant relief and make summary orders without suit, either in matters of charity, or relative to or for the better security, or for the application, receipt, payment, or transfer of any of the funds thereof, or in matters relative to any benefit or friendly societies, for the better security, or for the application, receipt, payment, or transfer of any of the funds thereof.

“XXII. And whereas cases may occur, upon applications by petition under this act for a conveyance or transfer, where the recent creation or declaration of the trust or other circumstances may render it safe and expedient for the lord chancellor, intrusted as aforesaid, or the court of Chancery, (as the case may require,) to direct, by an order upon such petition, a conveyance or transfer to be made to a new trustee or trustees, without compelling the parties seeking such appointment to file a bill for that purpose, although there is no power in any deed or instrument creating or declaring the trusts of such land or stock to appoint new trustees; be it therefore further enacted, that in any such case it shall be lawful for the lord chancellor, intrusted as aforesaid, or the said court of Chancery, to appoint any person to be a new trustee, by an order to be made on a petition to be presented for a conveyance or transfer under this act, after hearing all such parties as the said court shall think necessary; and thereupon a conveyance or transfer shall and may be made and executed, according to the provisions hereinbefore contained, to or so as to vest such land or stock in such new trustee, either alone or jointly with any surviving or continuing trustee, as effectually and in the same manner as if such new trustee had been appointed under a power in any instrument creating or declaring the trusts of such land or stock, or in a suit regularly instituted.

“XXIII. And be it further enacted, that where all the persons in whom any land may have been vested, in trust for any charity or charitable or public purpose, shall be dead, it shall be lawful for the court of Chancery, on the petition of the persons or body administering such charity or superintending such public purpose, or of any person on behalf thereof, to direct any master or other officer of the said court to cause two successive advertisements to be inserted in the London Gazette and in one or more of the newspapers circulated in the county, city, or place where such land shall be situated, giving notice that the representative of the last surviving trustee do within twenty-eight days appear or give notice of his title to such master or other officer, and prove his pedigree or other title as trustee; and if no person shall appear to give such notice within such twenty-eight days, or the person who may appear or give such notice shall not, within thirty-one days after such appearance or notice, prove his title to the satisfaction of such master or other officer, then and in such case it shall be lawful for the said court to appoint any new trustees for such charity or charitable or public purpose; and such land may be conveyed to such new trustees by any person whom the said court respectively may direct for that purpose, by virtue of the provisions in this act, without the necessity of any decree.

“XXXI. And be it further enacted, that the powers and authorities given by this act to the courts of Chancery and Exchequer in England, and the provisions contained in this act relating to the same courts, shall and may be exercised in like manner and are hereby given and extended to the several courts of Chancery and Exchequer in Ireland, with respect to all land and stock in Ireland.”

“XXI. Provided always, and be it enacted, that no rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of any parish, district-parish, or chapelry, who shall discover any error in the form or substance of the entry in the register of any baptism, marriage, or burial respectively by him solemnized, shall be liable to any of the penalties herein mentioned, if he shall, within one calendar month after the discovery of such error, in the presence of the parent or parents of the child baptized, or of the parties married, or in the presence of two persons who shall have attended at any burial, or in the case of the death or absence of the respective parties aforesaid, then in the presence of the churchwardens or chapelwardens, correct the entry which shall have been found erroneous, according to the truth of the case, by entry in the margin of the register wherein such erroneous entry shall have been made, without any alteration or obliteration of the original entry, and shall sign such entry in the margin, and add to such signature the day of the month and year when such correction shall be made; and such correction and signature shall be attested by the parties in whose presence the same are directed to be made as aforesaid: provided also, that in the copy of the registry which shall be transmitted to the registrar of the diocese, the said rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister shall certify the corrections so made by him as aforesaid.

“XXII. And whereas copies of the registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials, such copies being signed and verified by the written declaration of the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of every parish, district-parish, and chapelry in England where the ceremonies of baptism, marriage, and burial may lawfully be performed, are directed by law to be made and transmitted to the registrar of the diocese within which such parish, district-parish, or chapelry may be situated; be it therefore enacted, that if any person shall knowingly and wilfully insert, or cause or permit to be inserted, in any copy of any register so directed to be transmitted as aforesaid, any false entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, or shall forge or alter, or shall utter knowing any person who shall knowingly and wilfully insert in the register book any false entry of any matter relating to any marriage, or shall falsely make, alter, forge, or counterfeited any such entry in the register, or any licence of marriage, or shall utter or publish as true, any false, altered, forged, or counterfeited register of marriage, or a copy thereof, or any false, altered, forged, or counterfeited licence of marriage, knowing such register or licence of marriage respectively to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited, or shall wilfully destroy any register book of marriages or any part thereof, or shall cause or procure, or assist in the commission of any of the said several offences. 2 Russell on Crimes, by Greaves, 486.

Mr. Lonsdale, (Cr. With respect to registers of baptisms and burials they are still in force, Stat. 6 & 7 Gul. 4, c. 86, s. 49, having provided, that nothing therein contained, shall affect the registration of baptisms or burials, as then by law established.

"Whereas by an act passed in the sixtieth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act for the more effectual Prevention and Punishment of blasphemous and seditious Libels,' it was amongst other things enacted, that if any person should, after the passing of that act, be legally convicted of having composed, printed, or published any blasphemous libel or any such seditious libel as in the said act is before-mentioned, and shall after being so convicted offend a second time, and be thereof legally convicted before any commission of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or in his majesty's court of King's Bench, such person might on such second conviction be adjudged, at the discretion of the court, either to suffer such punishment as might by law be inflicted in cases of high misdemeanor, or to be banished from the United Kingdom and all other parts of his majesty's dominions for such term of years as the court in which such conviction should take place should order: and whereas it is expedient to repeal so much of the said act as relates to the sentence of banishment for the second offence; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that so much and such parts of the said act as relate to the sentence of banishment for the second offence be and the same are hereby wholly repealed."

Stat. 1 & 2 Gul. 4, c. 18,
for inclosing lands in the parish of Woolvercot, in the county of Oxford, and for commutating the tithes of the said parish.

Stat. 1 & 2 Gul. 4, c. 50, for extinguishing tithes, and customary payments in lieu of tithes, within the parish of Llanelly, in the county of Carmarthen, and for making compensation in lieu thereof.

Stat. 1 & 2 Gul. 4, c. 57,
for inclosing, draining, and warping lands within the townships or hamlets of Frodingham, Scunthorpe, and Gunhouse, (otherwise Gunnes,) all in the parish of Frodingham, in the county of Lincoln.

Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 1,
for inclosing lands in the parish of Aston Rowant, in the county of Oxford.

Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 3,
for inclosing lands in the townships of Babwith and Harlethorpe, in the parish of Babwith, in the east riding of the county of York.

Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 4, for inclosing and exonerating from tithes, lands in the parish of Clifton, in the county of Bedford.

Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 5,
for inclosing certain commons or tracts of waste lands, called Harberrow and Blakelown Commons, in the parish of Hagley, in the county of Worcester.

Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 7,
for inclosing lands in the township of Billesley, otherwise Bausley, within the parish of Albury, in the county of Montgomery.

Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 13, for inclosing lands within the hamlet of Hill and Moor, in the parish of Fladbury, in the county of Worcester.

Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 22,
for disafforesting and inclosing so much of the forest of Rockingham, as is situate within the bailiwick of Rockingham, and for inclosing open and common field lands in Greeton, all within the county of Northampton.

STATUTA GULIELMI IV. A.D. 1836—1837.

(2) Prohibition:—Vide Stephens on Clerical Law, tit. PROHIBITION. Vide Stephens on Nisi Prius, tit. MANDAMUS.

(3) Plead such matters:—It seems, that several pleas may now be pleaded to an action in prohibition. The reason why, formerly, only one plea could be pleaded in prohibition was, that the plaintiff was obliged to make the king a party to the suit, and the king not being named in Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 4, which allows several pleas, that statute was held not to extend to the action in prohibition; but this being no longer necessary, that reason ceases. *Hell v. way of traverse or otherwise, as may be proper to show that the writ ought not to issue, and conclude by praying that such writ may not issue; and judgment shall be given, that the writ of prohibition do or do not issue (1), as justice may require; and the party in whose favour judgment shall be given, whether on non-suit, verdict, demurrer, or otherwise, shall be entitled to the costs attending the application and subsequent proceedings (2), and have judgment to recover the same; and in case a verdict shall be given for the party plaintiff in such declaration, it shall be lawful for the jury to assess damages, for which judgment shall also be given, but such assessment shall not be necessary to entitle the plaintiff to costs.

"II. And be it further enacted, that so much of an act passed in the second and third years of the reign of King Edward the Sixth, intituled, 'An Act for

(1) Writ of prohibition do or do not issue:—The court will grant a writ of prohibition to a spiritual court to stay proceedings in a suit of defamation, even after sentence, if it appear, that the court has exceeded its jurisdiction.

The onus of establishing such excess of jurisdiction lies upon the applicant party; therefore, where by the sentence in the suit, in the court below, which was a suit for defaming a spiritual person, it was found that the defendant had "maliciously said several words in the libel mentioned," and it appeared, that some of the words imputed a temporal offence, the court left the applicant to declare in prohibition, in order that it might be ascertained whether the sentence had proceeded upon those words. Thus, in Es parte Mary Evans, (2 Dowl. P. C. N. S. 726,) Mr. Justice Williams observed, "This case was discussed before me a few days ago. It was a motion for a prohibition to stay proceedings in the Consistory court of the Bishop of St. David's, after sentence pronounced therein. Several questions were raised in the course of the argument, and the first of these was, whether the application came too late? Upon that point, however, I entertain no doubt. It seems to me to be clear, that the application is not too late if an excess of jurisdiction appears; that is to be considered as being either decided or recognised in Carslake v. Mepledoram, (2 T. R. 473,) and Hart v. Marsh (Clerk), (5 A. & E. 591.) But it appears, from those cases, that the onus of showing such want of jurisdiction is cast on the party applying. The other questions discussed, resolve themselves into this, whether that want of jurisdiction is here shown? Here, however, there are not, as there were in Hart v. Marsh, some matters of ecclesiastical, some of temporal cognizance. In that case the sentence was founded on some of the charges only, and there was nothing to show, that the sentence did not proceed on those of ecclesiastical cognizance only. Here is an article not charging misconduct only, but the libel charges the defamation of a spiritual person, and it imputes an offence, or offences, also of temporal cognizance. There are authorities to show, that where in libels for defamation, in the ecclesiastical courts, the defamation consists of temporal offences only, the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts is ousted, and prohibition will lie. Evans v. Brown, 2 Ld. Raym. 1161. Holingshead's case, Cro. Car. 229. And a case of Legat v. Wright, is cited by Mr. Burn as an authority. But there is a difficulty, whether the sentence in this case must be understood, as proceeding at all on that part of the words which impute a temporal offence; a proposition which should be clearly established before this rule is made absolute. This is my impression at present, but I shall enlarge the rule, and give the defendant below an opportunity of declaring in prohibition, if he shall be so advised, by which means the whole matter will be brought before the court. I am the more inclined to do so, because I find an indisposition to make such a rule absolute, when a question of costs is the subject of dispute. I will give the defendant time to declare, up to the first day of next term, and if she fails to do so in that time, the rule must be discharged."

In Cardew v. Ostley, (7 Dowl. P. C. 666,) which was a suit for tithes in the ecclesiastical court, it was held, that if the defendant plead a plea, which raises a question beyond the jurisdiction of the court, but afterwards waives it, the court of Queen's Bench will not grant a prohibition in that stage of the proceedings.

(2) The costs attending the application and subsequent proceedings:—Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Gul. 4, l. 64, which directs, that where a new trial is granted without any mention of costs in the rule, the costs of the first trial shall not be allowed to the successful party, though he succeed on the second, equally applies to issues in prohibition, even since Stat. 1 Gul. 4, c. 21, s. 1. Craven v. Sanderson, 7 A. & E. 897, n. (a).

In Tessimond v. Yardley, (5 B. & Ad. 458,) it was holden, that Stat. 1 Gul. 4, c. 21, did not enable the court of Queen's Bench, where a party had declared in prohibition and succeeded, to grant him his cost incurred in the ecclesiastical court.

Where a rule was made absolute for issuing a prohibition, it was decided, that the costs of the rule could not be granted to the successful party under Stat. 1 Gul. 4, c. 2 s. 1, because that statute only applied cases, where there had been pleadings in prohibition. Rex v. Keating, 1 Dowl. P. 440.

(1) The right of nominating to a chapel under Stat. 1 & 2 Gul. 4, c. 38, cannot be acquired, unless the conditions required by the act be strictly complied with. Thus, in the office of the judge, promoted by Williams v. Brown, (1 Curt. 53,) Dr. Lushington observed, "In this case, the office of the judge has been promoted by the Rev. Mr. Williams, the incumbent of the parish of Hendon, against the Rev. Mr. Brown, and the object of the suit, as I understand, is, to ascertain in this form, whether Mr. Brown has been officiating in the parish of Hendon under a competent authority or not. Although the form of the suit is a criminal one, I apprehend that all that is sought to be determined, upon the facts before the court, is, the rights of the respective parties. Undoubtedly the question to be decided is of very considerable importance, and I have deemed it my duty to give it very serious consideration, and to endeavour, if possible, on a consideration of the act of parliament, to find out its true construction, with reference to the facts and circumstances proved in evidence. Before I proceed minutely to consider the facts and the law, I think it right to make an observation upon the jurisdiction of the court in this case. When the suit was originally instituted, I certainly entertained some doubt how far it was competent for this court to exercise jurisdiction to the fullest extent to which the case might be carried. But on reference to authorities, the cases of Bliss v. Woods, (3 Hagg. 486,) of Portland (Duke of) v. Bingham, (1 Const. 157,) of Curr v. Marsh, (2 Phill. 198,) of Moysey v. Hillcoat (D.D.), (2 Hagg. 30,) especially with reference to the first, I could entertain no doubt that this court had jurisdiction, and the power of expressing its opinion upon the question. But I will state candidly the difficulty which presented itself to my mind, which was this:—in the course of the discussion it might, perhaps, incidentally happen that I should be trying the right to a perpetual curacy, and there was a doubt in my mind, whether the court was competent to come to a decision upon this point; or, at least, whether it would not have been open to either party ing of additional Churches in populous Parishes; and whereas another act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his majesty King George the 1 to have applied for a prohibition, if the court proceeded. However, the authorities which I have mentioned, of cases in these courts, and which have not been in the slightest degree impugned, no prohibition having been applied for, are sufficient to warrant me in considering the circumstances of this case.

"It appears that the chapel in question was built by the late Mr. Wilberforce, and was consecrated a few days after his death, and it purports to have been built under the statute of 1 & 2 Gul. 4, c. 38. No doubt can be entertained as to the general principle of the law, where any clergyman attempts to officiate in a church or chapel within the limits of a parish, without the permission of the incumbent. That has been laid down in the case of Bham v. Woods, (3 Hagg. 486,) by Sir John Nicholl, precisely as was laid down by his learned predecessors, and all authorities; namely, that it is not competent for any clergyman of the church of England to enter a parish without leave of the incumbent, and to officiate in performing the duties of his vocation. The defence on the part of Mr. Brown is, that this case is brought within an exception to the general principle of the law, and it is alleged, that under the provisions of the act 1 & 2 Gul. 4, it was competent to Mr. Wilberforce to erect this chapel with the consent of the incumbent or patron, and after sufficient endowment and compliance with the various provisions of the statute, to obtain the right of nominating the minister, who might be duly licensed by the ordinary of the diocese, and that a licence has been obtained. It is unnecessary to consider one part of the case; namely, whether there was a performance of divine service before a licence was obtained; because that was not a question in the citation as originally taken out in the cause, and is not applicable to the important point; namely, the various rights of the parties.

"The question shortly comes to this: have the provisions of the statute been complied with or not?

"And if they have not, the next question is, what are the legal consequences to be deduced therefrom?

"The provisions of the statute, to which the facts of the case have reference, are contained in the second section of the statute itself; and I must take the act of parliament as my guide, and endeavour, as far as it is in my power, to arrive at a just construction of it, with reference to the facts and circum-

proved in the cause. he conditions of the mplied with, I shall sider, whether these or not; because if dent to the right of t appears that those carried into effect, ill never have vested any licence which . a supposition, that such conditions had been complied and that the right of nomination had falls to the ground. The sole ground which the ordinary grants a licence is the right of nomination has vested person who has nominated the indi who comes so to be licensed. It may be understood, that where a party has of the authority of the ordinary, that aut is conclusive. It is not competent ordinary himself without consent of incumbent, to license any person to o within the limits of the parish of that bent. It is not necessary to travel t the whole of the provisions of the act liament; but I shall first consider the tions, and whether they are supported evidence in the cause.

"The objections resolve themselves four heads:

"The first objection is, that, at tl of the passing of the act, the chapel w built and completed within the terms of the subsequent sections of the act.

"The second objection is, that the ing fund is not sufficient.

"The third is, that the free seats of sufficient extent, according to the tions of the statute.

"The fourth is, that the nominati not been rightly exercised.

"With respect to the first point, looked through the whole of the e with reference to the question, whet chapel was built and completed at tl of the passing of the act, according true meaning of the legislature; an the best consideration I can give evidence, I have come to the conclusi the act of parliament has been on th sufficiently complied with. The vex tion is one of the greatest difficulty case; and for the purpose of determini question, I must first refer to the te the act of parliament itself. The act liament directs that 'where any pei persons, belonging to the church of E shall declare his, her, or their inten building a church or chapel for the p ances of divine service, [as aforesaid where such person or persons shall their intention of providing a sum thousand pounds at the least by way dowment for such church or chape secured upon lands or money in the in addition to the pew-rents and arising from the said church or chu case any such rents shall be taken, as also declare his, her, or their inten providing a fund for the repairs of d church or chapel, in manner foll namely, one sum equal in amount pounds upon every one hundred pan the original cost of erecting and fixt or of purchasing such chapel or build be secured upon lands or money in the as aforesaid; and also a further sum reserved annually out of the pew-rents said church or chapel, after the rate

STAT. 1 & 2 intitled, 'An Act to amend and render more effectual an Act passed in the last GUL. 4, c. 38. Session of Parliament, for building and promoting the building of additional pounds for every one hundred pounds of the sum so to be provided, as last aforesaid.' Now after having looked through the evidence, I think it unnecessary to refer to it in detail, but I shall advert to such parts of it as bear upon the point I have to determine, whether or not a repairing fund 'equal in amount to five pounds for every one hundred pounds of the original cost of erecting and fitting up' the chapel, has been set apart.

"The evidence on this part of the case consists of the testimony of Mr. Ravenscroft, and Mr. Philip Flood Page. I have read this evidence in order to see whether it established the sufficiency of the repair fund, and I must say, that looking to this evidence, and the defect of it, I think it is a most unsatisfactory mode of establishing so important a fact. Nothing could have been more easy than to have produced to the court a statement of the actual sum expended in the erection and fitting up of this chapel, and it would have been competent for the party defendant in this cause to have stated the component items of the account, out of which the sum of five pounds per cent. ought to be assessed. Instead of that, I have the evidence of Mr. William Ravenscroft, the solicitor, acting in the lifetime of the late Mr. Wilberforce, who gives the following account of the transaction. He knows nothing of his own knowledge as to the cost of erecting and fitting up the chapel: he was informed by another person the amount upon which the five per cent. was to be calculated upon. His evidence is this: he states that he applied to Mr. Samuel Flood Page, the architect, who told him that the amount was 3,600*l.*, and that he inserted that sum in the deed of endowment, and the sum of 180*l.* as the amount of five per cent. on that principal sum. Every part of the testimony of this witness tends to show, that in his judgment there was a perfect bona fides, that it was intended that the act should be accurately complied with, and that all that was requisite and necessary was to be done. In his answer to the fourth interrogatory, he goes on to say, that he cannot swear either one way or the other; so that no information is obtained from this witness.

"The next witness is Mr. Philip Flood Page, and he is the brother of the architect who was employed on the occasion, and he knows nothing of the cost of erecting the chapel, except so far as he is enabled to speak from the papers in his office, and except so far as he considers himself competent, without reference to the actual cost and expenditure under the act of parliament, to make an estimate of the sum. This witness was not the architect, but his brother was; and his brother has not been called upon to give evidence. He is now in the Isle of Man, having left the business and gone into the church, and it might be attended with some inconvenience to examine him. But if the party in the cause did not think it right or expedient to examine the brother, some better account might surely have been given of the costs and expense of building this chapel. The account which this gentleman gives, appears to me singular. I presume Mr. Ravenscroft gave him some information as to the principle of the estimate required. He, however, states: 'The sum I gave to Mr. Ravenscroft to insert in the deed of endowment as the cost of erecting and fitting up the chapel in question, was 3600*l.* I gave him that as a round sum.' The act of parliament does not speak of a round sum at all. The act of parliament directs that there shall be set apart five per cent. upon 'the original cost of erecting and fitting up.' This was not for the purpose of selling the chapel. The act speaks elsewhere of the purchase of such chapel; but where the right of patronage is assigned to the builder and endower of a chapel, it is made a condition that five per cent. of the actual prime cost of erecting and fitting up shall be set apart as a repair fund. 'I gave that as a round sum, for my calculation made it amount to only 3325*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* I had no communication with Mr. Wilberforce on the subject; the application to me and my answer to it, so far as I know, were quite unknown to Mr. Wilberforce. I made my calculation in this manner—I took the sums paid to Messrs. Bowden and Mr. Castellow, who had the contract for building the chapel; 3080*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* paid to Messrs. Bowden, and 560*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* paid to Mr. Castellow, making 3640*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.*;' this exceeds the amount given to Mr. Ravenscroft by 40*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.* 'Then I deducted from that the duties upon the building materials, 221*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*'

"Now really it is necessary to direct our attention to this item, for I am bound to see whether the act of parliament has been carried into full effect. I listened to the argument of counsel for Mr. Brown, to endeavor to learn on what principle this deduction was justified. I am aware that under other Church-building Acts, duties were allowed to be remitted; but I am not aware that where a church or chapel has been built under the act, there is authority given by any act of parliament for a remission of any part of the duty. But I should like to know whether the duty has de facto been remitted. For whether it was or was not remitted, it is a matter of serious consideration for the court, considering how the question presses on the party, whether the fact of the duty being remitted and repaid ought not to have been pleaded and proved in order to be made a fit subject for consideration: because, how is it possible for me to decide whether this sum of 221*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* is a legal deduction from 3630*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.* if no statement is made to me of the authority under which the deduction is made, and when it is not averred that there has been any remission at all? I apprehend I am under the necessity of coming to the conclusion that the item of 221*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* forms a part of the original cost of erecting and fitting up this chapel, and that it is

Of the whole sum to Messrs. Bowden, s, in which were in-specified.' Now this terrogatory says, 'I erecting and fitting ion actually cost the v than 3600l.' Now ly as I can into the various items, and to the principles of calculation which this gentleman proceeded on, to see whether, according to any calculation I can make in conformity to the statute, I am able to reduce the amount of the actual cost of erecting and fitting up of the chapel to 3600l.; and I have done so with reference to the statement of this witness, that the cost was only 3225l.

"Mr. Wilberforce, (and it is a fact which is mainly relied upon by Mr. Williams,) in the month of April, 1831, was desirous of disposing of the chapel at Mill Hill to the patron of the parish, on the principle of a simple reimbursement to himself of the cost of the chapel and security for the same; and it appears, from a letter from the secretary to the church commissioners, to the address of Mr. Williams, that a statement had been made by Mr. Wilberforce of the cost of the chapel, which statement is annexed to the letter, and is to the following effect: 'Cost of Mr. Wilberforce's chapel, at Mill Hill, as nearly as can just now be ascertained. Account of Messrs. Bowden, the contractor, (it is doubtful whether or not 90l. of this amount still remains to be paid,) 3080l. 2s. 3d. Clerk additional. It is expected there will be a repayment of the amount of duties paid on bricks to the amount perhaps of 100l.; but these particulars may be supplied hereafter, if the general negotiation proceeds.' Now I have not the least information before me of a date subsequent to that of this paper, as to whether any of these anticipated payments were made, or whether or not Mr. Wilberforce calculated upon the items stated here; and I cannot but think that it was incumbent on the party whose duty it was to make it appear that 3600l. was the whole amount of the cost of erecting and fitting up this chapel, to show that the sum actually paid by Mr. Wilberforce on account of the chapel did not exceed that sum; or, at least, to show what was paid, and why some of the items should be considered as extras, and not to be included. I am also without any evidence as to what Mr. Wilberforce meant by other payments to the amount of 350l. or 400l., and even 500l. more. Looking to the items in this statement, as they are before me, they amount to 4176l. Which of these items, consistently with the act of parliament, should I be justified in rejecting? 'Clerk of the works and other incidental expenses.' The words of the statute are, 'the original cost of erecting and fitting up.' I can only understand, unless the word 'cost' has received by law some different interpretation, that its meaning is, the actual cost incurred by the individual for erecting and fitting up the chapel; and I am of opinion that one of these expenses must be that of the clerk of the works. But if I entertaind any doubts upon this point, what am I to say to 'other incidental expenses'? What other expenses? And how are they to be excluded from the calculation? Then there is 'Architect, &c., 170l.' I am at a loss to understand why that should be excluded, or that for the hot-air stove. The window-guard, being ornamental, might perhaps be excluded. But it appears to me that, if it be contended that any of these items are not fairly included in the calculation, the party is bound to point out what items, and on what principle they are to be excluded. I confess that the only attempt which has been made to do so, has been wholly unsatisfactory to my mind, although I acknowledge I have the strongest predisposition to come to an opposite conclusion, if the law would allow me. Because, when I see what has been the extent of the expenditure by Mr. Wilberforce, and the great advantage to the public which has been afforded by the erection of this chapel, in the parish of Hendon, I feel disposed, to the utmost extent to which the law allowed me, to sustain the right of nomination. But I am bound to put the real construction upon the act of parliament, whatever may be the consequences to the party; for I am aware of nothing more injurious than to attempt to fit the limits of an act of parliament to the circumstances of a particular case. I am compelled, therefore, to conclude, that the act of

STAT. 1 & 2 amend and render more effectual two Acts passed in the fifty-eighth and fifty-ninth years of His late Majesty, for building and promoting the building of additional Churches in populous Parishes;’ and whereas another act was passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Fourth, intituled, ‘An Act to make further Provision, and to amend and render more effectual three Acts, passed in the fifty-eighth and fifty-ninth years of His late Majesty and in the third year of His present Majesty, for building and promoting the building of additional Churches in populous Parishes;’ and whereas another act was passed in the seventh and eighth years of the reign of his late majesty, intituled, ‘An Act to amend the Acts for building and promoting the building of additional Churches in populous Parishes;’ and whereas by the said recited act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late majesty it was amongst other things enacted, that with a view to afford facility to the erection of churches and chapels it should be lawful

parliament has not been complied with, according to the terms of it.

“Then what are the effects? The act of parliament goes on to say: ‘It shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese in which such parish or extra-parochial place is locally situate, if he shall see fit, and he is hereby authorised, to declare by writing under his hand and seal, that the right of nominating a minister to such church or chapel, when so built or purchased, and endowed, as aforesaid, and when the conditions hereinbefore mentioned shall have been performed, shall for ever thereafter be in the person so building, or purchasing, and endowing the same, his, her, or their heirs and assigns.’ Then did the right of nomination vest, or was it forfeited? I apprehend it is as clear as words can express it, that the performance of the conditions is a condition precedent to the vesting of the right of nomination.

“In this view of the case, I am compelled to come to the next step, and to conclude that the right of nomination never vested in Mr. Wilberforce; and if so, it follows that the licence which was granted under a supposition that the right of nomination did so vest, cannot be supported. Now the result which I have assumed leads me directly to the conclusion, according to my view of the case, that Mr. Brown is not at present legally entitled to perform the duty of a clergyman within the limits of the parish of Hendon. Two other objections remain to be disposed of: one is, that the room assigned for free seats is not sufficient. Looking to the whole of the evidence in the case, it appears to me, that this objection could not be sustained. The total dimensions of the chapel are 609 feet, of which 252 feet are assigned to free seats: so that there appears to be sufficient to satisfy the requisites of the act. But an objection has been taken, that part of the free seats are in the gallery, and that the gallery is appropriated to the children of the national school. Now I have looked into all the measurements of the architects, and into the different modes of estimate, and I think I may take it thus: that two children occupy the room of one grown person. I am of opinion with reference to this mode, that sufficient room for free seats has been set apart in the chapel; and I am very clearly of opinion, that it is a sufficient fulfilment of the act of parliament, to set apart a space which shall include the accommodation for children; for I can never go the length of saying, that under this act of parliament, the whole of the accommodation as free seats must be for adult persons. The children of the poor are as much entitled as grown-up persons to have accommodation for attending divine service, and I consider this objection not supported. The court has then only to consider the remaining objection as to the mode in which the nomination was made. I am of opinion, that I am not called upon to consider that question. I think if the right of nomination had vested in Mr. Wilberforce, it would not have been necessary for me to consider, whether the form of the nomination had been precisely consistent with regularity or not. This is not the substantial question before the court.

“Looking at all the circumstances of the case, I am compelled to come to the conclusion, that as far as I am enabled to form a judgment of the true construction of the act of parliament, and of the evidence, the provisions of the act have not been complied with; that a compliance with the provisions of the act is a condition precedent to the vesting of the right of nomination; and the right not having vested, the licence granted under a supposition that the right had vested, cannot be supported.

“I wish it to be distinctly understood, that I impute no blame to any of the parties whatever. I have no doubt of the bona fides, and of the intention of all to fulfil the terms of the act of parliament; but I must say that it is most unfortunate, that where the conditions of an act of parliament are so clear and explicit, and where a reference to the act of parliament might have enabled the individuals to have understood its directions and conditions, and to have complied with them literally, instead of that, reference was made not to the architect of the chapel, but to another individual who could give no information to the other party, who had no knowledge of the circumstances; and that a computation should have been made, not with reference to the actual cost of the building and fitting up of the chapel, the only criterion prescribed by the act of parliament. On these grounds I am under the necessity of coming to the conclusion, that the articles have been proved. It is clear that this is a case in which I should not think of giving costs on either side.”

for certain persons building or purchasing the same, and endowing them with pew rents, to nominate for forty years spiritual persons to serve such churches or chapels respectively, subject to the consent of the bishop of the diocese, and to certain regulations therein provided; and whereas by the said recited act passed in the seventh and eighth years of the reign of his late majesty farther encouragement was given to the same object by authorizing his majesty's commissioners for building new churches to declare that any person or persons building a chapel, and endowing the same to the satisfaction of the said commissioners, with some permanent provision in land or monies in the funds, should have the perpetual right of nominating the minister to serve the same; and whereas the said provisions of the said last-recited act have been found insufficient for such their purposes, and require amendment, in order to provide more effectually for the improved pastoral superintendence of his majesty's subjects; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that so much of the said recited act passed in the seventh and eighth years of the reign of his late majesty as authorizes the said commissioners to declare, in the cases therein provided, the right of nominating the spiritual persons to serve the chapels therein named respectively to be in the person or persons building and endowing the same, his, her, or their heirs and assigns or appointees, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

to be built by such person or persons, with some permanent provision in land, in money charged upon land, or money in the funds, exclusively of and in addition to the pew rents or profits arising from the said church or chapel, in case any such rents should be taken, and also of providing a sufficient fund for the repairs of the said church or chapel, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, if under all the circumstances it shall appear them fit and proper so to do, to declare, that after certain conditions hereinafter mentioned are performed or shall have been already satisfied, the right of nominating a minister to such church or chapel shall for ever thereafter be in the person or persons building and endowing or having built and endowed the same, his, her, their heirs and assigns, or in such person or persons, ecclesiastical person or body corporate, and his or their successors, as he, she, or they shall appoint; and in case such church or chapel shall have been or shall be built by subscription, then such person or persons, their heirs or assigns, or in such ecclesiastical person or body corporate, and his and their successors, as the major part in value of such subscribers shall, at the time of the application to the commissioners, nominate and appoint: provided always, that the patronage of any such church or chapel shall no time be vested in or held in trust for more than five persons, except in case where the said commissioners shall have already sanctioned a larger number of trustees, or such patronage shall pass by descent to coparceners, or by the custom of gavelkind to more than five, or shall be conveyed by will or deed to more than five children, grandchildren, nephews, or nieces of the grantor or deviser.

“VI. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that previous to such declaration of the right of nomination as aforesaid being made by the said commissioners, application in writing shall be made to the said commissioners, setting forth the population of the parish in which such church or chapel is built or proposed to be built, together with the accommodation provided in the several churches or chapels built or building or intended to be built within such parish together with the population of the district for which such church or chapel is intended to provide, and the accommodation proposed to be provided in such church or chapel, and its distance from the existing churches or chapels in such parish; and that copies of such application shall, in every such case, be sent to the said commissioners to the patron and incumbent respectively of the parish, chapel, township, or extra-parochial place in which such church or chapel is built or intended to be built, in order to afford such patron and incumbent an opportunity of laying before the said commissioners any statement relating thereto, and the said commissioners shall not declare, or signify their intention of declaring such right of nomination as aforesaid, until after the expiration of three calendar months from the time when they shall have sent such copies to such patron and incumbent respectively, except in those cases where the said commissioners shall before the passing of this act have already expressed their satisfaction with the endowments proposed, and their willingness to accede to the conditions proposed, and such church or chapel shall have been built or be now building in pursuance thereof.

she, or they shall also comply with and perform all and singular the conditions hereinbefore mentioned, then and in such case such patron or patrons shall be preferred to any other person or persons so intending to build or purchase such additional church or chapel as aforesaid: provided always, that no declaration of the right of nominating a minister to any church or chapel built and endowed under the provisions of this act shall in any case take effect until such church or chapel shall have been duly consecrated: provided always, that in case any such church or chapel has been or shall hereafter be built or endowed by subscription, the application to the bishop or commissioners of the major part in value of the subscribers shall be deemed and taken to be the application of the party building or endowing the same: provided always, that the churches or chapels already built and completed on the faith of the said recited act of the seventh and eighth years of the reign of King George the Fourth be excepted as to the two months' notice, such notice having already been given to his majesty's said board of commissioners and incumbents when such churches or chapels were built.

"VIII. And be it further enacted, that where there is a population of not less than one thousand persons in any parish, district parish, district chapelry, or extra-parochial place within two miles from an existing church, if there be any person or persons who shall be desirous of enlarging the church accommodation therein, and who shall, with the consent of the select vestry or persons exercising the powers of vestry in such parish, signify such their intention to the bishop of the diocese, or to the said commissioners, as the case may be, and shall also bind themselves in a bond or other sufficient security to the said bishop, or to the said commissioners, as the case may be, that they will within two years from the date of declaring such their intention as aforesaid enlarge the existing church so as to add one fourth to its then existing church accommodation, so that more than one third of the parishioners shall be accommodated, then and in all such cases such persons, having complied with such conditions as aforesaid, shall be preferred to any person or persons proposing to build and endow any new chapel in such parish or extra-parochial place under the provisions of this act: provided always, that plans for the enlargement of such existing church shall in all cases be prepared, and before the commencement of such enlargement shall be laid before the bishop of the diocese, or the said commissioners, as the case may be, for his or their approbation thereof; and that a certificate from an architect employed therein, as to the due execution of such plans, shall in every case be sent to the said bishop, or to the said commissioners, as the case may be, on the completion of the enlargement of such church.

"IX. And be it further enacted, that as soon as conveniently may be after any such church or chapel as aforesaid shall have been so built or purchased and endowed as aforesaid, and completely furnished and fitted up for the performance of divine service, and the other conditions hereinbefore mentioned shall have been performed, and the said church or chapel shall have been consecrated, the right of nominating a minister to the same, and also the land, ground, and site whereon the same shall be built, with the cemetery thereto belonging, if any, which land, ground, and site shall be specified and described in the sentence of consecration of the church or chapel, shall be and are hereby declared to be for ever vested in the person or persons building or purchasing and endowing the said church or chapel, his, her, or their heirs and assigns, or in such trustee or trustees, or ecclesiastical person or body corporate, as are hereinbefore mentioned, by such name and style as shall be specified in the sentence of consecration of the church or chapel; and such right of nomination shall and may be exercised without requiring the consent of the patron or incumbent of the parish or district in which such chapel shall be built, and notwithstanding no compensation shall have been made to them or either of them, without prejudice however to the fees hereinafter mentioned; and such right of nomination, when vested in more than two persons, shall in all cases be exercised by the majority; and the person or persons in whom the said right of nomination, and the said land, ground, and site, shall be so vested, shall in every such case have perpetual succession in the name and style specified in the sentence of consecration, and shall hold the said right of nomination, and also the said lands, grounds, and sites so vested in them, as bodies corporate, by such name and without incurring or being subjected to any of the penalties or forfeitures Statute of Mortmain, or of any other law or statute whatsoever, to the use, and purpose that every such church or chapel, with the cemetery to the same, shall, when consecrated, be for ever thereafter set apart and dedicated to the service of Almighty God, as a place of divine worship according to the liturgical usages of the united church of England and Ireland as by law established.

"X. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, in all such cases as shall come before them, as bishop of the diocese alone in all such other cases as are hereinbefore mentioned and also with the consent of the patron and incumbent in all other cases in which additional churches or chapels shall have been already built and endowed, to assign a particular district to every such church or chapel, and in special circumstances they shall deem fit, each such district shall be under the immediate jurisdiction of a clergyman duly licensed to serve such church or chapel, and to perform the duties of the sick and other pastoral duties, and other purposes whatsoever: provided always that the said commissioners, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, before the said commissioners, and for the purpose to determine whether baptisms, churchwardens, or other officers formed in any such church or chapel, or in any such district, or respectively, as the case may be, shall be respectively assigned by them to such church or chapel, or to the district of the bishop of the diocese, and shall cause their order and direction in writing, as to all offices to be performed in such church or chapel, to be registered in the registry of the diocese.

"XI. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in cases where the district provided for any church or chapel erected or to be erected shall extend into more than one parish, all the conditions hereby directed to be complied with as observed with respect to the patrons and incumbents of each parish any of which shall be comprised in such district, and the patron or patrons, incumbent or incumbents, of each such parish, shall be entitled to such and the same rights and such and the same rights and privileges, as if such district were solely comprised in one only of such parishes.

"XII. And be it further enacted, that every such church or chapel to which a particular district has been assigned as aforesaid shall be deemed a parsonage, and shall be considered in law as a benefice presentative, so far only as the licence thereto shall operate in the same manner as institution to any benefice, and shall render voidable other livings in like manner as institution to any such benefice; and the spiritual person serving the same shall be deemed incumbent thereof; and such incumbents shall have perpetual succession, and be and are hereby declared to be bodies politic and corporate, and may receive and take such endowments in lands or tithes, or both, or any such augmentation shall be granted to them or their successors; and all such incumbents, and persons presenting or appointing any such incumbents, shall respectively be subject to all jurisdictions and laws, ecclesiastical or common, and to all provisions, regulations, penalties, and forfeitures contained in any acts of parliament in force at the time of the passing of this act respectively; and in case of any failure or neglect in not presenting or appointing any such incumbent for the space of six months, such presentative appointment shall thereupon lapse, as in cases of actual benefices; and all churches or chapels built or appropriated under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the bishop of the diocese and the archdeacon of the archdeaconry within which the same shall be locally situated.

"XIII. And be it further enacted, that no such church or chapel to which a particular district has been assigned as aforesaid shall be tenable or holden by any person other than the original church of the parish, chapelry, or place in which such church or chapel has been built, or with any other benefice having cure of souls: provided that that no person holding any benefice shall be exempt from residence upon such benefice in respect of any duty which he may perform in any such church or chapel to which no district shall have been assigned as aforesaid.

"XIV. And be it further enacted, that where the said commissioners or bishop of the diocese respectively, as the case may be, shall have determined that baptisms, churchings, or burials shall be solemnized or performed in any such churches or chapels, all acts of parliament, laws, and customs relating to the performance of such offices of the church shall apply to such churches or chapels as to the performance of such offices respectively: provided always, that all fees, dues, offerings, and other emoluments, which of right or custom belong to the incumbent or clerk of any parish, chapelry, or place in which such church or chapel shall have been or shall be erected, shall be received by or for and on account of such incumbent and clerk respectively, and be paid over to them, anything in the said recited acts contained to the contrary notwithstanding, except such portion of the said fees, dues, offerings, or other emoluments as the said commissioners, with the consents of the bishop of the diocese, the patron, and the said incumbent respectively, in those cases which shall come before the said commissioners, by order under their common seal, or the bishop of the diocese alone, with the consent of the patron and incumbent, in all such other cases as hereinbefore mentioned, by order under his hand and seal, shall assign to the minister of such church or chapel; and every such instrument of assignment shall be registered in the registry of the bishop of the diocese within which such church or chapel shall be locally situated.

"XV. Provided always, that where the patronage of any living or benefice of any parish, chapelry, or place as aforesaid shall be in the crown, and such living or benefice shall be above the yearly value of twenty pounds in the king's books, a copy of the application made to the said commissioners as aforesaid shall in every such case be sent to the lord high treasurer or first lord commissioner of the treasury for the time being, instead of being sent to the patron of such living or benefice, as hereinbefore directed; and that if such living or benefice shall not exceed the value of twenty pounds yearly in the king's books, a copy of the application as aforesaid shall in every such case be sent to the lord high chancellor, lord keeper or commissioners of the great seal, for the time being; and that if such living or benefice shall be within the patronage of the crown in right of the duchy of Lancaster, then and in every such case a copy of the application as aforesaid shall be sent to the chancellor of the duchy for the time being, instead of being sent to the patron of such living or benefice, as hereinbefore directed; and the sending a copy of such application to the said party or parties, as the circumstances may be, shall be as effectual for the purposes of this act in all such cases, as if the same had been sent to the patron of such living or benefice: provided also, that in all cases respecting the building, endowment, or disposition of the patronage of any church or chapel heretofore built or hereafter to be built, where the patronage of the living or benefice in which such church or chapel is or shall be situate is in the crown, it shall and may be lawful for the lord high treasurer or first lord commissioner of the treasury for the time being (if such living or benefice shall exceed the value of twenty pounds yearly in the king's books), and for the lord high chancellor, lord keeper or commissioner of the great seal for the time being (if such living or benefice shall not exceed the value of twenty pounds yearly in the king's books), to give such consent by any instrument under his or their hand and seal or hands and seals, on behalf of the crown, and such consent shall be as binding and effectual to all intents and purposes as if given by the crown itself.

"XVI. And be it further enacted, that two fit and proper persons shall be appointed to act as churchwardens for every church or chapel built or appropriated under the provisions of this act, at the usual period of appointing parish officers in every year, and shall be chosen, one by the incumbent of the church or chapel for the time being, and the other by the renters of pews in such church or chapel: and the two persons, when so elected churchwardens, shall appear, and be admitted and sworn according to law, and shall collect and receive the rents of the seats and pews, and pay over the residue thereof which shall remain after the annual reser-ation aforesaid for repairs, and after paying the salary of the clerk, beadle, organist, and other expenses incident to the performance of divine service, the minister of the said church or chapel, to be taken by the said minister to his own use by way of stipend, in addition to the yearly interest or dividend which shall arise from the landed or funded endowment hereinbefore mentioned, and the said churchwardens shall also do, perform, and execute all lawfully required and requisite for and concerning the repairs, and the good order and decency of behaviour to be kept and observed in the church or chapel; and the persons so to be appointed shall continue in their said office until others be appointed in their stead; and all the persons so chosen churchwardens shall be empowered, in case of nonpayment of the rents or tithes of the church or chapel for which they shall be appointed, to sue for and recover the same by action or otherwise; and the said churchwardens shall have full power to do all such things as the case shall or may require, without specifying the same in writ or petition; and no such action shall be brought or commenced against any such churchwarden while he is acting in the discharge of his duty, or going out of office of any such churchwarden.

"XVII. And be it further enacted, that from and after the expiration of five years after the transfer or conveyance of any messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments to any person or persons, as a site for any church or chapel, or any church or chapel yard or cemetery, under the provisions of this act, the said messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments shall become and remain absolutely vested in the person or persons to whom the same are conveyed, his, her, or their heirs and assigns; provided that any person to whom any such messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments shall have been conveyed for the purposes of this act shall, within two months after any judgment in ejectment shall have been obtained against him for such messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments, tender or pay to the lessor of the plaintiff in such ejectment the costs on such ejectment, and such sum of money as a jury shall in the said judgment find to have been the value of the said messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments, at the time when such messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments were conveyed for the purposes of this act.

"XVIII. And be it further enacted, that the jury who shall try any ejectment brought for the recovery of any messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments which have been conveyed for the purposes of this act, or if judgment shall have been obtained by default, or for not confessing lease, answer, or payment, a jury under a writ of inquiry (which writ of inquiry the court in such action shall be brought is hereby empowered to issue) shall ascertain the value of such messuages, lands, grounds, tenements, or hereditaments at the time when they were conveyed for the purposes of this act; and the value so ascertained shall be indorsed by the judge who tried the ejectment on the postea, or returned to the court by the sheriff or under sheriff or other person before any writ of inquiry shall be executed under this act, in the same manner as inquests are returned on writs of inquiry.

"XIX. And be it further enacted, that the common seal of the said commissioners shall be affixed to every instrument declaring the right of nominating a minister to any church or chapel, in all such cases as shall come before the said commissioners; and that every instrument shall be registered in the registry of the diocese within which such church or chapel shall be locally situated.

"XX. And be it further enacted, that where any deed or deeds shall be made before the passing of this act with the seal of the said commissioners, for the purpose of declaring the right of nominating a minister to any church or chapel, or of endowing to the satisfaction of the said commissioners, every such deed or deeds shall be deemed to have been lawfully built, and every such deed shall be deemed to be valid for the purpose of declaring and vesting the right of nominating a minister to such chapel, and for effectuating the other objects of the said deed.

"An Act to extend the Provisions of an Act passed in the twenty-ninth year of the Reign of His Majesty King Charles the Second(2), intituled, An Act for confirming and perpetuating Augmentations made by Ecclesiastical Persons to small Vicarages and Curacies; and for other Purposes."

"Whereas by an act passed in the twenty-ninth year of the reign of his late majesty King Charles the Second, intituled, 'An Act for confirming and perpetuating Augmentations made by Ecclesiastical Persons to small Vicarages and Curacies,' it was amongst other things enacted, that all and every augmentation, of what nature soever, granted, reserved, or agreed to be made payable, or intended to be granted, reserved, or made payable, since the first day of June in the twelfth year of his said majesty's reign, or which should at any time thereafter be granted, reserved, or made payable to any vicar or curate, or reserved by way of increase of rent to the lessors, but intended to be to or for the use or benefit of any vicar or curate, by any archbishop, bishop, dean, provost, dean and chapter, archdeacon, prebendary, or other ecclesiastical corporation, person or persons whatsoever, so making the said reservation out of any rectory impropriate or portion of tithes belonging to any archbishop, bishop, dean, provost, dean and chapter, or other ecclesiastical corporation, person or persons, should be deemed and adjudged to continue, and be and should for ever thereafter continue and remain, as well during the continuance of the estate or term upon which the said augmentations were granted, reserved, or agreed to be made payable, as afterwards, in whose hands soever the said rectories or portions of tithes should be or come, which rectories or portions of tithes should be chargeable therewith, whether the same should be reserved again or not; and the said vicars and curates respectively were thereby adjudged to be in the actual possession thereof for the use of themselves and their successors, and the same should for ever thereafter be taken, received, and enjoyed by the said vicars and curates, and their successors, as well during the continuance of the term or estate upon which the said augmentations were granted, reserved, or agreed to be made payable, as afterwards; and the said vicars and curates should have remedy for the same, either by distress upon the rectories impropriate or portions of tithes charged therewith, or by action of debt against that person who ought to have paid the same, his executors or administrators, any disability in the person or persons, bodies politic or corporate so granting, or any disability or incaor curates to whom or to or for whose use or benefit the same should be granted, the statute of mortmain, or any other law, matter or thing whatsoever, to the contrary notwithstanding; that no future augmentation should be confirmed by virtue of the said recited act, which should exceed one moiety of the clear yearly value above all reprises appropriate out of which the same should be granted or reserved; also enacted, that if any question should thereafter arise concerning such grants, or any other matter or thing in that act mentioned, such favourable constructions, and such remedy, if need be, made for the benefit of the vicars and curates as theretofore had or might be had for other charitable uses upon the statutes for which whereas it is expedient that the powers and provisions of the said recited act be amended and enlarged; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and of the commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the said recited provision by which the amount of any augmentation should be limited to one moiety of the clear yearly value above all reprises appropriate out of which the same should be granted, so far as relates to any augmentation which may be granted by virtue of this act, be and the same is hereby repealed.

And whereas doubts may arise by reason of the mention of the portion of the said recited act; be it enacted, that the provisions of the said recited act, in relation to any augmentation to be made out of the tithes, although the portion of tithes; and further, that it shall be lawful, under the authority of the said recited act, to grant, reserve, or make payable any such augmentation to the incumbent of any church or chapel within the parish in which the rectory impropriate shall lie, or in which the tithes or portions thereof shall arise, (as the case may be,) whether such incumbent shall be the incumbent or otherwise; provided also, that no such augmentation shall be granted to any other person whomsoever.

And further enacted, that in every case in which any augmentation should hereafter be granted, reserved, or made payable to the incumbent of any church or chapel, or reserved by way of increase of rent to the lessors, but not for the use or benefit of any incumbent, by the master and fellows of any college, or the master or guardian of any hospital so making the augmentation out of any rectory impropriate, or tithes, or portion of the tithes, or the master and fellows of such college, or the master or guardian of any hospital, all the provisions hereinbefore recited and set forth, except those hereby repealed, shall apply to such case in the same manner as they do apply to the cases hereinbefore recited, (with such alterations therein as the cases would require,) were herein expressly set forth and enacted thereto; provided always, that every such augmentation shall be made to the incumbent of some church or chapel within the parish or place in which the rectory impropriate shall lie, or in which the tithes or portions thereof shall arise (as the case may be).

And further enacted, that in every case in which any augmentation should hereafter be granted, reserved, or made payable to the incumbent of any church or chapel being in the patronage of the grantor or lessors, or be reserved by way of increase of rent to the lessors, but not for the use or benefit of any such incumbent, by the bishop, dean, dean and chapter, archdeacon, prebendary, or corporation, person or persons whatsoever, or the master and fellows of any college, or the master or guardian of any hospital so making the augmentation out of any lands, tenements, or other hereditaments belonging to the bishop, dean, dean and chapter, archdeacon, prebendary, or corporation, person or persons whatsoever, or the master and fellows of any college, or the master or guardian of any hospital, all the provisions hereinbefore recited and set forth (except the provision hereinbefore repealed) shall apply to such case in the same manner as if the same provisions, except as aforesaid, (with such alterations therein as the difference between the cases would require,) were herein expressly set forth and enacted with reference thereto.

"V. Provided also, and be it further enacted and declared, that every augmentation which at any time hereafter shall be granted, reserved, or made payable, either under the power given by the said recited act, or under either of the powers hereinbefore contained, shall be in the form of an annual rent, and that the provisions of the said recited act, and the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall not entitle whatsoever to be made after the passing

acted and declared, that where any such rectory 1 of tithes, or any such lands, tenements or other respectively be subject to any lease on which an e payable to the person or persons or body politic
l be lawful, during the continuance of such lease, e said recited act, or either of the powers hereinsame shall apply,) by granting to the incumbent augmented a part of the rent which shall be so

reserved or made payable as aforesaid, and then and in every such case the same premises shall for ever, as well after the determination of such lease as during the continuance thereof, be chargeable to such incumbent, and his successors, with the augmentation which shall have been so granted to him as aforesaid; and from and after such time as notice of the said grant shall be given to the person or persons entitled in possession under the said lease, and thenceforth during the continuance of the same, such incumbent, and his successors, shall have all the same powers for enforcing payment of such augmentation as the person or persons or body politic by whom the augmentation shall have been granted might have had in that behalf in case no grant of the same had been made; and after the determination of the said lease, the said incumbent, and his successors, shall have such remedy for enforcing payment of such augmentation as aforesaid as is provided by the said recited act with respect to augmentations granted, reserved, or made payable under the authority thereof.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that where any such rectory impropriate, or tithes, or portion of tithes, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments as aforesaid, shall be subject to any lease for any term not exceeding twenty-one years or three lives, or (in the case of such houses as under the provisions of the act passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of her majesty Queen Elizabeth, intituled, 'An Act for Continuation, Explanation, Perfecting, and Enlarging of divers Statutes,' may lawfully be leased for forty years,) not exceeding forty years, on which lease the most improved rent at the time of making the same shall not have been reserved, it shall be lawful at any time during the continuance of such lease to exercise the power given by the said recited act, or either of the powers hereinbefore contained, by granting out of the said premises an augmentation, to take effect in possession after the expiration, surrender, or other determination of such lease, and then and in every such case the said premises shall, from and after the expiration, surrender, or other determination of the said lease, and for ever thereafter, be chargeable with the said augmentation; and the provisions of the said recited act and of this act respectively shall in all respects apply to every augmentation which shall be so granted in the same manner as in other cases of augmentations to be granted under the powers of the said recited act or of this act.

"VIII. And whereas it is apprehended that it may be desirable in many cases to make grants of augmentations in the manner last hereinbefore mentioned, and that such grants would be much discouraged if the augmentation to be granted should necessarily take effect in possession upon a surrender of the lease during which the same had been granted as aforesaid for the purpose of such lease being renewed; be it therefore further enacted, that in any case in which an augmentation shall have been granted to take effect in possession after the expiration, surrender, or other determination of any lease in the manner authorized by the clause

if a renewal of such lease shall take place before the lawful in and by the renewed lease to defer the time when it is to take effect in possession as aforesaid until it is in that behalf; provided always, that the time to be so deferred shall be some time not exceeding one year of such houses as by the said act of her majesty (to be leased for forty years) not exceeding forty years, from the commencement of the lease during which the lease is granted.

And be it further enacted, that where any such augmentation shall become chargeable, under or by virtue of the said act, any rectory impropriate, tithes, portion of tithes, or hereditaments, if any lease shall afterwards be granted of such rectory impropriate, tithes, portion of tithes, or hereditaments separately from the rest thereof, then and in every case to time so often as the same shall happen, it shall be lawful for the persons granting such lease to provide and agree that there shall be paid out of such part of the augmentation charged therewith as shall be comprised in the said lease, and thenceforth during the lease so to be made as part of the said augmentation shall be charged on the said lease than such part of the said augmentation paid out of the same; provided always, that in every case in which shall be leased in severalty as aforesaid shall be a part of the said augmentation as shall be agreed and the remainder of the hereditaments originally comprised in the said augmentation shall be a competent security for the residue of the said augmentation.

And be it further enacted, that if upon the termination of any lease wherein such augmentation is comprised, any new lease of the premises, or any part thereof, shall be granted without express continuance of the said augmentation, the same shall be utterly void; be it further enacted, that the said act in so far as it relates to any augmentation which may be made by the said act, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any archbishop, bishop, archdeacon, prebendary, or other ecclesiastical corporation, or the master and fellows of any college, or the corporation of any hospital, being, in his or their corporate capacity, the owner of any rectory impropriate, or of any tithes, or portion of tithes, or of any place, by a deed duly executed, to annex such rectory impropriate, or portion of tithes as aforesaid, or any lands or tenements, with the appurtenances, unto any church or chapel in which the rectory impropriate shall lie, or in which the tithes shall arise, to the intent and in order that the same shall be held and enjoyed by the incumbent for the time being of such church or chapel, by the incumbent for the time being of such church or chapel, such deed shall be effectual to all intents and purposes notwithstanding.

(1) Nominatè eight rate-payers to be inspectors of votes:—On the nomination of the eight inspectors to act in the election of vestrymen, under Stat. 1 & 2 Gul. 4, c. 60, s. 14, the decision of the chairman, as a show of hands, that one or the other party has a majority, is not conclusive, but he is bound on requisition from either side, to take steps for ascertaining the numbers: and it seems, that the proper course, on such requisition, will be to divide the meeting. Regina v. St. Pancras, Middlesex (Vestrymen of), 11 A. & E. 15. See vide Regina v. St. Mary, Lambeth (Churchwardens of), (3 N. & P. 416), where it was held, that at an election of parish officers, the poll, if demanded upon a show of hands, must be taken of the rate-payers generally: and that the election will be a nullity, if the poll be confined to persons present when the poll is demanded.

The mere existence of party feeling in the chairman is not sufficient ground for impeaching a nomination of inspectors under Stat. 1 & 2 Gal. 4, c. 60; but, if, after improperly refusing to ascertain the numbers voting he has declared certain persons to be the inspectors nominated by the meeting, and the election of vestrymen has thereupon taken place, the court will grant a mandamus for a new election, although a considerable time has elapsed. And if four inspectors have been improperly declared to be nominated by the meeting, such mandamus will be granted, although the other four inspectors were duly nominated by the churchwardens, and officiated at the election. Thus, in Regina v. St. Pancras (Vestrymen of), (11 A. & E. 15.), Lord Denman stated: "This was an application to compel proceeding to a new election of vestrymen, on the ground that the election which took place in May was a nullity, the sense of the meeting in respect of the nomination of inspectors not having been duly taken by the churchwardens who presided there."

"The act 1 & 2 Gul. 4, requires, as preliminary to the election of vestrymen, the nomination of eight inspectors, four by the churchwardens, four by the meeting. On this occasion the churchwardens, having nominated their four, called upon the meeting to nominate four others. Two lists of four were accordingly prepared by the two parties, and, on a shew of hands having been required on both successively, the churchwardens expressed their decision in favour of one set; upon which the friends of the other demanded a division of the voters present, that the numbers appearing on each side might be counted. This course the churchwardens refused to take, though frequently pressed to do so, and declared the election carried by the shew of hands as at first.

"The affidavits in support of the rule went into a vast deal of extraneous matter, not enough connected with our immediate subject to require notice here. Expressions of the more active churchwardens were deposed to, shewing a determination to favour his own party, which were by no means satisfactorily explained away by himself. The defeated party claimed the majority of votes at the meeting; but the other party were in much greater numbers, to their confident belief the other way. In arguing against the rule many propositions were laid down, which appear to us wholly untenable. It was boldly urged, that the decision of a returning officer is binding and conclusive, however partial and unfair, and in whatever degree his partiality and unfairness may have affected the result of the election. What he chooses to declare, (it was said,) must stand, though his misconduct may expose him to punishment. The claim of such a privilege refutes itself. Mere feelings of partiality in a returning officer towards the successful candidate cannot, indeed, be sufficient to vacate the election, conducted fairly and with regularity. But, if proper means are taken for challenging an election good in form, but reasonably suspected to be the result of maneuvering practised by persons in authority, for selfish or party purposes, we cannot be bound by a result so brought about, and cannot refuse to put the facts into a course of inquiry: and the temporary inconvenience, though much to be lamented, that may be produced

sible. The business of nominating inspectors is apparently intended to be begun and finished at that meeting, some reasonable precaution being taken that none but rate-payers are present; and the election of vestrymen is to follow without more delay: if the shew of hands and poll were the method, the preliminary process itself might be indefinitely prolonged; for the common-law right on that subject, is generally understood to be, that any voter, however satisfied with the correctness of the declaration on the shew of hands, yet may appeal from it to the whole body of electors, (Campbell (Clerk) v. Mound, 5 A. & E. 865; Regina v. St. Mary, Lambeth (The Rector of), 8 Ibid. 356,) and keep a poll open till all have had the opportunity of attending to record their suffrages. Now, if the churchwardens were bound to declare the nomination of the four inspectors as made by that meeting, they had no other means of coming to a just conclusion, than by dividing and counting those present, as they were required to do, supposing any doubt to exist on which side the majority appeared.

"But we do not deem it absolutely necessary for our present decision to lay down any rule on the fourteenth section. For, whether that construction prevail, or the more ordinary method be adopted, the shew of hands ought to be fairly taken. Was it so taken? A strong doubt was expressed at the time whether the churchwardens had not made an erroneous report of the numbers on each side: it is even now sworn, by several who were present, that the majority was the other way; nothing could be more reasonable than the demand, that the numbers should divide and be counted. If this had been done with closed doors, certainty would have been obtained in a few minutes. But the churchwardens took upon themselves to declare the respective numbers in favour of that party to which they avowedly belong, at the very moment when they refused to ascertain the truth. The affidavits now produced by them and many others, of their belief respecting this doubtful matter, do not meet the just complaint that they might have spoken with perfect knowledge; and that belief is, indeed, founded on remarks and reasonings which are detailed, and are very far from being conclusive.

"These considerations have brought us to the opinion, that the mandamus ought to issue." Vide Rex v. Birmingham (Rector & Churchwardens of), 7 Ibid. 254.

no more for the auditors to be chosen in the said parish.

And it is enacted, that the inspectors of votes shall deposit the same, after having duly opened the same, in two separate sets of ballots for the vestry lists, and another for the auditors' lists; and the glasses or boxes shall be closed at the time fixed, that is, at four of the clock of the afternoon of vacancies. And it is enacted, that if an equality of votes should appear in any case, the inspectors shall decide by lot upon the persons to be chosen.

And it is enacted, that if any person do forge or in any way falsify any paper or list purporting to contain the vote or list of persons to be chosen for vestrymen or auditors, or do by any means prevent the purposes of such mode of election, upon information laid, and conviction before any justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the parish so adopting the same, he shall be liable to a penalty of not less than ten and not more than fifty pounds,

And be it further enacted, that the aforesaid inspectors shall, immediately after they shall have decided upon whom the aforesaid elections have fallen, deliver to the churchwardens, or to one of them, serving for the parish so adopting this act, a list of the persons chosen by the parishioners to act as vestrymen and auditors of accounts; and the said list, or a copy thereof, shall be affixed to the doors of the churches and chapels or other places chosen for the purposes of public notice in the said parish.

"XXI. And be it further enacted, that if any inspector as aforesaid shall wilfully make or cause to be made an incorrect return of the said votes, every such offender shall, upon information laid by any person before two or more justices of the peace having jurisdiction in the said parish, and upon conviction for such offence, be liable to a penalty of not less than twenty-five pounds and not exceeding fifty pounds.

"XXII. And be it further enacted, that in all parishes adopting this act the meeting of parishioners for the election of the vestrymen and auditors of accounts by the parishioners shall take place in the month of May in every year; provided always, that when a ballot is demanded at such election the same shall commence on the following day, and continue for three successive days, commencing at eight of the clock of the forenoon and closing at four of the clock in the afternoon on each day; provided also, that the day on which such election shall commence shall in the first instance be appointed by the churchwardens of the parishes adopting this act, but in every subsequent year shall be appointed by the vestry; provided always, that when by reason of the populousness of any parish the said parish shall have been or shall be divided into districts for ecclesiastical or other purposes, the twenty-fourth section, three constructions of the clause in question present themselves. The first is that proposed by Sir James Scarlett. He argues that 'vestry' means the corporate body; and that one third of the total corporate body is to be taken out at the first election, and that the vacancies which had occurred are to make a part of this third, so that the number to be taken away by lot would be only twenty-six. I think it is im-possible to support this construction. It is clear that one third was to retire by lot; that cannot be made up of persons who have died, or resigned, before the election. The second construction is, that one third of the total corporate body should be lotted off, without taking notice of existing vacancies; that is, in the present case, that forty should be lotted off, independently of vacancies before created. This construction appears to me equally unreasonable with the first. Suppose the original body to have been reduced by vacancies as low as forty; then, if forty had retired, none of the original vestry would have been left after the first election; and the statute gives no power for filling up the number, except by the election of the forty new vestrymen. The third and only remain-ing construction must therefore be adapted; that is, that the fraction to be lotted off is to be estimated upon the number of then exist-ing vestrymen. This is what has been actu-ally done. With respect to the method of taking the poll, it is said that the four dis-tricts of this parish satisfy the words 'divided for other purposes.' But it is sufficiently explained in the affidavits, that this is merely elect a number of vestrymen equal to one third of the vestry to be chosen according to the provisions of this act; and that on the next ensuing annual election for vestrymen one half, or as nearly as may be one half, of the remaining part of the first aforesaid vestry shall retire from office, (such portion to be determined by lot,) and the parishioners duly qualified shall again elect a number of vestrymen equal to one third of the vestry, to be chosen according to the provisions of this act (1); and that on the next, that is to say, the third annual election for vestrymen, the last remaining portion of the vestry as aforesaid shall retire from office, and the parishioners duly qualified shall elect vestrymen in like manner and number as at the two preceding elections, so as to fill up the vestry to the exact number of vestrymen prescribed by this act.

“XXV. And be it further enacted, that at every subsequent annual election those vestrymen who have been three years in office shall go out of office, and the parishioners shall elect, according to the provisions of this act, other vestrymen, to the number of one third of the total number of which such vestry shall consist, as also fill up any vacancies which may have occurred from death or other causes; provided always, that any or all of the vestrymen so going out by rotation may be immediately eligible for re-election.

“XXVI. And be it further enacted, that the vestry elected under this act in any parish not within the metropolitan police district of the city of London shall a division which has been made for the convenience of the collectors, and that it may be varied at any time. It is also said, that a division has been made by the annexation of a part, for ecclesiastical purposes, to the adjoining parish. But that is not a division 'into districts;' it is only a subtraction of a part from the rest of the parish. Another ground of objection was the alleged want of qualification of some of the vestrymen, under the twenty-sixth section. I have no doubt of the construction which we ought to give to this section. It is not impossible that the framers of the clause may have had a different construction in view, in the several cases of parishes without and parishes within the metropolitan police district. He may have meant that, in the former case, the rating might be on the land, and in the latter on the house only. But the rule for construing a statute is, to collect the meaning from its grammatical construction, unless that leads to an incongruity. Now, by the words of this section, it is sufficient if the householder be rated in any way; it is not necessary that he should be rated in respect of the subject of his occupation. As to this, the provision is the same for parishes in the country or in find no express provision that the rate shall be in respect of the property occupied; and I cannot infer such an intention. Certainly the clause is inaccurately expressed. But, supposing some of the vestrymen to be improperly elected, from want of qualification, it is clearly my opinion that there would still be no ground for issuing this mandamus. The election would be void so far only; there would have been elected less than forty, by the number not duly qualified. The mandamus should, therefore, direct the supplying this number only; and this disposes of so much of the objection as relates to the persons who have become qualified only since the election. I think these persons were not duly elected; but that does not make the whole proceeding void: such a construction would entail most serious consequences upon corporations. Supposing one of a common council were illegally elected, it would be monstrous to say that all elected at the same time were badly elected. The objection respecting the oath is disposed of by the fact, that the oath is no longer applicable. It was imposed to secure the existence of a particular qualification in the persons acting; the qualification is now changed, and the evidence of it is different. I am therefore clearly of opinion, that this mandamus ought not to issue, and that the rule should be discharged." Res v. St. Pancras, Middlesex (Churchwardens, &c) 1 A. & E. 80.

(1) Chosen according to the provisions of this act:—Where a parish adopting the act had previously been divided into four districts, for the more conveniently collecting the rates, and this division had been adopted for taking the poll in the election of members of parliament; a small part also of the parish was annexed to a part of an adjoining parish, and separated from the original parish, for ecclesiastical purposes: it was held, that the election of vestrymen and auditors might be made in one place of the parish only. Ibid.

Lambeth (Churchwardens of), T. T. 1832. in which a rule nisi had been obtained for a mandamus to elect churchwardens, &c., on the ground, that on the occasion when the persons then acting were supposed to have been elected, the rector, who was in the chair, had, upon a poll being claimed, adjourned the meeting for that purpose from the school-house (where it was holden by appointment) to the church, of his own authority, and that he had postponed the poll till some other business, which he considered necessary, had been disposed of. The poll was gone into on the same day, and continued on subsequent ones, at the church. No previous notice had been given of such adjournment. The affidavits were numerous, and went into much detail. The statements in opposition to the rule tended to show, that the poll could not have been properly, if at all, taken in the school-house, from the nature of the place, and the numbers and tumultuous state of the meeting; and the rule was also opposed on other grounds, independent of the discretionary power of the chairman to adjourn; viz., a former practice of electing at the church, and an alleged acquiescence, on the present occasion, by the parties now complaining. Stoughton v. Reynolds, (2 Str. 1046,) was cited in support of the rule, upon which Mr. Justice Parker observed, that in that case the adjournment was to a subsequent day, and asked if the poll could not have been adjourned from one room into another? The court considering the question too important to further consideration, and it was brought on being term, it was proposed, parties, that the judgment rely in the vacation, and at the last day of term. The court, ordered that the rule be granted, but it was understood that the rule was not to be granted.

Saviour's, Southwark, (1 Ibid. 390,) Lord

Dennis delivered the judgment of the court in the following language: "A rule was obtained in the Bail court, in Hilary term, to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, directing the churchwardens of the parish of St. Saviour's, Southwark, to assemble the parishioners of the said parish, for the purpose of taking the poll upon a motion put to the vote by a shew of hands at the general or vestry meeting of the inhabitants of the said parish, holden on the 21st of January last, viz., that the resolutions of the general or vestry meeting of the inhabitants of the said parish, holden on the 7th of January then instant, as to the monuments to be erected to the memory of certain persons, might be confirmed. These persons had bequeathed property to be applied to particular objects of charity in the parish. At a vestry meeting, holden on the 7th of January last, a resolution was proposed and carried, that a tablet or monument should be erected to record the bequests of the donors, to be paid for out of the funds issuing from the bequests. On the 21st of January another vestry meeting was held, at which the resolution of the last meeting was confirmed upon a shew of hands. A poll was demanded by the opponents of the resolution; but the churchwarden, who presided at the meeting, refused to grant it. Then the present rule was obtained. It was objected, that such an application of the funds would be a breach of trust, and that the court ought not to grant a mandamus for the purpose of putting it to the vote, whether such a breach of trust should be committed. We are of opinion that a mandamus cannot be granted, and for the reason suggested. It may be said, that the object in demanding the poll was to set aside the illegal resolution which had been passed by the shew of hands; but we cannot assume that the result of the poll would be to rescind the resolution. If the result were the other way, it would be said that the poll was taken under the authority of a mandamus from this court."

cited that the auditors "duly appointed and acting under and by virtue of an act," &c., "in exercise of the powers given to them by the said act," had summoned the parties to account: it was held, that, in a mandamus for this purpose, it was not necessary to state more fully the adoption of the act by the parish, and the due appointment of the auditors.

The statute enacts that the auditors "shall meet twice at least in each year, at the board room of the vestry, and (a majority of the said auditors being present at such meetings,) shall audit the accounts of such vestry; and the vestry are required, "at every such meeting," to produce a true account in writing, &c. And the auditors are to have the same power of examining the accounts of certain other boards, and are to audit them in the same manner. A mandamus issued, calling upon a board to attend with, and produce to the auditors, their accounts, at such time and place, or at such times and places, as a majority of the auditors might appoint, and then and there give such information as to the accounts as they might be enabled to give, according to the directions of the act.

On return to such mandamus, and conclusions obtained on the part of the crown: it was held, that the mandamus exceeded the authority given by the act; and that the court could not in part enforce it, by a peremptory mandamus limited as to the place of meeting. And the court quashed the mandamus: Lord Denman observing, "It is quite clear that we cannot grant a peremptory mandamus calling on these parties to do what they are not obliged to do by law. The mandamus requires the trustees to do a particular act, that is, to attend with, and produce to the auditors, their accounts, in any place and at any time that a majority of the auditors may think fit to appoint. The auditors had no power to make such a requisition. It may be that the power, if exercised, would not be abused, but we cannot call upon these parties to obey a demand made in terms which are contrary to the restriction of the statute. It is said that the generality of the demand is qualified by the words, "according to the directions of the said act;" but it cannot be so qualified by an expression which would require the parties to whom the writ is directed to look into an act of parliament. It is contended, that the requisition of the writ may be partly good and partly bad, and that the valid part may be enforced; and it is true that, in Res v. Leicester (The Justices of), (4 B. & C. 891,) on a motion being made for a mandamus, requiring more than the court thought fit to be demanded, a rule was granted in less comprehensive terms, adopting that part of the motion which the court thought good. But here the thing which we are required to enforce is irregular. The court said there, that they would mould the rule so as to meet the justice of the case. But here it is not a rule, but the writ itself, that is before us. We must enforce it in the terms in which it has issued, ali."

In Res v. St. Pancras (Chas free of), (6 A. & E. 314,) it was trustees appointed under a local act for a new parish church, with powers for that purpose and for debts to be incurred under the act, to account before parochial as appointed under the Vestry Act, 5 Gul. 4, c. 60, as a board having or part of the parochial expenditure: the local act requires such trustees an account of the assessments, repayments under the act, to be examined once a year at quarter sessions, though, by the same act, their accounts open to inspection (on payment any person liable to the above rate

A mandamus calling on such trustees to produce before the auditors "the (without limit as to time) kept by the local act, and requiring the trustees to produce the books which may concern the above account held to be bad, as exceeding the given by Stat. 1 & 2 Gul. 4, c. 60, 35; although such mandamus be citing a demand made by the auditors the trustees in terms conformable and a refusal to comply with such Lord Denman stating, "Two objections made to the writ. The former grounds either urged against the issuing of the writ, or applicable which might then have been urged have considered this part of the writ with much attention; but we see to depart from the opinion which upon the previous discussion, and to the judgment given upon that and which was not come to with consideration. The judgment will in 5 N. & M. 223. [S. C. Res v. St. Pancras (Church Trustees of), 6 A. & E. (a).] It is unnecessary to add to what is there laid down.

"The second objection arose mandatory part of the writ, which to go farther than was warranted by the recitals of the writ, or by 5 Gul. 4, c. 60, ss. 34, 35, under which writ had issued. The writ recited that the trustees had been called on to lay and audit of the parish a true and correct account in writing, as with proper vouchers, of all sums monies paid and expended, within year preceding the 31st of May past; and the recital also states that the clerk had been required to bring a true account, writings, papers, and which might concern the said parish. Now, by the thirty-fourth section of the act, the auditors are to meet twice in each year, and to have laid before them a true and just statement or account, accompanied with proper vouchers “XLI. And in order to remove doubts as to the meaning of certain words in this act, be it enacted, that the word ‘justice’ shall be deemed to mean justice of the peace; and that the words ‘person’ and ‘party’ shall be deemed to include any number of persons or parties; and that the words ‘justices of the peace of the county or city’ shall be deemed to include justices of the peace of any division of a county, liberty, division of a liberty, precinct, county of a city, county of a town, cinque port, or town corporate; and that the word ‘parish’ shall be deemed to include any liberty, precinct, township, hamlet, tithing, vill, extra-parochial place, or any place maintaining its own poor; and that the word ‘rate-payers’ shall include ‘ley-payers,’ and that the meaning of the several words in this act shall not be restricted, although the same may be subsequently referred to in the singular number or masculine gender only.

terms used in this act.

“XLII. And be it further enacted, that the words ‘church or chapel,’ inasmuch as regards the affixing of notices as by this act directed, shall be deemed to include all places of religious worship according to the forms of the established church; and that in any parish or place not having a parish church or chapel as aforesaid the said notices shall be affixed to some public building within the limits of the said parish or place.

As to affixing
notices.

“XLIII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to any parish not being within or being part of any city or town, in which parish there shall not be a greater number than eight hundred persons rated as householders, and having paid the rates for the relief of the poor within the year preceding that in which the provisions of this act may be desired to be put in execution within such parish.

journeymen legally settled in the said parish, and dwelling within or near its bounds, as shall apply for the same in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

"II. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that the person hiring the same shall be held bound to cultivate it in such a manner as shall preserve the land in a due state of fertility.

"III. And be it further enacted, that for the purpose of carrying this act into effect a vestry shall be held in the first week in September in every year, of which ten days' notice shall be given in the usual manner, at which vestry the trustees of the said allotments may attend and vote, if they shall so think fit, and at which vestry, or some adjournment thereof, any industrious cottager of good character who may desire to rent such portion of land as aforesaid may apply for the same; and the said vestry are hereby required, taking into consideration the character and circumstances of the applicant, to determine the case, either by rejecting his application, or by making an order that he shall be permitted to occupy such portion of the poor allotment, being not less than one-fourth of a statute acre nor exceeding one such acre, as the said vestry in their discretion shall determine, and upon the terms hereinbefore enacted; and the said order of vestry shall be held to all intents and purposes to be a sufficient title and authority to such applicant to enter into the occupation of such land at the time therein appointed.

"V. And be it further enacted, that if the rent of such portion of land shall at any time be four weeks in arrear, or if at the end of any one year of occupation it shall be the opinion of the vestry that the land has not been duly cultivated, so as to fulfil the useful and benevolent purposes of this act, then and in such case the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any or either of them, with the consent of the vestry, may serve a notice to quit upon the occupier of such portion of land; whereupon the said occupier shall deliver up possession of the same to the churchwardens and overseers aforesaid, or any or either of them, within one week after the the said notice has been duly served upon him.

"VI. And be it further enacted, that if any person to whom such portion of land as aforesaid shall have been let, for his or her occupation, shall refuse to quit and to deliver up possession thereof when thereto required according to the terms of this act, or if any other person or persons shall unlawfully enter upon or take or hold possession of any such land, it shall be lawful for the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any or either of them, to exhibit a complaint against the person so in possession of such land before two of his majesty's justices of the peace, who are hereby authorized and required to issue a summons, under their hands and seals, to the person against whom such complaint shall be made, to appear before them at a time and place appointed therein; and such justices are hereby required and empowered upon the appearance of the defendant before them, or upon proof on oath that such summons has been duly served upon him, or left at his usual place of residence, or if there should have been any difficulty in finding such usual place of residence, then upon proof on oath of such difficulty, and that such summons has been affixed on the door of the parish church of the said parish in which such land is situated, and in any extra-parochial place on some public building or other conspicuous place therein, to proceed to hear and determine the matter of such complaint, and if they shall find and adjudge the same to be true, then by warrant under their hands and seals to cause possession of the land in question to be delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or to some of them.

"VII. And be it further enacted, that all arrears of rent for the said portions of land shall be recoverable by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any of them, on behalf of the vestry, by application to two of his majesty's justices of the peace in petty sessions assembled, who shall thereupon summon the party complained against, and after hearing what he has to allege, should they find any

"VIII. And be it further enacted, that the rent of the said portions of land shall be applied by the vestry in the purchase of fuel, to be distributed in the winter season among the poor parishioners legally settled and resident in or near the said parish.

"IX. And be it further enacted, that if any of the said allotments shall be found to lie at an inconvenient distance from the residences of the cottagers, it shall be lawful for the vestry by an order made to that effect to let such allotment, or any part thereof, for the best rent that can be procured for the same, and to hire in lieu thereof for the purposes of this act land of equal value more favourably situated.

"X. And be it further enacted, that no habitations shall be erected on the portions of land demised under this act, either at the expense of the parish or by the individuals renting the same.

"XI. And whereas by two acts of the first and second years of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act to amend an Act of the fifty-ninth year of His Majesty King George the Third, for the Relief and Employment of the Poor,' and the other intituled, 'An Act to enable the Churchwardens and Overseers to inclose Lands belonging to the Crown, for the Benefit of poor Persons residing in the Parish in which such Crown Land is situated,' power is given, under certain restrictions, to inclose any quantity not exceeding fifty acres of waste land and crown land respectively, for the use and benefit of the poor; be it further enacted, that in any parish where such inclosure shall exist or shall hereafter take place, or where any land shall in any other manner be found appropriated for the general benefit of the poor of any parish, then and in such cases the powers and provisions of this act shall be held to apply, in so far as the same may be found applicable."

(1) Interruption:—The "interruption" which defeats a prescriptive right under Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 71, is an adverse obstruction, not a mere discontinuance of user by the claimant himself. In a case under sect. 1, if proof be given of a right enjoyed at the time of action brought, and thirty years before, but disused during any part of the intermediate time, it is always a question for the jury whether, at that time, the right had ceased, or was still substantially enjoyed. *Carr v. occur in which legal exemption cannot be made out by legal evidence, particularly where the non-payment has originated in the existence of customary payment in lieu of tithes, so small as to have been neglected and forgotten. Here justice requires that the exemption should be absolute.

"Supposing that the owner who claims the exemption is in a condition to prove, by strict legal evidence, that his land anciently belonged to a religious house, and may lawfully be discharged from the payment of tithes, he succeeds, after much harassing litigation, and the costs awarded to him are a very insufficient indemnity for the expense he has necessarily incurred.

"We see no objection to enacting, that, where there has been non-payment of tithes as of right, for a certain number of years, and during a certain number of incumbencies, such non-payment alone shall be sufficient to establish the exemption.

"2. Moduses. The attempts to set aside parochial and farm moduses cause much more vexation and general mischief. Where such moduses exist, the land is supposed to be subject to tithes; but instead of their being paid in kind and to the full extent, small payments are made, such as 1*d.* for a calf, 1*d.* for a garden, 1*d.* for the agistment of each barren cow, 1*d.* for the milk of a cow, 1*d.* for a colt, 2*d.* per acre for hay, 6*d.* for farm A. in lieu of tithe hay, 3*d.* for farm B. in lieu of agistment tithe, 1*s.* for farm C. in lieu of all tithes whatsoever. These moduses are supposed to have arisen from agreements of immemorial antiquity between the tithe owner and the tithe payer, for their mutual benefit; such agreements have anciently been permitted by the law.

"Where these customs exist, they ought to be respected as much as the right to tithes in kind where there is no modus, or as the right to the soil itself.

"Yet the rules laid down by courts of justice on this subject render many cases of modus open to question, and have often caused moduses which had subsisted without question for centuries, to be set aside. The most formidable objection to a modus is rickness. To be valid, a modus must be deemed to have subsisted from the reign of Richard I., as the period of legal memory; and if the payment be considered greater than the tithe of the articles covered by the modus was then worth, it is set aside; notwithstanding the uncertainty of such speculations, and the possibility that the owner of

"We propose a period of sixty years, and two incumbencies, with three years of a third incumbency, as to exemptions from tithes, and as to moduses, compositions real, and glebe lands. A succession of incumbencies is a necessary ingredient in the proposition, on account of the risk of a particular incumbent being careless or poor, or of there being collusion between the incumbent and the patron, who has land in the parish; but any risk from the character of the individual incumbent, or from collusion between the incumbent and patron for more than two incumbencies in succession, cannot be allowed for without too great a sacrifice of the objects to be attained; and it seems not unreasonable to presume, that, within the period we propose, there may be an incumbent able and willing to assert the rights, the protection of which is left in his hands." (1) Religious worship.—It appeared in West v. Shuttleworth, (2 M. & K. 684,) that a testatrix directed several sums to be paid to certain Roman catholic priests and chapels, desiring that they might be paid as soon as possible after her decease, that she might have the benefit of their prayers and masses; and she gave the residue of her property to trustees, upon trust, to pay 10*l.* each to the ministers of certain specified Roman catholic chapels, for the benefit of their prayers for the repose of her soul and that of her deceased husband, and to appropriate the remainder in such way as they might judge best calculated to promote the knowledge of the catholic Christian religion among the poor and ignorant inhabitants of Swale Dale and Wenston Dale: it was held, that the gifts to priests and chapels were void, and that the next of kin was entitled to the benefit of the failure, but that the gift of the residue was valid within Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 115. Sir Charles Peppys observing, "The testatrix in this case, after giving several legacies, some of which were for charitable purposes, as to the residue of her estate and effects, bequeathed the same to Sir Henry Lawson and Simon Scroop, and she appointed John Carr, John Shuttleworth, and John Furniss, her executors. There is then a paper entitled, 'Omitted in my will, chapels and priests. To the chapel of St. George's Fields, London road, 10*l.*; to St. Patrick's chapel, Sutton street, 10*l.*; to Litchfield chapel, 10*l.*' Several small legacies are then enumerated to several clergymen by name, and then comes this note: 'Whatever I have left to priests and chapels, it is my wish and desire the sums may be paid as soon as possible, that I may have the benefit of their prayers and masses.' There is then a letter signed by the testatrix, and addressed to Sir John Lawson and Simon Scroop, which has been proved as testamentary, as follows: 'Gentlemen, I have herewith sent a duplicate of my will, whereby you will perceive that I have taken the liberty of bequeathing the residue of my property to you, in confidence that you will appropriate the same in the manner most consonant to my wishes, which are as follows: that the sum of 10*l.* each be given to the ministers of the Roman catholic chapels of Greenwich, St. George's in the Fields, Sutton street, Soho square, and York, for the benefit of their prayers for the repose of my soul, and that of my deceased husband, George Townsend, and that the remainder be such way as you may ledge of Christian religion objected to upon two grounds: the first was that the legacies to the priests and chapels were void, and therefore the residue, being bequeathed to the residue, be-

the catholic religion.

"I shall first consider the objection to the gift of the residue. The Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 115, puts persons professing the Roman catholic religion upon the same footing with respect to their schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes, as protestant dissenters; and the case of Bradshaw v. Tasker, (2 M. & K. 221,) decided that the act was retrospective, and that the third section did not exclude the legacies in question in the cause from the operation of the act, because the suit was only for the administration of the estate. In the present case, the bill filed by the next of kin claimed the property, as inapplicable, under the Statute of Mortmain, to any charities, and not because it was given to promote the catholic religion, or to give instruction to those who profess it; and the letter which raises the question as to the residue was not proved until the 15th of January, 1834, so that it cannot be said that the property in question was in litigation, discussion, or dispute, upon the point now contended for, at the time the act passed in 1832.

"This act makes it unnecessary to consider what was the state of the law, before it passed, with respect to such dispositions of property in favour of Roman catholics. It is only necessary to inquire what is now the state of the law with respect to similar dispositions of property in favour of protestant dissenters. The trust is to appropriate the residue in such way as the trustees shall judge best calculated to promote the knowledge of the catholic Christian religion among the poor and ignorant inhabitants of certain places named. In the case of Bradshaw v. Tasker, (Ibid.) the gift was in favour of certain catholic schools, and to be applied towards carrying on the good designs of the said schools. Now, can it be said that to promote the carrying on the good designs of catholic schools differs in principle from promoting the knowledge of the catholic Christian religion amongst the poor and ignorant? In Attorney-General v. Pearson, (3 Meriv. 409,) Lord Eldon says, 'that the court will administer a fund given to maintain a society of protestant dissenters promoting no doctrine contrary to law, although such as may be at variance with the doctrine of the established church.' In Attorney-General v. Hickman, (2 Eq. Abr. 193,) a legacy was established, which was given for encouraging such nonconforming preachers to preach God's word in places where the people are not able to allow them a sufficient and suitable maintenance, and for encouraging the bringing up some to the work of the ministry, who are designed to labour in God's vineyard among the dissenters, leaving the particular mode to the trustees. Waller v. Childs, (Ambl. 524,) and the cases which continually occur of funds left to support the chapels and schools of dissenters, proceed upon the same principle, and leave no doubt in my mind of the validity in law of the gift of the residue.

tion, and charitable purposes of protestant dissenters, are exempted from the operation of certain penal and disabling laws to which they were subject previously to the passing of the said recited act of the first year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary; and whereas by certain acts of the parliament of Scotland, and particularly by an act passed in the year one thousand seven hundred, intituled, 'An Act for preventing the Growth of Popery,' various penalties and disabilities were imposed upon persons professing the Roman catholic religion in Scotland; and whereas, notwithstanding the provisions of various acts passed for the relief of his majesty's Roman catholic subjects from disabling laws, doubts have been entertained whether it be lawful for his majesty's subjects professing the Roman catholic religion in Scotland to acquire and hold in real estate the property necessary for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes; and whereas it is expedient to remove all doubts respecting the right of his majesty's subjects professing the Roman catholic religion in England and Wales to acquire and hold property necessary for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act his majesty's subjects professing the Roman catholic religion, in respect to their schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes, in Great Britain, and the property held therewith, and the persons employed in or about the same, shall in respect thereof be subject to the same laws as the protestant dissenters are subject to in England in respect to their schools and places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes, and not further or otherwise.

to be considered, and these are not affected by Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 115, which applies only to schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes. Taking the first gift to priests and chapels in connection with the letter, there can be no doubt that the sums given to the priests and chapels were not intended for the benefit of the priests personally, or for the support of the chapels for general purposes, but that they were given, as expressed in the letter, for the benefit of their prayers for the repose of the testatrix's soul and that of her deceased husband; and the question is, whether such legacies can be supported. It is truly observed by Sir William Grant, in Cary v. Abbot, (7 Ves. 490,) that there was no statute, making superstitious uses void generally, and that the statute of Edward the Sixth related only to superstitious uses of a particular description then existing; and it is to be observed, that that statute does not declare any such gift to be unlawful, but avoids certain superstitious gifts previously created. The legacies in question, therefore, are not within the terms of the statute of Edward the Sixth, but that statute has been considered as establishing the illegality of certain gifts, and, amongst others, the giving legacies to priests to pray for the soul of the donor has, in many cases collected in Duke, (p. 466,) been decided to be within the superstitious uses intended to be suppressed by that statute. I am therefore of opinion that these legacies to priests and chapels are void.

"What then is to become of the amount of such legacies? The statute of Edward the Sixth gives to the king such property devoted to superstitious uses as that act affects; but the legacies in question are not within the terms of the act, but are void on account of the general illegality of the object they were intended to answer. It has been decided, that where legacies are given to charities, which charities cannot take effect, the object being considered as superstitious, then the duty of appropriating the amount to other charitable purposes devolves upon the crown, as in Cary v. Abbot, (7 Ves. 490;) but in that case and the cases there cited, the object of the gift was clearly charity. In the present case, according to the construction I have put upon these legacies, there was nothing of charity in their object; the intention was not to benefit the priests, or to support the chapels, but to secure a supposed benefit to the testatrix herself. Upon what ground, then, can the crown claim? Not by virtue of Stat. 1 Edw. 6, for the case is not within that act; and not upon the ground of the money given being devoted to charity, the mode of applying which devolves upon the crown. Doubts have been entertained, how far it was correct to give to the crown, for the purpose of being applied to charity, funds given for charitable purposes which are illegal, as in the case of Cordyn v. French, (4 Ibid. 418,) and in De Garcia v. Lawson, in the note to that case; but in all such cases charity was the object of the gift; and how can the claim of the crown attach to gifts void because superstitious, but of which charity was no part of the object? These gifts are void because illegal; and as they therefore cannot take effect, and as the crown cannot claim either under Stat. 1 Edw. 6, or upon the authorities which give to the crown the right to direct the application of charitable legacies, which cannot be carried into effect according to the directions of the donor, I am of opinion, that the next of kin are entitled."

"An Act for the Limitation of Actions and Suits relating to Real Property, and for simplifying the Remedies for trying the Rights thereto."

"Be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the words and expressions hereinafter mentioned, which in their ordinary signification have a more confined or a different meaning, shall in this act, except where the nature of the provision or the context of the act shall exclude such construction, be interpreted as follows; (that is to say,) the word 'land' shall extend to manors(2), messuages, and all other corporeal hereditaments(3) whatsoever, and also to tithes (other than tithes

(1) The following has been extracted from the First Report of Commissioners on the Law of Real Property [presented May 11th, 1829]:

"The various Statutes of Limitation which have been hitherto passed in this country, (with the exception of an enactment in Stat. 33 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 5, confining suits for recovering the value of tithes to a period of six years,) apply only to legal remedies, and, therefore, have no direct operation on equitable estates or interests. But according to the maxim, that 'equity follows the law,' courts of equity, in analogy to the Statutes of Limitation, have laid down rules by which they have refused relief, where, if the estate of the claimant were legal instead of equitable, lapse of time would be a bar to a legal remedy. They have disregarded the periods of sixty, fifty, and thirty years, allowed for bringing writs of right and writs of entry, and (as it is now generally understood,) have adopted, as the limit of their relief, the period of twenty years given by Stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, for making an entry on lands, or bringing an ejectment, adhering likewise to the statutable provisions respecting disabilities, but excepting certain cases affected by fraud or trust.

"The question arises, whether the direct operation of the Statutes of Limitation should still be confined to legal remedies, or whether there should not be express legislative enactments upon this subject, applicable to equitable estates and interests. As adverted to above, the legislature has already begun to apply limitation to suits in equity, and we conceive that this system may now be advantageously acted upon. When the ancient Statutes of Limitation passed, equitable jurisdiction was of small account; but a very large proportion of the real property of the country is now subject to that jurisdiction, and there seems no sufficient reason why the regulation of such property should continue to be left to the variable discretion of a judge. A case very recently occurred, where an estate subject to a mortgage in fee, being in settlement, with an ultimate limitation to the right heirs of a particular person, a stranger, on the expiration of the previous estate, entered, claiming to be entitled under the limitation; and he and his son, upon his death, continued in quiet possession, paying interest upon the mortgage, for twenty years. After a difference of opinion between judges of great eminence, it was held, that the devisee of the person really entitled under the limitation was barred by lapse of time. This decision, although generally approved of, has been censured by some, and the doctrine founded upon it may be qualified in subsequent cases. Hence, without a positive law to refer to, some uncertainty and uneasiness must prevail, and practising lawyers sometimes find it impossible to give a confident opinion upon titles submitted to them." First Report of Commissioners on the Law of Real Property, p. 48.

"Where a mortgagee has been twenty years in possession, without any payment, or promise, or acknowledgment, to show that the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee continues, the right to redeem is gone; but evidence of any acknowledgment in writing, or by parol, to the mortgagor or to a stranger, or any memorandum or account found among the papers of the mortgagee, admitting or evidencing that he holds in that character, interrupts the bar. For this reason, mortgage titles are insecure, and, for a very long period, almost wholly unmarketable. When the price of land is depressed, and the mortgaged premises are not worth the mortgage money, they are abandoned by the mortgagor. From some local or general cause, or from actual improvements by the mortgagee, the value, after many years, is increased. A bill to redeem may then be supported by some expression the mortgagee is sworn to have used in conversation, or some private note, which he is compellable to divulge, written by him, within twenty years. In analogy to the salutary statute lately passed, (9 Geo. 4, c. 14,) respecting acknowledgments and promises to revive debts barred by the Statute of Limitations in personal actions, and to render adults liable for debts contracted during infancy, we propose that it should be enacted, that where the mortgagee is in possession, the bar in equity shall not be affected by any promise, statement, or acknowledgment, unless it were in writing, and made by the mortgagee, or those claiming under the mortgagee, to the mortgagor, or those claiming under the mortgagor." such action shall have first accrued (1) to some person through whom he claims; or if such right shall not have accrued to any person through whom he claims, then within twenty years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress or to bring such action shall have first accrued to the person making or bringing the same (2).

And be it further enacted, that in the construction of this act (3) the right to make an entry or distress or bring an action to recover any land or rent shall be deemed to have first accrued at such time as hereinafter is mentioned; (that is to say,) when the person claiming such land or rent, or some person through whom he claims, shall, in respect of the estate or interest claimed, have been in possession (4) or in receipt of the profits (5) of such land, or in receipt of such rent (6), and shall while entitled thereto have been dispossessed, or have discontinued such possession or receipt (7), then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time of such disposition or discontinuance of possession, or at his action brought to enforce the right. Hall v. Swift, 4 Bing. N. C. 381.

(1) Shall have first accrued.—This section includes a wrongful holding over of possession, after the expiration of a title under which the adverse party lawfully entered. Doe v. Gregory, 4 N. & M. 308.

(2) Bringing the same.—Where a lessor permits his lessee, during the continuance of the lease, to pay no rent for twenty years, the lessor is not therefore barred by Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, s. 2, from recovering the premises in ejectment. The case falls within the latter branch of the third section, which, in the case of an estate or interest in reversion, provides, that the right of action shall be deemed to have first accrued, when it became an estate or interest in possession. The lessor, therefore, may recover in ejectment at any time within twenty years after the determination of the lease. Doe d. Davy v. Osenham, 7 M. & W. 131.

Where in 1788 estates were settled by marriage settlement, to the use of the wife for life, with remainders to her issue in tail, with remainder to the settler (whose heiress at law she was) in fee; and in 1818, by deeds to which the husband and wife and their only son, R. G., were parties, and by a recovery suffered in pursuance thereof, the estates were limited to the use of the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to R. G., the son, for life, remainder to his issue in tail, remainder to I. F. his sister for life, with other remainders over; and the husband died in 1819, the wife in 1822, and R. G. in 1828: it was held, that inasmuch as the estate of I. F. was carved out of the estate tail of R. G. she had the same period for bringing an ejectment in respect of any of the estates comprised in any of the above deeds, as he would have had, if he had continued alive, viz. twenty years from the year 1822, when his remainder came into possession. Doe d. Carson v. Edmonds, 6 Ibid. 295.

(3) In the construction of this act.—By Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, s. 3, the doctrine of non-adverse possession is done away with, except in the cases provided for by sect. 15, and an ejectment must be brought within twenty years after the original right of entry of the plaintiff, or of the party under whom he claims accrued, whatever be the nature of the defendant's possession. Nepson (Bart.) v. Knight, 2 Ibid. 894.

(4) Have been in possession.—The general possession of a lord of a manor will not suffice. Challen (Lord) v. Johnson, Str. 1142. Doe d. Davy v. Osenham, 7 M. & W. 131.

In Doe d. Thompson v. Thompson, (6 A. & E. 721,) it was holden, under Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, s. 2, that no title accrues to a party who was tenant at will, and held without interruption for twenty years, after the expiration of the first year, but who had quitted possession before the act passed; and as against the original landlord, and those claiming under him, such party is without title, independently of sect. 15. Nor can he, by virtue of the first mentioned clauses, recover in ejectment, even against a stranger.

Where B. S. was in possession of certain lands under a lease for thirty-one years, made in the year 1753, and continued in possession till 1811; no rent having been paid, or any act done by B. S. acknowledging a tenancy after the expiration of the lease, in 1784: it was held, that after the expiration of the lease, the possession of B. S. was that of a tenant at sufferance, and that there was no adverse possession by B. S. against the lessor in the lease, or those claiming under him. Howard v. Sherwood, 1 Alcock & Napier (Irish), 217. It also appeared, that after the death of B. S. in 1811, the defendants entered into possession of the lands, and continued in possession without any act of acknowledgment of a tenancy, till the bringing of the ejectment, which was within twenty years from the death of B. S.: and it was held, that this possession was no bar under the Statute of Limitations. Ibid.

it when any one or more of several persons (5), joint tenants (6), or tenants in common, receipt of the entirety, or more than his possession of the whole. In 1800, the tenant for life died, A. having died before. The heir at law of A. filed a bill in Chancery, in respect of the land, against C. In 1833, while the proceedings were going on, the said heir at law died, having devised to J. all his lands, &c., whether in his own possession or that of others, as far as he lawfully could, specifying those which he was seeking to recover from C. In 1836, the devisee's heir at law brought ejectment against C. for A.'s third part: it was held, that, under sects. 2 & 12 of Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, the defendant's possession could not be held to have been ever that of the other tenants in common; for that sect. 12 made the possessions of tenants in common separate from the commencement of the tenancy in common, and not merely from the time of the act passing. That therefore sect. 2 would have barred the lessor of the plaintiff, but that his right was saved by sect. 15, the ejectment having been brought within five years after the passing of the act, and the possession of C. not being adverse to the other tenants in common within the meaning of that section. But that the devise of 1835, (though made before sect. 3 of Stat. 7 Gul. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26, came into operation,) defeated the claim of the lessor of the plaintiff as heir at law to the devise; for that the devisee's right was more than such a mere right of entry as was then not devisable, he having never been dispossessed, and having a right which enabled him to devise, both before and since Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 12, 15. *Culley v. such land or rent, in respect of such other estate, interest, right, or possession unless in the meantime such land or rent shall have been recovered by some person entitled to an estate, interest, or right which shall have been limited or taken after or in defeasance of such estate or interest in possession.

“XXI. And be it further enacted, that when the right of a tenant in any land or rent to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action to recover the same shall have been barred by reason of the same not having been so brought within the period hereinbefore limited, which shall be applicable in such case, no such entry, distress, or action, shall be made or brought by any person claiming any estate, interest, or right, which such tenant in tail might have been barred (1).

“XXII. And be it further enacted, that when a tenant in tail of any land or rent, entitled to recover the same, shall have died before the expiration of the period hereinbefore limited, which shall be applicable in such case, for making an entry or distress, or bringing an action to recover such land or rent, no person claiming any estate, interest, or right, which such tenant in tail might have been barred shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover such land or rent but within the period during which, if such tenant in tail had continued to live, he might have made such entry or distress, or brought such action.

“XXIII. And be it further enacted, that when a tenant in tail of any land or rent shall have made an assurance thereof (2) which shall not operate to bar the estate or estates to take effect after or in defeasance of his estate tail, and any person shall by virtue of such assurance, at the time of the execution thereof, or at any time afterwards, be in possession or receipt of the profits of such land, or of the receipt of such rent, and the same person, or any other person whatsoever, than some person entitled to such possession or receipt in respect of an estate tail, shall continue in such possession or receipt for the period of twenty years (3) next after the commencement of the time at which such assurance, if it had then been exacted from such tenant in tail or the person who would have been entitled to his estate tail, such assurance had not been executed, would, without the consent of any person, have operated to bar such estate or estates as aforesaid, then at the expiration of such period of twenty years such assurance shall be and be deemed to have been effectual as against any person claiming any estate, interest, or right, which such tenant in tail might have been barred (4).

(1) Might lawfully have been barred:—An adverse possession against the tenant in tail, will now run, at the same time, against the issue in tail and those in remainder, even though the issue, and those in remainder, cannot have a right of entry, while the tenant in tail lives, and his estate subsists.

(2) Made an assurance thereof:—The assurance referred to is the one made by the tenant in tail. The operation of the clause, therefore, is not strictly to make time a bar, but to make time give a full operation to the assurance executed by the tenant in tail.

(3) Period of twenty years:—This clause extends the inference formerly arising upon a long possession, adverse to a tenant in tail, and to make such a possession for twenty years, coupled with the power of the tenant in tail to bar those in remainder, equivalent to a perfect assurance. In Doe d. Smith v. Pigg, (3 B. & Ad. 742; 1 N. & M. 385,) Lord Tenterden observed, “The father might have conveyed by fine and recovery, and so have barred the lessor of the plaintiff; he might also have conveyed by lease and release, which would have made a good title against himself only, and would not have barred his son, the next tenant in tail; but the long possession by the defendant may be referable to such a state of things.”

(4) Defeatance of such estate tail:—The clause is framed with reference to the plan of assurance by the substitution coveries Act, to which it plainly refers. There is no objection in point of law to the earlier statute operating on a later effect of the clause therefore is, that the tenant in tail executes a deed enrolling the later act, which for want of the assent of the protector operates only to create a base fee, under which possession is of the title will become good against the remainder at the end of twenty years the period when the tenant in tail, issue, could, without the consent of any person, have barred the remainder under the substitution for Reversion but this operation will not be effectual. Assurance already executed would not be executed without consent, have operated to bar the estates in remainder. It will be necessary, therefore, in all such cases, to scire facias on a judgment, a replication, "that the judgment had been revived by judgment in scire facias within the period of limitation prescribed by the statute," was held good on general demurrer. Farran v. Bereford, 1 Smythe (Irish), 297.

The court will not allow a scire facias to issue to revive a judgment more than twenty years old against the heir and terre tenants of the cognisor, where a former scire facias had issued against the heir and terre tenants within the twenty years, but no interest had been paid, or acknowledgment given, within that time. (Palmer v. Algeo, 1 Jebb & Symes (Irish), 501.) because the statute has not provided for the case of a "proceeding having been taken." Ibid. 506, n.

The court will not allow a scire facias to revive a judgment more than twenty years old to issue against the original cognisor, upon a written acknowledgment having been given after twenty years. Brady v. Fitzgibbon, Ibid. 503.

The Statute of Limitations does not begin to run against a judgment entered on a post obit bond, until the death occurs upon which the bond is payable. Barber v. Shore, Ibid. 610. Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19.

In Vineent v. Willington, (1 Longfield & Townsend (Irish), 456,) it appeared, that a judgment was obtained on a joint bond and warrant of attorney against A. and B. in 1815; B. had joined in these as a security for A. On the 16th of March, 1820, A. wrote to V.'s agent, "You have inclosed 150*l.* to my credit on account of V.'s interest, and in the account book by V.'s agent (since dead) appeared an entry by the agent, of the 17th of March, 1820, charging himself with a bill for 50*l.* drawn by A. and 100*l.* cash from A." In 1822, V.'s attorney applied by letter to B., calling for payment of the amount of the above debt; and B. on that occasion wrote to V.'s attorney, acknowledging the receipt of his letter, "applying for the payment of his, B.'s and A.'s joint bond;" and soon after B.'s agent sent a letter to V.'s attorney, inclosing a proposal of terms upon which the matters should be arranged by A., and said, "this being done, it is hoped the judgment against B. will be satisfied." The bill was filed in 1839: it was held, that this was sufficient payment and acknowledgment to take the case out of Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27. Quere, Does that statute repeal Stat. 8 Geo. 1, c. 4 (Ir)?

(1) In equity.—In a case of adverse possession, profits which a party so in possession might have realized but for his wilful default, are only allowed as against mortgagees in possession, and trustees guilty of a breach of trust. Hoswell v. Hoswell, 1 Jurist, 492. 2 M. & C. 478.

(2) Or any legacy.—This does not extend to a suit to make an executor account for a sum of money bequeathed to him by his testator, upon certain trusts, which has been severed by the executor from the testator's personal estate, and the interest of which has for a time been applied towards the trusts of the will. Phillipo v. Munnings, 2 M. & C. 309.

Where a fund has ceased to bear the character of a legacy, and has assumed the character of a trust fund, although it is still vested in the executor or his representative, a bill filed for the fund will be considered as a suit for the administration of the fund, and not as a bill for a legacy, and therefore it will not fall within this provision of the act. 2 Sugden's V. & P. 363.

(3) Within twenty years next.—It was held by nine judges against one, that the twenty years fixed by Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, s. 40, as to the period within which proceedings on a judgment should be taken, begin to run from the date of the last judgment of revival, and not from the entry of the original judgment. Where to a scire facias (by the executors of the consignee against a terre tenant of the lands of the cognisor) upon a judgment of 1810; the defendant pleaded sect. 40 of Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27; and the plaintiffs replied a judgment of revival in 1817, by themselves, against the cognisor, within twenty years: it was decided to be no departure. Farran v. Ottiswell, 2 Jebb & Symes (Irish), 97.

(4) Some acknowledgment.—A reference being made to a master in Chancery, in certain suits in which the cognisor of a judgment was a defendant, to take an account of all debts, charges, and incumbrances affecting certain freehold lands of the cognisor; the master reported, that a certain sum was due to the administrator of the cognisor (who did not appear to have been a party to the Chancery suits) on foot and by virtue of the said judgment, and that the same was a charge upon the said freehold lands of the cognisor: it was held, that the master's report was not a document within the meaning of the words "acknowledgment in writing" in Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, s. 40; and that the master in Chancery is not an agent of the parties interested in a report, made by him in a cause in that court, or in the judgment which is the subject-matter of his report, within the meaning of the same enactment. Hill v. Stowell, Ibid. 389.

(5) Or his agent.—In St. John (Lord) v. Boughton, (9 Sim. 219,) where an estate was devised to a trustee in trust to sell and pay the testator's debt, and subject thereto, in trust for A.: it was held, that as the debts were charged upon or payable out of land, they were within the Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c.

thereto or his agent; and in such case no such action or suit or proceeding shall be brought but within twenty years after such payment or acknowledgment, or the last of such payments or acknowledgments if more than one, was given (1).

"XLI. And be it further enacted, that after the said thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three no arrears of dower, nor any damages on account of such arrears, shall be recovered or obtained by any action or suit for a longer period than six years next before the commencement of such action or suit.

"XLII. 27; but that an acknowledgment of the debts in writing, signed by the trustee or his agent, was sufficient to preserve the creditor's right of suit for twenty years after the giving the acknowledgment.

(1) Last of such payments or acknowledgments if more than one, was given.—A plea relying upon Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, s. 40, should both state the commencement of the period of the limitation, and negative the cases of exception in that section. To a scire facies to revive a judgment brought by the assignee of the assignees of J. P., a bankrupt, the defendant pleaded, "that after the rendition of the judgment, and the accruing of a present right to the said J. P. to receive the said debt and damages by virtue thereof, to wit, on &c., and within twenty years before and next preceding the suing forth of the scire facies, the defendant did not, nor did any agent of the defendant on his part, pay any part of the said debt and damages, or any interest thereupon, or give any acknowledgment in writing of the right thereto, signed in that behalf by the defendant, or by any person as such agent as aforesaid, to the said J. P., or other person entitled thereto, or to the agent of such person so entitled as last aforesaid, according to the form of the statute," &c., which was holden to be bad on special demurrer. Forster v. McKone, 1 Jebb & Symes (Irish), 341.

(2) No arrears of rent.—It seems, that this does not apply to rent by deed or indenture. Vide 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 42, s. 3. Paddon v. Bartlett, 3 A. & E. 884.

The mere issuing of a scire facies is not bringing an action or suit within the meaning of the latter part of the same section, so as to take the case out of the operation of the statute. Foley v. Dumas, 1 Smythe (Irish), 78.

Jones & Carey (Irish), 52.

Where to a scire facias on a judgment a defendant had pleaded several pleas, under which he could avail himself of the Statute of Limitations, 8 Geo. 1, c. 4, the court refused, (there being no affidavits of merits, and it being admitted, that the judgment had not been paid,) to allow him to add a plea under Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 27, upon any terms, although the proceedings were in a state in which pleas to the merits would have been allowed to be added on terms. *Donsville v. (2) Exempt from the payment of . . . church rates:—In Voley v. Burder, (12 A. & E. 360; vide etiam Brantree Church-rate case, by Johnson,) Chief Justice Tindal observed, "This case, which has been brought before us by writ of error from the court of Queen's Bench, involves two questions of considerable importance; first, whether the churchwardens of a parish, after a rate for the necessary repairs of the parish church has been proposed by them to the parishioners at a vestry meeting duly convened for that purpose, and has been refused by a majority of the parishioners there assembled, can, of their own sole authority, at a subsequent time, by themselves, and not at any parish meeting, impose a valid rate on the parishioners; and the second question is, whether, if a rate be so made, and proceedings be taken by the churchwardens in the ecclesiastical court to enforce its payment, a court of common law can issue a writ of prohibition to the spiritual court to stay such proceedings? And we are of opinion, on these questions, that the rate, made under the circumstance the manner before stated, is illegal and that a prohibition to the spiritual court may be well and properly issued.

"In order to open the grounds of our answer to the first of the questions, it will be necessary to explain first place, the nature of the legal obligation by which the inhabitants of every parish are compellable to repair, and keep in repair the fabric of the parish church; and, in place, the mode prescribed by law for giving such obligation into effect: from consideration of which points it will be seen, and by necessary inference, that the church rate now under discussion is legal and valid rate, or the contrary.

"And we are all of opinion that the obligation by which the parishioners, the actual residents within, or the owners of lands and tenements in, every parish are bound to repair the body of the parish church whenever necessary, and to provide for the performance of divine service therein, is an obligation imposed on the common law of the land. This obligation is not grounded on the general ecclesiastical law is manifest; this, that, by the authority of all the general canon law, the repairs of the whole of the parish church, both the chancel, fall upon the owners of the tithes, except that in some countries, part falls upon the parishioners; [Von Esen, Jus Eccl. Universum, par. 2, sec. 2, tit. 1 vol. 2, p. 635, ed. Loeser; De

assembled at a meeting, for repairing their church, must have been a power that existed from time immemorial. No one, however, disputes the validity of a rate so imposed, and certainly no question has been raised upon its validity before us; all concurring in opinion, that such a rate is good, and that the payment of each man's proportion thereof might be enforced by a suit in the ecclesiastical court. As little difference of opinion arises as to the validity of a rate imposed by the churchwardens alone, where a meeting of the parishioners has been duly convened in vestry for the purpose of making such rate, but where none of the parishioners have thought fit to attend and express an opinion, for in this state of circumstances the churchwardens, who may be assumed to be parishioners themselves, do in effect constitute the majority, or, more properly speaking, the whole of the parishioners who are assembled in vestry; and, therefore, upon the principle above laid down, they must have authority to bind the absent parishioners. But the rate is in question, upon the validity of which our judgment is demanded, varies in most important particulars from both the preceding cases; and the question to be resolved with respect to that rate is, whether, after a meeting has been duly convened, and certain of the parishioners have attended, and the majority of those who so attended have refused to make any rate for the necessary repairs of the parish church, the churchwardens have authority, by themselves, and not at the meeting at which the refusal took place, but at a subsequent time, to make a rate that shall be binding on the parish. Such a power, if it could be shown to exist by custom in any particular parish, might indeed seem, in its own nature, not to be unreasonable; as it would amount to no more than a mode of carrying into complete effect, through the means of a public officer, the performance of that duty which is cast upon the parishioners by the general law of the land, after they had themselves refused or neglected to take upon them

And it is this dictum which gives the several passages inserted in text writers to which reference is made, Watson's Clergyman's I Institutes, Bacon's Abridgment, abridgments referred to at the various repetitions, derived from sources, cannot raise the authority position itself higher than that originally possessed. And, with case in Ventris, which is, at be short and unsatisfactory, it is inconsistent with the statement that the rate made by the church made at the very meeting at which the majority refused their assent; a which might give rise to a very confusion, and on which an objection afterwards be made. It is also marked that Sir Simon Dogge, in Counselor, mentions it only as a rate opinion that, if the parish the churchwardens may make a rate the parishioners,' he says, 'who together at such meeting, refuse to join in making such assessment to meet, I conceive the churchwardens having just cause for such assessment proceed alone;' and in the third work in 1681 is added, for it 'but some are of opinion that wardens cannot proceed alone compel the parishioners to do it tical censure, Idem quere;' through very strong inference that he placed reliance on the soundness of his opinion. The authority of Aykfe, 10 Geo. 2, p. 455, is directly opposed without referring particularly to common law authorities, which were brought in review before us, it is only to say, that the weight of the case appears to us to be strongly in favor of the plaintiff below. With respect to Gaudern v. Selby, (1 Cart. ther, where, in a case of spiritual cognizance, a collateral question arises which is not properly of spiritual cognizance; in which case the courts of common law oblige them to omit such evidence as the common law would allow; (Bresdon v. Gill, 1 Ld. Raym. 219—222;) as when, for example, a lease is offered to be proved in an ecclesiastical court, and is rejected because by their law two witnesses are required; or, for the same reason, where the fact in dispute is the payment of a legacy. Another, where the spiritual court takes upon itself the construction of statute law, and decides contrary to the construction which is put upon the statute by the temporal courts. And, lastly, another class of exceptions, which seems to apply itself more closely to the case before us; namely, that the spiritual courts being always bound to declare the common law, when it becomes necessary to declare it, in the same manner as the common law courts would do; when, as in the present instance, the very groundwork and foundation of the proceedings of the spiritual court is the holding of a supposed church rate to be a valid rate, which, upon the construction of a court of common law, is held to be no rate at all; in such case, in order to prevent the conflict which would arise from a decision taking place one way in the spiritual court, and the opposite way in the courts of common law, the prohibition is allowed to go. (Lord C. J. Eyre's judgment in Home v. Camden, 2 Hen. Black. 333; and the judgment of Lord Ellenborough, in Gould v. Gepper, 5 East, 370.) The spiritual court has not only undoubted, but even exclusive, jurisdiction to inquire into, and to decide upon, the necessity of the repair of the fabric of the parish church; and, in the exercise of such jurisdiction, that court may, perhaps, be able to compel the churchwardens to raise the money by a rate, or may punish the parishioners who wilfully refuse either to join in such rate or pay their respective proportions when regularly and legally assessed upon them; yet they cannot proceed to enforce the payment of that which, although called a rate upon the libel, shews that a burthen has been imposed on the parishioners by persons who, under the circumstances which attended the making of it, had no authority to impose it upon the principle of the common law.

"As to the decided cases, it appears that prohibitions have been granted where the ecclesiastical court is proceeding to compel a person to contribute to the repair of a parish church as an inhabitant, whose land in the parish is on lease; (Jeffrey's case, 5 Co. 67 (b);) or where a person is charged in the parish where he inhabits in respect of land out of it; (17 Vin. Abr. Prohibition (H), pl. 4;) or where a man who takes a standing in the market in one parish, but dwells in another, is sued for repairs of the church of the former parish; (2 Rol. Abr. Prohibition (H), pl. 5;) or where one is rated in respect of land for ornaments; (Ibid. (K), pl. 1;) or where the rate is on some of the inhabitants only; (Ibid. pl. 10;) or where the suit is to enforce an ancient rate, made some time before, and which had been made originally by commissioners of the ecclesiastical court; (Blank v. Newcombe, 12 Mod. 327;) or where the bishop's commissioners made a rate, and the suit was to enforce it; (Rogers v. Davenant, 1 Mod. 194; 2 Ibid. 8;) or where the rate was made by the churchwardens without calling together the parishioners; or for a parish rate for making and repairing a parish organ. Anonymous, 12 Ibid. 416. In all these and many other cases, the prohibition was allowed to issue, although no one doubts but that the whole subject matter of church rates, and the enforcing of them, is within the jurisdiction of the spiritual court. In all these cases, too, the same argument would have applied which has been urged in the present case before us, viz., that the objection is a proper matter of appeal, and not of prohibition; for that it is not to be assumed, that the ecclesiastical court will do wrong. What real distinction, indeed, can be made between a rate that is held to be void on the ground of its being imposed by the bishop's commissioners, and a rate that is imposed by the mere authority of the churchwardens?

"One argument has been urged in the course of the discussion before us, to which we think it right to advert. It has been said, that to allow the enforcement of church rates to be a matter of sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the spiritual court, and at the same time to allow the prohibition to issue, is, in effect, to take away all power of compelling the parishioners to repair the parish church. But it is obvious that the effect of our judgment in this case is no more than to declare the opinion of the court, that the churchwardens have, in this instance, pursued a course not warranted by law; and, consequently, all the powers with which the spiritual court is invested by law to compel the reparation of the church, are left untouched. If that court is empowered, (as is stated by Lyndwood, p. 53, voc. Subpana, and other ecclesiastical writers,) to compel the churchwardens to repair the church by spiritual censures; to call upon them to assemble the parishioners together by due notice, to make a sufficient rate; to punish such of the parishioners as refuse to perform their duty in joining in the rate of excommunication, that is, since the statute of 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, by imprisonment, and, under the same penalty, to compel each parishioner to pay his proportion of the church rate: the same power will still remain with the spiritual court, notwithstanding the decision of this case. The extent and nature of those powers not being now before us, it would be at once unnecessary and improper to give any opinion upon them. It is sufficient to say, that all that we decide by this judgment is, that the rate as it appears upon the face of the libel, is illegal, as being made

"II. Provided always, and be it enacted, that no person or persons shall be liable to any such rates or cesses because the said churches, district churches, the merits. But, in point of fact, were the irregularities in Gaudern v. Selby, (1 Curt. 394,) such as the party appellant could take notice of? I very much doubt if they were such irregularities; I have found a case in which it was held, that irregularities of such a nature were not sufficient to vitiate proceedings in an appellate court; it is a case in 1713, (Townsend v. Lewitt & Page, Arches, 4th session, Hil. Term, note of Dr. Andrew.) A citation issued in the name of John Rogers, as the commissary of the Archdeacon of Leicester, and also in the name of George Newell, official to the archdeacon; it called on Mary Townsend to answer to Lewitt and Page, the churchwardens of All Saints' Leicester, in a cause of subtraction of church rate. Articles were exhibited against her in the name of the commissary and official. Some of the acts were sped before the commissary only; in others, he had acted for Newell as official. Sentence was given by Newell, the official; he signed the sentence as surrogate to the commissary; the party cited was condemned in the rate and expenses; the cause was brought to the Arches by appeal; it was objected that the proceedings were a nullity; in other words, the manner in which the cause had been conducted in the court below was so irregular, that the party ought to be dismissed, without the court proceeding into the merits of the case; the arguments were of considerable length, and it was insisted, that the same person could not sit as judge in two distinct capacities. Cases were cited on each side, one, Deakin v. Newell, from the same judges, which it was said was dismissed on the same account; on the other side, Biddle v. Parsons, determined in the Arches, on appeal from the same judges, and no objection made to their acting jointly. Reference was made to an award of the Bishop of Lincoln, between the official and commissary—and this shows how impossible it is for this court to decide on such cases without knowing all the circumstances of them—it turned out that there was an arrangement, that these two persons should sit simul et conjunctim. An award of the same nature was made by Archbishop Whigitt. The answer to the objection was, that it should have been made before issue joined, 'exceptio fori declinatoria est, et ante litem contestatam opponi debet (Parmentier);' the result of the proceedings was this, that the objection not being taken when it ought to have been, the judge decided, that he must proceed to hear the case on the merits, and the result was, the party was dismissed with his costs. In Gaudern v. Selby, there are a variety of seeming irregularities, but if an opportunity had been given for explanation, they might have been explained; at all events they ought to have been objected to before issue was joined on the appeal, but no objection was taken by counsel on behalf of the appellant. It has been attempted to explain this, by saying, that owing to the press of business in the

Admiralty court, in 1798, Lord Stowell had just become the judge of the Admiralty, and that he had signed the appellant's case. But who were the counsel for the appellant? Dr. Arnold and Dr. Sewell; neither of these persons was likely to neglect the interests of their client, they would have seen any objection of the kind, and would have advised their client accordingly; no objection was taken to the proceedings, and the cause proceeded to a hearing. If this judgment of Sir W. Wynne had not met with the approbation of a large majority of the profession; if it had been thought that the case was not rightly decided, and that the rate was invalid, would not the party have been advised to appeal? Under these circumstances, surely Sir W. Wynne must have decided the case on the merits. Be the irregularities what they may, they do not detract one iota from the judgment; Sir W. Wynne must be taken to have decided, that the rate was a good, valid, and legal rate, capable of being enforced in the ecclesiastical court. Sir W. Wynne was the last judge who would have made a law; he invariably took the greatest care to satisfy himself as to what the law was, but when he had once done so, he never hesitated to pronounce what the law was. I look upon his decision as a direct, positive, and absolute decision on the present point, as a precedent binding on this court, and which neither I, nor any judge of this court, am at liberty to depart from. Whether the judgment in the courts of Queen's Bench has shaken the authority of the case, is a question I am not at liberty to enter into; if I was satisfied, that the judgment was not founded on authority, and a just apprehension of the law, I might then refuse to be bound by it; but not thinking so, I have no objection to shelter myself under the authority of Sir W. Wynne, and to express my opinion that, what he has pronounced to be law, is law. That judgment in no way militates against the decision of the Queen's Bench, the point before that court, was not the point decided in Gaudern v. Selby. Did the court of Exchequer chamber repudiate this case as an authority? Undoubtedly they have not so expressed themselves; it was no precedent for the case before that court. Have not the judges of the court of Error said, that 'there is a wide and substantial difference between the cases,—between the case then before them, and a case which might possibly occur,—in fact, this very case. What is the meaning of the term, 'wide and substantial difference?' Must it not mean such a difference as will tend to a different result in the decision of the two cases? So far then from repudiating that case, if compelled to do so, I should rather say they adopted it; otherwise, I think they would not have thrown out the observation, that it was a point deserving of great consideration, on which they reserved to themselves the power of forming an opinion whenever it should occur. Can I suppose those judges would have gone out

"II. And be it further enacted, that whenever the nomination, election, appointment, swearing in, or admission of any such officer or officers as before mentioned shall not take place on such Saturday or Monday, or shall become void, the case shall be and is hereby declared to be within the provisions of an act made and passed in the eleventh year of his late majesty King George the First, intituled, 'An Act for preventing the Inconveniences arising for Want of Elections of Mayors and sheweth, shewing that the two townships contributed in equal portions, the court discharged the rate with costs.

Insufficiency of assessment. At a vestry meeting called, by notice signed by the churchwardens, for the purpose of making a church rate for the repair of the church, a resolution was moved and seconded, "That this vestry, considering church rates at all times bad in principle, and particularly unjust in practice, and quite uncalled for at the present time, resolve to adjourn all further consideration of the subject for which it has been called, till this day twelvemonths," which resolution was carried: it was held, that one of the churchwardens, in having voted in favour of the resolution, and against the rate proposed (of two-pence in the pound), was not guilty of any ecclesiastical offence,—it not being averred, that in consequence of the refusal of the rate, the church was still out of repair. Cooper v. Wickham, 2 Curt. 303.

Costs. In Chesterton & Hutchins v. Farlar, (Ibid. 77,) although a party had successfully resisted payment of a church rate, he was not dismissed, with his full costs, because he had put matters in plea which caused unnecessary expense.

Where a church rate was made to raise 400*l.*, a part of which, amounting to 250*l.*, was intended to pay debts incurred in the previous year by reason of the parishioners having refused a rate, it was pronounced against with costs. Ellis & Gough v. Griffin, Ibid. 673.

And be it further enacted, that the said ecclesiastical commissioners shall make or cause to be made, and from time to time as they shall think necessary, amend or cause to be amended, a valuation, in which valuation allowance shall be made for the deduction hereinafter mentioned, of all and every the revenues, rents, farms, tithes, composition for tithes, estates, demesnes, glebe and other lands, offerings, emoluments, and all other profits, spiritual or temporal, appertaining or belonging, or that shall hereafter appertain or belong, to any archbishopric, bishopric, archdeaconry, deanery, prebend, cathedral church, collegiate church, spiritual corporations, aggregate or sole, parsonage not inappropriate, vicarage, benefice, chantry, free or other chapel, perpetual curacy, or any other benefice or office, or promotion spiritual, of what name, nature, quality, or description soever they be, within that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, and shall have, take, levy, and receive therefrom and thereout, from and after the times when the same shall severally become void next after the passing of this act, and for ever thereafter, a yearly tax, rate, or assessment, computed and imposed upon such valuation, according to the several rates and scales specified and contained in the schedule (A) to this act annexed.

"XV. And be it enacted, that the said yearly tax shall be paid half-yearly in equal moieties to the said ecclesiastical commissioners on each first day of July and first day of January, the first payment on account of such annual tax to be made from and out of each dignity, benefice, office, or promotion spiritual on the first day of July or first day of January, as may happen, next after the first day of May or the first day of November, as may happen, next after the consecration, installation, induction, collation, investing, placing, election, or appointment of the persons succeeding thereto: provided always, that such person shall only be charged or chargeable in such first payment with a proportion of such tax, according to the term during which he shall have enjoyed or been entitled to the profits of such dignity, benefice, office, or promotion spiritual; and provided further, that if any such dignity, benefice, office, or promotion spiritual shall remain void for any time after such days hereinbefore appointed for the payment of the said annual tax, the person succeeding thereto shall be charged and chargeable with all arrears thereof accruing due from and after the last avoidance thereof.

"XVI. And be it enacted, that each and every dignity, benefice, or office, or promotion spiritual, shall be separately and distinctly rated, each in the proper diocese to which it may belong, wheresoever the possessions or profits to them respectively belonging shall happen to be locally situate; and that in the case of any estate, tithes, funds, or other emoluments whatsoever distributable among the members of any corporation aggregate, under or by virtue of any law, statute, by-law, or usage whatsoever, the said tax, rate, or assessment shall be imposed severally upon the separate share or income of each such member respectively, and that each such share or income shall be and become respectively charged therewith from and after the time when the member of such corporation now enjoying or entitled to such share or income shall die, or become disqualified, or in any manner cease to be a member of such corporation, and for ever thereafter.

"XVII. Provided, and be it enacted, that no economy estate or fund appropriated to the purpose of repairing any cathedral or church, or other such like purpose, shall be liable to the said annual tax, rate, or assessment, save only so far as respects the surplus thereof, (if any,) which may be distributable among the dean and chap-account and estimate of the said several matters and things in the said commission so directed to be inquired of by them as aforesaid, and which return the said persons in such commission named are hereby required to make; and the said persons to be therein named as aforesaid, or any two of them, shall likewise have power to examine witnesses upon oath touching or concerning any of the matters or things so to be inquired of by them as aforesaid; provided always, that the said ecclesiastical commissioners under this act may at their discretion direct and order the costs and expenses of issuing said commission, and of all the proceedings thereunder, or any part thereof, to be paid and borne, in such shares or proportions as the said commissioners shall think fit, by such archbishop, bishop, archdeacon, dean, prebendary, parson, vicar, or other spiritual person aforesaid, of and into the revenues, rents, issues, and profits of whom such commission shall be issued to inquire and examine as aforesaid; and which costs and expenses, when so ordered to be paid as aforesaid, shall and may be recovered in the manner hereafter directed and mentioned with respect to the said annual tax; provided always, that no such archbishop, dignitary, or spiritual person shall be required to pay the costs or expenses of any such commission, or any part thereof, unless the valuation of the revenues, issues, and profits to him belonging shall exceed the amount thereof as stated in the last previous return thereof by him made in the proportion of ten pounds per centum.

"XX. Provided, and be it enacted, that in and from the valuation to be made for the purpose of imposing the said rate, tax, or assessment, the said commissioners shall from time to time deduct and allow all rents, synodals, proxies, and other charges, including salaries or stipends for perpetual curates or licensed assistant curates of any benefice the incumbent whereof shall be resident in any such benefice, which any such spiritual person or persons as aforesaid, chargeable with the said annual tax, is or are bound to pay or allow in respect of his or their archbishopric, bishopric, archdeaconry, deanery, prebend, benefice, or other promotion spiritual as aforesaid; and in case there shall be no see house or glebe house or place of residence thereon or thereto respectively belonging, then that the said ecclesiastical commissioners shall deduct and allow such sum as shall appear to be the annual rent or value of the house or place of residence occupied by each such spiritual person, or such lesser sum as the said ecclesiastical commissioners shall in their discretion think fit; and in case any such spiritual person so chargeable as aforesaid shall have expended or laid out in building or improving any house, office, or place of residence as aforesaid, or shall have paid or secured, or shall be chargeable with to his or their predecessors respectively, or his or their respective executors, administrators, or assigns, any sum or sums of money on account of money laid out or expended theretofore on any such buildings or improvements, then in every such case the said ecclesiastical commissioners shall from time to time, in and from such valuation, deduct and allow, on account thereof, in the following manner and according to the following rate; (that is to say,) the annual sum or allowance of ten pounds in the hundred for all and every the sum or sums so expended or laid out in such building or improvement, or paid or secured to be paid, or with which such person as aforesaid shall be chargeable to his predecessor, or his executors, administrators, or assigns, as the case may be, on account of money so theretofore laid out or expended on such building or improvement as aforesaid, and which shall not be by law recoverable by such person, his executors, from or against his successor; and the annual sum or in every hundred for all and every the sum or sums so aid or secured to be paid, or wherewith any such person predecessors, or his executors, administrators, or assigns, money so theretofore laid out or expended as aforesaid, which shall be by law recoverable by such person, his or assigns, from or against his successors.

“XXV. And be it further enacted, that the proportion of said annual tax due on the death of any archbishop, bishop, or other person as aforesaid, shall be deemed and taken to be and shall rank as a judgment debt of such deceased archbishop, bishop, or person as aforesaid, and be paid as such, as if a judgment had been duly acknowledged by or entered against him during his lifetime by the said commissioners for the amount of said tax which shall be so due as aforesaid, and immediately after all other bonâ fide judgments, crown bonds, and recognizances entered up against, acknowledged, or executed by him during his lifetime.

“XXVI. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners under this act shall be deemed and taken to be, in every ecclesiastical court in the United Kingdom, judgment creditors of any archbishop, bishop, or other such person as aforesaid chargeable with any arrears of said annual tax; and in case the executors, or next of kin, or residuary legatees of such archbishop, bishop, or other person as aforesaid shall refuse or neglect to take out probate or letters of administration to him, the said commissioners shall be entitled to have administration of his goods and chattels, rights and credits, granted or committed unto their nominee or nominees in such manner and form, but subject to the same regulations as far as may be, as and under which administrations are usually granted to creditors of other deceased persons, notwithstanding that no affidavit or other evidence shall be made or given in or to such ecclesiastical court of any debt being actually due to such commissioners: provided always, that a certificate under the corporation seal of the said commissioners shall be produced to such ecclesiastical court, alleging that a debt on account of arrears of said annual tax is due to such commissioners, and that they require such administration to be granted to the person to be therein named.

“XXVII. And be it further enacted, that the several archbishops and bishops of Ireland shall, from and after the passing of this act, on the first day of November and first day of May in every year, or at farthest within fourteen days after, make returns to the said commissioners of all, how many, and what archdeacons, deans, provosts, masters, wardens, prebendaries, rectors, parsons, vicars, perpetual curates, incumbents, or other spiritual persons, by whatever name called, known, or described, have been installed, admitted, instituted, collated, or inducted (and of and on whose gift, grant, or presentation such installation, admission, institution, or induction has taken place,) into dignities, benefices, curacies, chapelries, offices, or promotions spiritual, by whatever name called, known, or described, as aforesaid, and by what names and surnames they were so installed, admitted, instituted, collated, or inducted, and each of them were singly and separately called and known by, together with the day and year of the installation, admission, institution, collation, or induction of each of them, and in what county and counties within their respective diocese or dioceses and jurisdictions such archdeaconries, deaneries, prebends, rectories, parsonages, vicarages, curacies, chapelries, or other dignities, benefices, or offices, or promotions spiritual, by whatever name called, known, or described, be and are situated, to the dates of the said respective returns.

“XXXV. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that the said ecclesiastical commissioners under this act shall, from and out of the revenues of each bishopric in the first column mentioned, when and as the same shall become vested in them, make good to the bishop thereof becoming, by virtue of the provision hereinbefore contained, bishop of the bishopric mentioned in conjunction therewith in the second column of the said schedule, the sum or sums of money, (if any,) whereby the revenues of such bishopric in such second column mentioned shall fall short of the revenues of such bishopric in such first column mentioned.

“XXXVI. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted, that all and singular the lands, tenements, and hereditaments respectively belonging or in anywise appertaining to the bishoprics in the first column of the said schedule (B) named, together with all and singular the tithes, rents, and emoluments whatsoever, to such bishoprics respectively appertaining or belonging, shall, in the case of the said bishopric of Waterford, from and after the passing of this act, and in the case of the other bishoprics in the said schedule (B) mentioned, shall, from and after the times when such bishoprics shall become respectively void or united to any other bishopric as aforesaid, be and the same are hereby transferred to and vested in the said ecclesiastical commissioners and their successors for ever, subject however to all leases, rents, charges, and incumbrances, now or at the time of such transfer legally affecting the same, save and except the annual tax, rate, or assessment by this act authorized to be imposed and levied; and that all the rents, revenues, issues, profits, and other emoluments in any manner arising or accruing to the said commissioners and their successors, from or out of any of the said bishoprics shall be received and applied by such commissioners and their successors to, for, and upon the several trusts, uses, and purposes in this act mentioned, and subject to and under the like rules and regulations as are herein declared and expressed of and concerning the said annual tax vested in and made payable to the said commissioners and their successors.

“XXXVII. And be it further enacted, that all arrears of rent and other temporal profits and emoluments which have accrued due for or in respect of the see of Waterford since the said bishopric of Waterford has become void, shall by virtue of this act, and without any writ of restitution or other process whatever, be in like manner transferred to and vested in the said commissioners, to, for, and upon the like trusts, uses, and purposes, and subject to the like rules and regulations as aforesaid; and that the said commissioners shall and they are hereby authorized and empowered, either by action of covenant or debt, or by action on the case, as for use and occupation, to sue for and recover all and every the arrears of rent due, or which shall have accrued or become due since the death of the said late Bishop of Waterford; and that it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to distrain for such arrears and every part thereof, and shall and may avow generally for the same.

“XXXVIII. And provided also, and be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall, and they are hereby required and directed to pay and satisfy the executors or administrators or assigns of Doctor Richard Bourke, late Bishop of Waterford, by such instalments, to be made in such manner and at such periods from and after the passing of this act, as any successor to such bishopric then appointed would have been bound or liable if any such successor had been appointed on or before the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, all and every such sum and sums of money which, pursuant to any law or statute in force in Ireland at the passing of this act, could or might have been recovered by such executor or administrator from or against the successor of the said late Bishop of Waterford, in case this act had not been passed; and provided further, that the said commissioners shall by such instalments, to be made in such manner and at such periods from and after such respective vacancies of the other bishoprics, save and except the bishoprics of Ossory and of Cork and Ross, named in the first column of the schedule (B) to this act annexed as aforesaid, or from and after the annexation thereof to any other bishopric under provisions hereinbefore contained, as any successors thereto would have been respectively bound or liable if such successors had been appointed, pay to and satisfy the person or persons, or his or their respective executors, administrators, or assigns, as the case may be, by whose promotion or death such vacancy shall have occurred or been occasioned, or who shall become the bishop of any united bishoprics, all and every such sum and sums of money as by force of any law or statute, or usage, has or have heretofore been charged upon the said other bishoprics upon the same becoming void respectively, and which would have been payable to and recoverable by such persons respectively, or their respective executors, administrators, or assigns, from or against their respective successors in such bishoprics, in case this act had not been made.

“XXXIX. And be it further enacted, that in the case of the said bishopric of Waterford, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners from and after the passing of this act, and in the case of the other bishoprics named in the first column of the schedule (B) to this act annexed, save and except the bishoprics of Ossory and of Cork and Ross, it shall and may be lawful for such commissioners at and after such times as the said bishoprics shall become respectively vacant, or united to any other bishopric or archbishopric as aforesaid, and such commissioners are hereby empowered, by and with the consent of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors in Ireland, to be testified in writing under his or their hand or hands, to demise for any term of lives or years, or lives and years, with a covenant to make void the said demise in case of assigning or subletting, and for such rent or fine as shall be specified in and by such consent as aforesaid, the see house and offices, and all or any part of the mensal or demesne lands of or belonging to the said bishopric of Waterford, or to the said other bishoprics, save as aforesaid: provided always, that if the bishop for the time being of the bishopric to which such bishopric of Waterford, or such other bishopric, save as aforesaid, shall be united by virtue hereof as aforesaid, do and shall, with and by the like consent as aforesaid, to be testified as aforesaid, elect and choose the see house of such bishopric of Waterford, or such other bishopric, save as aforesaid, to be and continue for ever to be the see house of such united bishopric, it shall not be lawful for the said commissioners so to demise the said see house and offices so selected and chosen as aforesaid, nor the mensal or demesne lands thereof or thereto respectively belonging; and in such case it shall be and become lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby empowered, by and with the like consent as aforesaid, to be testified as aforesaid, to demise, in like manner and upon the like terms as aforesaid, the see house and offices of the bishopric to which such bishopric of Waterford, or such other bishopric, save as aforesaid, shall be united as aforesaid, by virtue of this act, together with any part of the mensal or demesne lands thereof or thereto respectively belonging, instead of the see house and mensal or demesne lands of such bishopric of Waterford or other bishoprics so respectively becoming vacant, or united to any other archbishopric or bishopric, save as aforesaid.

“XL. Provided always, and be it enacted, that if such consents as aforesaid be not recited in the respective deeds of demise aforesaid, and if the said deeds of demise do not contain such covenant as aforesaid against assigning or subletting, or be not respectively executed by the said commissioners in the manner hereinbefore directed as to the execution of deeds by said commissioners, and the said bishops of the bishoprics which shall become united in manner aforesaid, for the time being respectively, that then the said demises shall be respectively null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

“XLI. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, when and so soon as the said bishopric of Ossory and bishopric of Cork

“XLVI. And be it further enacted, that when and as the now archiepiscopal sees of Tuam and Cashel shall become severally void, the Bishops of Tuam and Cashel shall thenceforth for ever respectively cease to have or exercise archiepiscopal jurisdiction within the said provinces of Tuam and Cashel; and all such archiepiscopal jurisdiction as may have theretofore belonged to and been exercised by the Bishop of Tuam shall be transferred to and vested in the Archbishop of Armagh for the time being, and all such archiepiscopal jurisdiction as may have theretofore belonged to and been exercised by the Bishop of Cashel shall be transferred to and vested in the Archbishop of Dublin for the time being; and the Bishops of Tuam and Cashel shall, as well as the other bishops of the said provinces of Tuam and Cashel, be subject to the archiepiscopal jurisdiction of the said Archbishops of Armagh and Dublin respectively; and the said Archbishops of Armagh and Dublin, and their successors respectively, shall have, use, and exercise, without further grant, installation, or ceremony whatsoever, all and singular the metropolitan rights, privileges, franchises, duties, powers, and authorities theretofore exercised or which might have been exercised within the said provinces of Tuam and Cashel respectively: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall in any respect abridge or affect the jurisdiction, privileges, rights, or authority of the Archbishop of Armagh as primate of all Ireland.

“XLVII. And be it enacted, that when and so soon as the now archiepiscopal see of Tuam shall become void, the bishopric of Ardagh, now held therewith, shall be united to and held together with the bishopric of Kilmore, and that the then Bishop of Kilmore shall be and become, by virtue of this act, and without further grant, installation, or ceremony whatsoever, Bishop of Ardagh, and have and exercise all and every the ecclesiastical patronages and jurisdictions in appointing, collating, and presenting to all and every the dignities, rectories, vicarages, curacies, chapelries, or other offices or promotions, by whatever name called, known, or described, heretofore lawfully had, used, exercised, and enjoyed by the Archbishop of Tuam (1) as Bishop of Ardagh, as also the right of nominating and appointing to all and every the offices of chancellor, vicar-general, official, principal registrar, and all other ecclesiastical offices of or belonging to the said bishopric of Ardagh; and his most excellent majesty, his heirs and successors, shall at all times thereafter grant, to be held by one and the same person, the said bishoprics of Kilmore and Ardagh, together with such other bishopric as shall under the provisions of this act be appointed to be held together with such bishopric of Kilmore.

“XLVIII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that all and singular the lands, tenements, and hereditaments, together with all and singular the tithes, rents, and emoluments, to the said bishopric of Ardagh appertaining and belonging, shall, from and after the time when the said now archiepiscopal see of Tuam shall become void as aforesaid, be and the same are hereby transferred to and vested in the said ecclesiastical commissioners and their successors for ever, to and for the like trusts, uses, and purposes, with the like powers, and subject in all respects to such and the like charges, conditions, and regulations, as hereinbefore provided in respect of the bishoprics mentioned in the first column of the said schedule (B) to this act annexed.

“XLIX. And be it enacted, that all and singular the lands, tenements, and hereditaments, with all and singular the tithes, rents, and emoluments whatsoever, appertaining or belonging to the preceptory of Tully or deanery of Christ Church heretofore held and enjoyed in commendam or otherwise by the Bishop of Kildare for the time being, as Dean of Christ Church, or by whatever other title, shall be deemed and taken to be, for the purposes of this act, part of the lands, tenements, ents, tithes, rents, and emoluments, appertaining and belonging to the priory of Kildare, and be in like manner and time transferred to and held by the said ecclesiastical commissioners and their successors, and in all other respects to such and the like provisions.

And it is further enacted, that the said deanery of Christ Church shall, on the next avoidance thereof, be united to and held together with the deanery of Saint Patrick's; and that the then dean of the cathedral of Saint Patrick's, or his successors, shall be the dean of the said deanery of Christ Church, and his successors for ever shall be the deans thereof, by virtue of this act, and without further grant, installation, election, or consecration, any whatsoever, Dean and Deans of Christ Church for ever, and shall have and enjoy all and every the rights, privileges, jurisdiction, and authority which the said deanery of Christ Church, heretofore lawfully had, used, or enjoyed, by the deans thereof: provided nevertheless, that all and every the powers and authorities in appointing or presenting to benefices now belonging, in right of the said deanery, to the Dean of Christ Church, shall, from and after the date of such deanery, vest in and be exercised by the Archbishop of Dublin and his successors for ever.

And whereas an act was passed in the parliament of Ireland in the fortieth year of his majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to amend the laws by which the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons, of Great Britain and the United Kingdom on the Part of Ireland, shall be summoned and assembled in the said Parliament;' and the said act of the parliament of Ireland was made part of an act passed in the parliament of England in the fifth year of his said majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act for the Union of Great Britain and Ireland;' and the said two acts the right of sitting in the house of lords of the said United Kingdom, as between the lords spiritual of Ireland, stands regulated according to the said acts appointed to take place among the archbishops and bishops from session to session, and according to another like rotation to take place among the episcopal sees; and whereas the enactments made for reducing the number of the archiepiscopal sees in Ireland, and the union of certain of the episcopal sees, render it necessary to make provision for accommodating the said rotation to such enactments; be it therefore enacted, that when and as the now archiepiscopal sees of Cashel and Tuam shall become void, they and each of them respectively shall thenceforth come in the rotation by the said acts established amongst the archiepiscopal sees, and shall be included in the rotation by the said acts established to be kept amongst the episcopal sees, and therein take place next before the episcopal sees in the order of rotation of the episcopal sees the bishops whereof may be present in the house of lords in the next parliament for the session last previous; and the rotation by the said acts appointed to take place amongst the episcopal sees shall, in case of each of the said archiepiscopal sees becoming void, proceed to the archbishop whose see is next in rotation to the said archiepiscopal see becoming void as aforesaid.

And be it further enacted, that in the case of the bishopric of Waterford, and in the case of each and singular of the other bishoprics first column of the schedule to this act annexed, when and as they respectively become void, or united to any other bishopric, the rotation by the said acts appointed to take place amongst the episcopal sees shall proceed to the bishop whose see is next in rotation to the said see of Waterford or other bishopric becoming void, or united to any other bishopric as aforesaid; and the said bishop, or other see being or becoming void, or united to any other bishopric as aforesaid, shall for ever thereafter be excluded from and omitted out of the said rotation.

Provided always, and be it enacted, that, save as herein specifically provided, the order of rotation by the said recited acts established shall remain in full force and effect, and subject always to the regulations thereby made in case any archbishop or bishop be a temporal peer of the United Kingdom, or being a temporal peer of the United Kingdom called Ireland should be chosen by the said lords to be one of the representatives of the lords temporal.

"LIV. And whereas the revenues of the archbishopric of Armagh and the bishopric of Derry have increased in such manner that, without affecting the just and competent support of the said dignities, a portion thereof may be beneficially applied for the other purposes of the established church in Ireland, in manner hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore further enacted, that when and so soon as the said archbishopric of Armagh shall become void, the successor thereto, and his successors for ever, Archbishops of Armagh, shall, from and out of the revenues of the said archbishopric, pay over to the said commissioners under this act the annual sum of four thousand and five hundred pounds, the same to be paid by two equal payments on each first day of July and first day of January in every year, the first payment or amount of such annual tax to be made on the first day of July or first day of January, as may happen, after the first half yearly payment of the revenue of such archbishopric of Armagh shall have become due and payable to such successor of the now Archbishop of Armagh: and that the now Bishop of Derry, having freely assented thereunto, shall, from and out of the revenues of the said bishopric, pay over to the said commissioners under this act the annual sum of four thousand and one hundred and sixty pounds; and when and so soon as the said bishopric of Derry shall become void, the successor thereto, and his successors for ever, Bishops of Derry, shall, from and out of the revenues of the said bishopric, pay over to the said commissioners under this act the annual sum of six thousand one hundred and sixty pounds, the same to be paid by two equal payments on each first day of July and first day of January in every year, the first payment thereof to be made on the first day of January in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four; and the sums so from time to time to be paid to the said commissioners by the said Archbishops of Armagh and Bishops of Derry shall be applied to such and the like purposes as the proceeds of said tax hereby vested in the said commissioners and the revenue of such bishoprics so to be united with other bishoprics, and under like rules and regulations.

“LXII. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners under this act are hereby authorised and empowered from time to time, at their discretion, to lay out at interest all or any part of such monies as shall at any time hereafter, by or under the provisions of this act, come to or be in their hands or at their disposal, in the purchase of government or parliamentary funds, stocks, or securities, and no other, either in England or Ireland, and from time to time change, transfer, or sell out such stocks, funds, or securities, or any part thereof, as they may find necessary or convenient.

“LXIII. And be it further enacted, that all and every the rents, issues, and profits of all lands, tenements, or hereditaments, and the said annual tax and the proceeds thereof, and all and every sum and sums of money and securities for money, vested in or which shall accrue to or in any manner come into or be in the hands, power, custody, or possession, or at the disposal of the said commissioners and their successors, under and by virtue of this act, and all interest, dividends, profits, and proceeds thereof, or any part thereof, (save and except the properties and funds respectively bequeathed by Doctor Hugh Boulter and Doctor Richard Robinson, and heretofore vested in the said trustees and commissioners of first-fruits in Ireland as hereinbefore mentioned, and the interest, dividends, and proceeds thereof respectively, and also save and except such other funds and properties as may be hereafter bequeathed to or vested in the said commissioners under this act, and their successors, for any special purposes,) shall be and the same are hereby declared to be applicable, and shall be applied in the manner and for the purposes following; (that is to say,) for the providing, in such manner and proportions, and subject to such regulations, as the said commissioners shall deem fitting, things necessary for the celebration of divine service in the church or chapel of every parish, union, perpetual curacy, or chapelry, or chapel of ease in Ireland, as required and authorized by any rubric or canon in force in England or Ireland, and also for the payment of the salaries for maintenance of the parial clerks or sextons or the clerks or sextons of any chapelry or chapel of ease, and also for defraying such expenses of building, rebuilding, enlarging, or repairing any church or chapel, or fencing and maintaining any churchyard as aforesaid, as have been heretofore defrayed by vestry assessment in Ireland, and also for supplying such parts or proportions of the expenses of providing for the said several matters aforesaid, and for putting into and keeping in repair cathedral and parochial churches, as the said commissioners are hereafter directed to contribute for such purposes; provided always, that in future such parish clerk or sexton shall and may be appointed by the minister, and by him removable, with the consent of the bishop, for any misconduct.

“LXIV. And be it further enacted, that in all cases where, under and by virtue of an act made in the twenty-first year of the reign of King George the Second intituled, ‘An Act for disappropriating Benefices belonging to Deans, Archdeacons, Dignitaries, and other Members of Cathedral Churches, and for appropriating others in their stead, and also for the Removal of the Sites of ruined Cathedral Churches,’ any parochial church shall have been or shall be made, or shall have become, by usage or custom, cathedral and parochial, and in all cases where under and by virtue of an act made in the parliament of Ireland in the thirty-ninth year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, ‘An Act for the repairing of Cathedral Churches in Cases where the Parish Churches have been long in Ruins,’ any cathedral church shall have been or shall be made use of as a parish church, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby required, to contribute to the repairs of such cathedral and parochial churches, in such proportion as has been agreed upon by and between the dean and chapter, or chapter, of such cathedral church, and by the protestant inhabitants of the parish or union in which such church is situate, that the inhabitants thereof should contribute to the rebuilding, enlarging, and putting into and keeping in repair of such cathedral and parochial churches; and if it shall happen that no such agreement as aforesaid shall have been made by and between the parties aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor of

And be it further enacted, that from and after the commencement of this act, the incumbent, or, in his absence, the officiating curate or minister officiating as curate of every parish, union, or chapelry, or perpetual curacy, in Ireland, and the dean and chapter, or chapter, of every such cathedral and parochial church, or cathedral used as a parish church, in Ireland, shall, and he and they are hereby required, on or before the first day of November in this present year, and on or before the first day of June in each and every succeeding year, to prepare or cause to be prepared an estimate of such sum or sums of money as will be necessary, according to his or their belief, for the ordinary repairs of the church or chapel of such parish, union, chapelry, or perpetual curacy, or of such cathedral and parochial church, or cathedral used as aforesaid respectively, for the ensuing year, and for providing things necessary for the celebration of divine service in every such church or chapel of any such parish, union, chapelry, or perpetual curacy, for such ensuing year, which estimate shall contain the several items and particulars of all the matters and things for which such sum or sums shall or may be required necessary for such church or chapel; and such estimate shall be transmitted by such person or persons whose duty it is to prepare the same to the ordinary of the diocese, on or before the first day of December in this present year, and on or before the first day of July in each and every succeeding year, together with a certificate under the hand or hands of such person or persons, stating that according to his or their belief the several matters and things contained in such estimate are or will be necessary or proper to be done or executed, or provided, for the use of or in the church or chapel of such parish, union, chapelry, or perpetual curacy, or such cathedral and parochial church, or cathedral used as aforesaid, as the case may be, and that the charges for the same and every of them as contained in such estimate are reasonable and proper charges: provided always, that such estimate, except in the case of cathedral churches, before it be sent to the ordinary of the diocese, shall be first approved of by the rural dean of the deanery in which the church or chapel to which such estimate shall relate shall be locally situate, which approval shall be certified by signature affixed to such estimate.

“LXVIII. And be it further enacted, that upon the receipt of such estimate and certificate as aforesaid, the archbishop, bishop, or other ordinary of the diocese, wherein such church or chapel shall be situate, or in case of the illness or absence from Ireland of such archbishop, bishop, or other ordinary, or during the vacancy of the see, then that the vicar-general of such diocese shall, and he and they are hereby required, when such estimate shall have been approved of by him, to signify his approbation thereof by certifying such approbation at the foot of such estimate, and to transmit such estimate, with such certificate of approbation thereof, to the said commissioners, who are hereby required to take the same into their consideration; and they are hereby authorized and required to grant the amount required by such estimate and certificate, for the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, or such lesser sum as they in their discretion shall think fit, and to issue and pay the same to such person or persons, in such manner, and subject to such regulations as they shall think fit.

“LXIX. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall pay or cause to be paid on the first day of September in each year, in such manner as they shall think fit, for the maintenance of all and every the person or persons who at the passing of this act shall be clerk or clerks of any parish, union, or chapelry, or of any chapel of ease, (not being within the county of the city of Dublin or the suburbs thereof,) in which there shall be a church or chapel fit for the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the united churches of England and Ireland, the following salaries, so long as such person or persons shall be and continue to be such clerk or clerks as aforesaid; that is to say, for the clerk of every such parish in the church or chapel whereof there shall be divine service usually celebrated on Sundays and festival days, and also on two common days at least in the week, a sum not exceeding twenty pounds nor less than ten pounds, and in all other cases a sum not exceeding ten pounds nor less than five pounds, as and for the maintenance and maintenances of every such clerk respectively for the year next ensuing, and in satisfaction and lieu of all other fees, dues, and allowances whatever, alleged or claimed to be payable to such parish clerk under any usage or custom.

“LXX. And be it enacted, that the said commissioners are hereby authorized and required to grant any sum or sums, not exceeding the sums of twenty pounds and ten pounds respectively above mentioned, which they in their discretion shall think fit, as and for the maintenance of any person or persons who shall from and after the passing of this act be appointed to the office of such clerk or clerks of such churches or chapels as aforesaid, and which salary shall also be in lieu and satisfaction of all other fees, dues, and allowances whatever alleged or claimed to be payable to such clerk under any usage or custom.

“LXXI. And be it further enacted, that if any church or chapel of any parish, or any such cathedral and parochial church, or cathedral used as a parish church, shall by reason of any accidental injury or other unforeseen event, be in immediate want of any extraordinary repairs or rebuilding or expenditure thereon, or if it should become necessary to enlarge any such church or chapel, the said commissioners appointed under this act, upon the application of such dean and chapter, or chapter, or of the incumbent, or in his absence of the officiating curate or minister of such parish, approved by the ordinary of the diocese, shall and may pay and apply such sum or sums of money as they shall think fit and necessary, or as by the provisions of this act they are bound to contribute with respect to any such cathedral and parochial church, or cathedral used as aforesaid, in making or executing such extraordinary repairs, or rebuilding or enlarging of any such church or chapel, or such cathedral and parochial church, or cathedral used as aforesaid.

“LXXII. And be it further enacted, that if any church, chapel, or other building used for religious worship according to the usage of the united church of England and Ireland shall be maliciously or wantonly demolished, pulled down, burned, or set fire to, or in any manner maliciously or wantonly injured or damaged, it shall and may be lawful for the said ecclesiastical commissioners, or any person or persons to be by them deputed in that behalf, by writing under their common seal, to sue for and recover satisfaction and amends for such malicious or wanton demolition, burning, firing, or injury or damage as aforesaid, at the next assizes to be held for the county in which such church, chapel, or other building may be situate, or if in the county of Dublin, at the next presenting term, or if in the city of Dublin, at the next quarter sessions for the said city, by exhibiting to the judge or judges of assize, or to the court of King's Bench for the said county of Dublin, or to the recorder of the city of Dublin if at such quarter sessions, a petition, praying such satisfaction and amends as aforesaid, and therein setting forth particularly the injury or damage done or committed, and the particular amount and nature thereof, by what number of persons such injury or damage was done or committed, and the names or descriptions of such offenders, so far as the same shall be known to the petitioners; and the matter of such petition shall be inquired into by such judge or judges of assize, or court of King's Bench, or recorder, in open court, in the presence of the grand jury impanelled and sworn at such assizes or presenting term or sessions, on the oath of such person or persons as may be produced to testify as to the same; and if on consideration of the matter such judge or judges of assize, or recorder, shall be of opinion that such demolition, burning, firing, or other injury or damage was wantonly or maliciously done, such judge or judges shall inquire into the amount of such injury or damage done or committed as aforesaid; and the said grand jury shall thereupon, and they are hereby required, pursuant to the directions of such judge or judges, court of King's Bench, or recorder as aforesaid, to present such sum or sums of money as shall appear to be the amount of the injury or damage committed as aforesaid to be raised either on the county, county of a city or town, barony, town or towns, parish or parishes, in or near which such offence shall have been committed, and in such proportions as they shall think fit; which sum or sums so presented as aforesaid shall be apportioned, levied, and raised by such ways and means and in such form or manner as other public money presented at the said assizes, or presenting term, or sessions; and such monies shall be paid to the said commissioners, or to the person or persons by them deputed as aforesaid, and be by such commissioners applied to rebuild or repair such church, chapel, or other building, and be for such purpose expended by such person or persons in such manner and subject to such regulations and security for the due application thereof as they shall think fit: provided that if any person or persons shall find himself, herself, or themselves aggrieved by any presentment to be made in pursuance of this act, such person or persons, in case the sum so presented do exceed the sum of five pounds, shall or may, at the said assizes, or presenting term, or sessions, traverse the same; which traverse shall be tried at the same or next ensuing assizes, presenting term, or sessions, as the judge or judges who shall allow the same shall think fit; and if on such traverse the issue shall be found for the traverser, such presentment shall be discharged, otherwise the same shall be final and conclusive to all persons; and in case the said issue shall be found against the traverser, it shall and may be lawful to and for the judge before whom the same shall be tried, in case he shall see fit, to award the costs thereof to be paid by the traverser, to be taxed and certified by the clerk of the crown, the payment whereof may be enforced, if necessary, by a summary order of his majesty's court of King's Bench in Ireland: provided always, that the said commissioners, or the person or persons by them deputed as aforesaid, or the rector, curate, or other officiating minister, or, in case of vacancy of the benefice, any two inhabitants of the parish, within thirty days after such offence shall have been committed, shall give notice thereof to the high constable of the barony and to the churchwardens of the parish where such offence shall have been committed, (if such high constable or churchwardens shall respectively reside within such barony and parish,) who are hereby required forthwith to publish the same within such barony and parish; and if such high constable or churchwardens shall not reside therein as aforesaid, then such notice shall be given to some two inhabitants of such barony or parish.

"LXXIII. And be it further enacted, that in all parishes and places where, by virtue of any law, statute, or custom, provision may heretofore have been made, by vestry or other assessment, for the maintenance of any curate, lecturer, clerk, or other minister or assistant in the celebration of divine worship, or attendant or sexton, such provision by vestry or other assessment shall from and after the passing of this act wholly cease and determine; and it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners under this act, by and out of the proceeds of the said annual tax, and the other funds as aforesaid by this act vested in them, to provide for all such purposes in such manner and proportions as to them shall seem fitting.

"LXXIV. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized, to appoint such sum or sums of money to be expended under such rules and regulations, and security for ensuring the due application thereof, as they in their discretion shall think fit.

"LXXV. And be it further enacted, that every such incumbent, dean and chapter, or chapter, or other person or persons who shall have received from the said commissioners any sum or sums of money for any of the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, shall, within one year from the receipt of such sum or sums of money, return and transmit to the said commissioners a full statement and account of the expenditure of such sum or sums of money, and shall, if required by the said commissioners, verify the truth thereof upon oath, which oath any vicar-general, surrogate, justice of the peace, master or master extraordinary in Chancery, is and are respectively hereby empowered and required to administer.

"LXXVI. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to sue for any part of any sum or sums of money granted for any of the purposes aforesaid which may be unapplied or not duly accounted for as herein directed, or

"LXXVIII. And be it enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners to advance or apply, out of the said surplus fund and monies at their disposal as aforesaid, such sum or sums as they shall think fit for the purpose of building churches or chapels of ease in any parish or place in Ireland, provided that an application in writing shall be made to such commissioners, through the bishop of the diocese, for such purpose, by at least twenty of the inhabitants of such parish or place, accompanied by a plan and estimate of the expense of building such church or chapel of ease, and that such application shall signify the willingness of the persons making the same to contribute or procure to be contributed, in such proportions as may have been mutually agreed upon by them, a sum not less than one fifth of the whole expense as stated in such estimate, for the purpose of building such church or chapel of ease; and provided further, that before any advance for such purpose shall be made by said commissioners, the several sums so subscribed or contributed shall be respectively paid or secured to be paid to the said commissioners, in such manner as the said commissioners shall appoint and require, and that for such purpose the said commissioners shall and they are hereby enabled to take such personal or real security as to them shall seem proper or necessary; and provided further, that such commissioners may employ an architect chosen by themselves to execute such building, and subject to such regulations as such commissioners shall think fit; and provided that if such sum or sums of money shall be paid by instalments, the last instalment shall be at least one fourth part of the whole sum granted for such purpose, and that such instalment shall not be paid until the said commissioners shall be satisfied, by the certificate of a competent architect, that the building of such church or chapel is completed in a sufficient and workmanlike manner, pursuant to the plan and estimate approved as aforesaid, and also by a certificate from the ordinary of the diocese that he, upon inspection thereof, is satisfied with the execution of such work; and the said commissioners shall have the like remedies for the recovery of any part of such sum or sums received from them for the purpose of any such building, which shall not have been duly applied for such purpose, and shall remain over and above after the execution of such purpose, as hereinbefore provided as to sums granted by said commissioners for the purpose of repairing churches or chapels; and the rents or profits which may arise from the letting or sale of pews and seats in such church or chapel shall be and become vested in such commissioners, to be employed by them as other monies which shall come into their hands under the provisions of this act: provided always, that if it shall appear to the said commissioners that, from the peculiar circumstances of any parish or place, it is expedient that a church or chapel of ease should be built in such parish or place, and that such application of twenty inhabitants as aforesaid, or contribution of one fifth of the expenses of building the same as aforesaid, cannot be obtained, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners, upon the application of the bishop of the diocese, to advance, if they shall think fit, the necessary monies out of the funds at their disposal, without such application or contribution as aforesaid.

“LXXIX. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted, that in consideration of such subscriptions as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for such commissioners to allot and assign such and so many of the seats and pews to be erected in said church or chapel of ease as to them shall seem fit or expedient to the persons who may have or entered into such subscription as aforesaid, according to such scheme for the classification thereof, with regard to the amount of their several subscriptions, as shall be proposed by such subscribers, and approved by such commissioners; and the pews so assigned to such subscribers as aforesaid shall be vested in them, and deemed and taken to be personal property, and assignable and transmissible as such.

“LXXX. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be in like manner lawful for the said commissioners, out of any surplus funds or monies at their disposal, from time to time, and in such proportion as they shall think proper, to lend and advance, upon an application accompanied by a plan and estimate made by the incumbent of any benefice or parish, and approved of by the bishop of the diocese, any sum of money not exceeding two years net income of such benefice or parish, to be applied to the purpose of building or improving a mansion or glebe house and offices, or in the purchase of houses already built, for the fit and suitable habitation of such incumbent and his successors, or, if the said commissioners shall so think fit, in the purchase of glebe or demesne lands fit and convenient for the erection of such glebe house and offices.

“LXXXI. And be it further enacted, that the incumbent of any such benefice or parish to whom any such money shall be so advanced, or in case of his death or removal before the repayment of the whole sum so advanced, his successor or successors for the time being, shall, and he and they is and are hereby required and bound to repay to the said commissioners so much of the said sum as shall become due, by instalments during their respective incumbencies, in manner following; that is to say, four pounds per centum of the sum so advanced on the first day of July next after the expiration of one year from the day on which same shall have been so advanced and lent, (or within twenty-one days after,) and four pounds per centum more of the sum advanced on the first day of July in every succeeding year, (or within twenty-one days after,) until the sum so advanced shall be wholly repaid.

“LXXXII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that no person shall be deemed a successor, so as to be charged by or under this act, who shall die or be removed within the space of one year from the death or removal of the incumbent immediately preceding him.

“LXXXIII. Provided also, that no successor shall in any case be liable to pay any such instalment before the first day of July next after he shall have so become a successor chargeable under this act, nor to pay any more than one such instalment on such first day of July, notwithstanding that more than one year may have intervened between the death or removal of the last incumbent who had become chargeable with the payment of any instalment under this act and such first day of July.

“LXXXIV. Provided also, that in cases where such last preceding incumbent shall die or be removed before he shall have received the whole of such sum so granted by way of loan, every person who shall be a successor of any such incumbent should be bound and obliged to repay to the said commissioners appointed

"XCVI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that in case an incumbent of any such benefice, living, or curacy, or any parson, vicar, curate, minister, whose maintenance shall be augmented by the grant of such annual salary or otherwise by the said commissioners under this act, or which shall have been at any time heretofore augmented by the said trustees and commissioners of first-fruits in Ireland, shall accept and take any other benefice, living, or curacy, as he be instituted and inducted into the possession of the same, that then the said benefice, living, or curacy which shall have been so augmented shall from thenceforth be and be deemed and adjudged absolutely void to all intents and purposes whatsoever; and that it shall be lawful for the archbishop, bishop, or other patron to collate or present thereto, in like manner and form as if the former incumbent had died or resigned, any licence, union, or other dispensation to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding; and that every licence, union, or dispensation, of whatever name or names, quality or qualities whatsoever, obtained contrary to the true meaning and intention of this act, shall be absolutely void and of none effect; and in case any person already possessed of any benefice, living, or curacy shall be collated or instituted to any of the said benefices, livings, or curacies which have been heretofore augmented as aforesaid by the said trustees and commissioners of first-fruits in Ireland, or which shall be so augmented by the commissioners under this act aforesaid, every such collation, presentation, or nomination shall be utterly void to all intents and purposes whatsoever; provided always, that no lapse shall incur upon any avoidance of any benefice, living, or curacy which shall happen in consequence of this act, until six months after notice shall be given, in all cases in which notice is now by law required, to the person or persons having a right to present or nominate to the same, by the archbishop or bishop of the diocese, or other ordinary for the time being, in writing under his or their hand and archiepiscopal or episcopal seal or seals of office respectively.

"XCVII. And whereas the provision for augmenting such poor livings as shall be thought proper by the said commissioners to be so augmented is intended to extend not only to parsons, vicars, and curates who come in by presentation or collation, institution and induction, or licence, but likewise to such ministers who come in by donation, or are only stipendiary preachers or curates in and of improper or appropriate parishes, officiating in any church or chapel where the liturgy and rites of the united churches of England and Ireland as by law established shall be used and observed, some of which may happen not to be corporations nor have a legal succession, and therefore are incapable of taking a grant of such perpetual augmentation by a salary, or endowment of such tithes or land, as is hereby intended; and in some places it might be in the power of the improper donor, parson, or vicar to withdraw the allowance now or heretofore paid to the minister or curate serving the cure, or, in case of a chapelry, the incumbent of the mother church might refuse to employ a curate, or permit a minister duly nominated or licensed to officiate in such augmented chapel, and might officiate therein himself, and take the benefit of the augmentation, though his living be above the value of those which are hereby intended to be augmented, and the maintenance of the curate or minister would thus be sunk, instead of being augmented; therefore be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all such churches, curacies, and chapels which shall at any time hereafter be augmented by the said commissioners shall be and are hereby declared and established to be, from the time of such augmentations, perpetual cures and benefices; and the ministers duly nominated and licensed thereunto, and their successors respectively, shall be and be esteemed in law bodies politic and corporate, and shall have perpetual succession by such name and names as in the grant of such augmentation shall be mentioned, and shall have a legal capacity, and are hereby enabled to take in perpetuity, to themselves and their successors, all such lands and tenements and tithes as shall be granted to or purchased for them by the said commissioners, or such annual salaries as shall be so granted pursuant to this act, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding; and that the impropriators or patrons of any churches or donatives of the benefices so augmented for the time being, and their heirs, and the rectors and “CVII. And provided also, and be it enacted, that any such division of any parish shall take effect and come into operation upon the death or removal of any person who shall be the incumbent of any such divided parish at the time of the commencement of this act or at the time when such division shall be made as aforesaid, as the case may be, and not sooner; and that then and for ever thereafter such townland, townlands, district, parcel or parcels of land, and all such tithe, composition for tithe, dues, and ecclesiastical emoluments whatsoever therefrom respectively arising or to arise, shall cease to be or to be deemed a part or parts of or annexed to such divided parish, and shall become and be and be deemed a part or parts of or annexed to such augmented parish or parishes, to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

“CVIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, with such approbation and consent and in such manner as are hereinbefore last mentioned, to divide and separate the glebe belonging to any such parish so divided, and to grant a portion of such glebe to the incumbent of such divided portion of the parish or of such augmented parish, as the case may be, as and for a glebe for such parish, subject, however, to the laws now in force or that may hereafter be in force for the exchange of glebes; and that all such divisions of glebes shall be good, firm, and valid in law; and that such part or parts of such glebe as shall be so annexed shall be always deemed and taken to be the glebe or glebes of such parish or parishes to which the same shall be so annexed; and that the incumbent or incumbents of such parish or parishes to which the same shall be so annexed shall hold and enjoy such part or parts of such divided glebe, being so annexed, in as full and ample a manner to all intents and purposes as if such part or parts of such glebe had been always held with and enjoyed as the glebe belonging to such parish or parishes to which the same shall be so annexed, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

“CIX. And be it further enacted, that whenever any patron of any parish so to be divided as aforesaid shall happen to be a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert, it shall and may be lawful for the guardian, committee, or husband of every such patron to consent to such division as aforesaid for such patron, and to certify his, her, or their consent under his, her, or their hand and seal or hands and seals, for such patron, who shall be bound thereby in such manner, and the same shall be as valid and effectual, as if he or she had been of full age, or sound mind, or feme sole, and had expressed such consent as aforesaid.

“CX. And be it further enacted, that before any such division or augmentation of any parish or parishes as last aforesaid shall be made and concluded, the bounds of such parish or parishes shall be ascertained by instrument in writing in manner following; (that is to say,) the said commissioners under this act, by instrument in writing under their seal, shall and may set out and describe the bounds of such parishes, and the several townlands or other parcels or denominations of lands which shall be comprised within such parishes respectively; and a copy of such instrument shall, within fourteen days from the date thereof, together with a map and survey of the said parishes respectively, and a statement of the annual value of heirs or successors, were thereunto signified by letters patent under the great seal of Ireland; provided always, that such consent of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland shall be enrolled in the rolls office of the high court of Chancery in Ireland, together with the instrument making and setting forth such division as aforesaid, for the enrolment of which consent the sum of three shillings and sixpence, and no more, shall be paid, over and above the expenses usually paid to the engrossing clerk for the same.

"CXIV. And be it further enacted, that where any person or persons, other than the crown, or an archbishop or bishop, shall be patron or patrons of any living or parish so to be divided as aforesaid, or shall be entitled to present a clerk thereto upon any vacancy or turn thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners under this act, if they shall think fit so to do, out of the surplus funds remaining in their hands, upon obtaining the consent of such patron or patrons to such division of any such parish as aforesaid, to pay unto such patron or patrons such sum or sums of money as the said commissioners shall think fit as a compensation for the diminution of the annual value of such living or parish, so that such sum or sums of money shall in no case exceed twelve years purchase of the annual sum by which the income or annual value of such divided parish shall be reduced by means of and in consequence of such division as aforesaid; and such sum or sums of money shall be and become vested in and settled upon the same person or persons, and for and upon the same uses, estates, trusts, and limitations, and subject to the same powers, conditions, charges, and incumbrances as the advowson of or right of presentation to such divided parish was vested in, settled upon, or subject to, or would have been vested in, settled upon, or subject to, or as near thereto as the nature of the case may admit.

"CXV. And be it further enacted, that where any person or persons, other than the crown, or an archbishop or bishop, shall be patron or patrons of any living or parish so to be augmented by the annexation thereto of any part of any such divided parish, or shall be entitled to present a clerk thereto upon any vacancy or turn thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners under this act, and they are hereby directed and required, and shall be entitled to demand, take, and receive from such patron or patrons of any such augmented parish or parishes such sum or sums of money as shall be mutually agreed upon by and between such commissioners and the respective patron or patrons, or, in case of disagreement between them, shall be fixed and determined by three arbitrators, to be chosen in the same manner as in the case of arbitrators appointed for the settlement of differences between the said commissioners and parties applying for the purchase of perpetuities under this act, and under and subject to the like regulations, so far as the same are applicable; which sum or sums of money so to be received by the said commissioners shall be added to the general funds of the said commissioners for the purposes of this act; and in default of payment of such sum or sums of money to the said commissioners within six calendar months after a demand thereof by notice in writing shall have been made and served upon such patron or patrons, the said sum or sums of money shall be and become a charge or lien on such advowson or on the inheritance of the same, and be paid and payable to the said commissioners, with interest thereon, in priority to all other charges or incumbrances upon such advowson.

"CXVI. And be it enacted, that whenever any benefice whereof the king shall be patron, or the right of presentation or collation whereto shall be in any archbishop, bishop, or other dignitary, or in any ecclesiastical corporation, shall, after the passing of this act, become void in any manner whatsoever, and that it shall appear to the commissioners under this act, by the certificate of the ordinary, that divine worship shall not have been celebrated therein for the three years next preceding the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, then and in such case it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, if they shall so think fit, by an instrument under their corporate seal, to direct that the appointment, presentation, or collation of any clerk to such benefice shall be suspended until such commissioners shall think fit by a like instrument otherwise to direct; and in the “CXVII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that whensoever the said commissioners under this act shall propose to suspend the appointment, presentation, or collation to any benefice, under the power hereinbefore vested in them, or of removing such suspension if it shall have taken place, they shall in either of such cases give notice of such intention to the archbishop or bishop of the diocese in which such benefice shall be situate, unless he happen to be one of the said commissioners: and such archbishop or bishop shall be associated with the said commissioners in determining upon the propriety of directing or removing such suspension as aforesaid, and shall and may vote upon all questions relating thereto as if he were a commissioner, and be deemed and taken to be for such purpose or purposes a member of the said corporation of the ecclesiastical commissioners of Ireland.

“CXVIII. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that in any case in which the said commissioners shall direct that the appointment, presentation, or collation of a clerk to any benefice shall be suspended, a full statement of the reasons on which such direction was founded, comprising the several particulars of the extent of such benefice, its annual value, the amount of the population, the number of protestants residing within it, the condition of the church and glebe house, if any, and the quantity of land belonging to it, shall be entered in a book to be kept for that purpose, and preserved among the records of the commission.

“CXIX. And whereas by an act made in the parliament of the United Kingdom, in the fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws for enforcing the Residence of Spiritual Persons on their Benefices, to restrain Spiritual Persons from carrying on for the Support and Maintenance of Stipendiary and empowered to pay over certain sums therein to commissioners of first-fruits in Ireland, for certain years; be it therefore enacted, that all and every payers of this act, in the manner and form and for the time by said recited act, with respect to payments to said commissioners of first-fruits, shall be as good, valid, and effectual to such sums, when paid, shall be applied by the commissioners in said recited act mentioned, in the same manner as had been made to the said trustees and commissioners and had not been passed.

commissioners under this act may hereafter purchase parishes for which they are purchased, but so near as may be and suitable for the residence of the officiating minister; be it enacted, that such houses, having been previously approved by the said commissioners, and duly registered in the said act, shall be deemed houses of residence appertaining to such purposes whatsoever.

be it enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners to advance all and every such sum and sums of money, and to do and perform such acts, matters, and things, and in such manner and form respectively, as by the said act in force at the passing of this act the trustees and commissioners in Ireland might or were empowered or authorized to do and done, if this act had not been passed; all which acts, matters, and things, when made, entered into, shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes as if the same had been enacted or declared to the contrary or otherwise by any other act hereafter to be made; and that all and every breach of covenant, or otherwise, which has been made or committed at any time hereafter, if this act had not been made, passed, and carried on by the said trustees and commissioners, shall and may be commenced, taken, and carried on by the commissioners of this act, in the name of their respective parishes, expressly named in any deed, covenant, agreement, or by act or acts of parliament, on or under or by virtue of the said act, as if the same might have been and shall be so commenced, that all and every sum and sums to be recovered in and by the said act shall and may be applied and disposed of by the said commissioners of this act as they in their discretion shall think fit, and the said commissioners shall pay, satisfy, and discharge hereby vested in them, all debts legally due by said commissioners of first-fruits in Ireland, whether for and on account of tithes, bills of costs, or otherwise, or any other account of this act, which said trustees and commissioners shall be bound to pay if this act had not been passed; and the said commissioners shall execute all and every covenant, contract, or agreement made or entered into by the said trustees and commissioners before the passing of this act, and do and perform all and every act, matter, and thing so contracted to be done, performed, and executed by the said trustees and commissioners of first-fruits, and which the said trustees and commissioners would have been bound to perform, execute, and do, if the same had been enacted, that in case of any refusal or neglect of any archbishop, dean, prebendary, parson, vicar, curate, incumbent, or any other person, as aforesaid, by whatever name called, known, or otherwise, or persons whatsoever, to make or cause to be made such annual sum as may be necessary, at the time of disappropriating the said tithes or portions of tithes or glebes, to make up such full annual value of four thousand pounds.

“CXXVI. And be it further enacted, that whenever, pursuant to the provisions aforesaid, any rectory, vicarage, tithes or portions of tithes, or glebe or portions thereof, shall be united to any vicarage or perpetual curacy, then and in such case the right of presentation to such rectory, vicarage, or perpetual curacy, in any and every vacancy thereof happening at any time after such disappropriation and union as aforesaid, shall belong to and be exercised by the king’s majesty, his heirs or successors, or by the archbishop, bishop, or other dignitary, or corporation or person having the right of grant, nomination, election, or appointment to the dignity, prebend, or canonry whereunto such rectory, vicarage, tithes or portions of tithes, or glebe or portion thereof, had, before such disappropriation, been united or annexed, and the dignitary, corporation, or person having the previous right of presentation to such rectory, vicarage, or perpetual curacy, in such turns or rotation and according to such manner as the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors and privy council of Ireland shall direct.

“CXXVII. And whereas the duties of archbishops and bishops in Ireland will be, by the aforesaid unions and consolidations of dioceses, considerably increased: and whereas doubts have arisen whether archdeacons in Ireland can lawfully exercise the same powers as may be exercised by archdeacons in England; be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the several archdeacons in Ireland shall have and shall be deemed and taken to have and exercise all such powers, rights, authorities, privileges, and jurisdictions within their respective archdeaconries as any archdeacons in England have or may exercise within their respective archdeaconries by any law, statute, canon, or general custom in force in England.

“CXXVIII. And whereas it is expedient that the tenants or lessees of the lands of archbishops or bishops, and other sole ecclesiastical corporations, in Ireland, should be empowered to purchase a perpetual estate or interest in such lands and premises; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the commencement of this act it shall and may be lawful for any tenant or tenants, lessee or lessees, holding or who shall hold under or by virtue of any lease or contract for term of twenty-one years, or for term of twenty-one years or three lives, or for three lives, or for term of forty years, immediately from and under any archbishop or bishop, or other sole ecclesiastical corporation, in Ireland, any lands, premises, or hereditaments belonging to the respective sees or other spiritual promotion or dignity of any such archbishop or bishop or other sole ecclesiastical corporation, to purchase the fee simple and inheritance of and in the said lands, premises, and hereditaments so held by him or them as aforesaid, in the manner and at the rate of purchase money, and subject to the perpetual annual rents, and to the provisos, restrictions, regulations, and conditions hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) that it shall and may be lawful for any such tenant or lessee, by notice in writing under his hand, to notify to the said commissioners under this act, and to such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person under whom such lands, premises, or hereditaments are or shall be held, that he, such tenant or lessee, is ready and willing to purchase the fee simple and inheritance as aforesaid of and in the said lands, premises, or hereditaments so held by him under such archbishopric or bishopric, or other spiritual promotion or dignity, in the manner and pursuant to the provisions of this act; and that thereupon the said commissioners shall and may, and they are hereby authorized and required, to ascertain the annual rent or rents now thereby reserved and payable by virtue of such lease or contract out of the said lands and premises, and the amount of the sum or sums of money theretofore paid or agreed to be paid as and for the fine or fines and fees for renewal of any such lease or interest of and in the said lands and premises, in the case of leases usually renewed every or every alternate or every third year, for and during the period of nine years next preceding the service of such notice; and in the case of leases usually renewed at longer intervals, and in the case of leases for lives, for and during such period as shall include the three last previous occasions of such of the annual or other renewal fine or fines and fees which he agreed to be paid, or payable, or which ought to have been paid the said lands and premises for and during such period as aforesaid to the theretofore accustomed mode of renewing such lease or to take and estimate accordingly the yearly average of such annual or fines; which said yearly average of such renewal fines, together with the addition to the said annual rent or rents theretofore reserved as aforesaid out of the said lands and premises, shall be the amount to be reserved and made payable in and by the deed of conveyance hereinafter mentioned, subject only to such approval as hereinafter provided; and if it shall happen that no fine or fines have been payable for renewing any such lease or interest as aforesaid for any or any part of such period, preceding the service of such notice that then in every such case it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to take and estimate the yearly average of such renewal fines and to such proportion of the improved yearly value as may, by the diocese or other spiritual promotion or dignity under which the premises are held, have determined the amount of fines payable on lands and premises held thereunder by like tenure and demise, (the yearly value to be ascertained by all such ways and means as the commissioners shall think fit, or by the issuing of a commission as last aforesaid subject to the like rules and regulations as such commission last aforesaid by reference to all the circumstances of the case, and to the tenant's beneficial interest in such lands and premises, according to the custom, to fix, ascertain, and determine the yearly average of such renewal fees; which said yearly average, estimated, ascertained, and determined in such way or manner as aforesaid, shall, together with and in addition to the annual rent or rents theretofore reserved and payable out of the said premises, be the amount of annual rent to be thereafter reserved and made payable out of the said lands and premises to such archbishop or his ecclesiastical person, and his and their successors respectively, in and by the deed of conveyance or demise hereinafter mentioned, subject only to such approval as hereinafter mentioned, and subject to variation according to the price of wheat or oats, as hereinafter provided.

"CXXXII. Provided, and be it further enacted, that in the case of lives the said commissioners under this act shall compute the yearly value of the renewal fines and fees in such manner as to them shall seem just and equitable to the average duration of lives and beneficial interests.

"CXXXIII. And be it further enacted, that when and so often as the annual rent so to be thereafter reserved and made payable out of the said lands and premises to such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person or his successors, shall have been ascertained and determined by the said commissioners under this act, by any of the ways or means hereinbefore mentioned, the said commissioners shall, and they are hereby directed to do so, in writing to the said archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person to whom the said lands and premises are or shall be held as aforesaid, the said tenant or lessee of the said lands and premises who shall be said, the amount of the said annual rent so reserved and made payable out of the said premises, together with the amount of pensioners computed as hereinafter mentioned, and the amount of the said annual rent so reserved and made payable out of the said premises, shall be the amount of annual rent to be thereafter reserved and made payable out of the said lands and premises to such archbishop or his ecclesiastical person, and his and their successors respectively, in and by the deed of conveyance or demise hereinafter mentioned, subject only to such approval as hereinafter mentioned, and subject to variation according to the price of wheat or oats, as hereinafter provided.

it further enacted, that whenever any tenant or who shall at any time hereafter hold lands or premises, the said commissioners under this act may, by the issuing of a commission as last aforesaid, subject to the like rules and regulations as such commission last aforesaid by reference to all the circumstances of the case, and to the tenant's beneficial interest in such lands and premises, according to the custom, to fix, ascertain, and determine the yearly average of such renewal fees; which said yearly average, estimated, ascertained, and determined in such way or manner as aforesaid, shall, together with and in addition to the annual rent or rents theretofore reserved and payable out of the said premises, be the amount of annual rent to be thereafter reserved and made payable out of the said lands and premises to such archbishop or his ecclesiastical person, and his and their successors respectively, in and by the deed of conveyance or demise hereinafter mentioned, subject only to such approval as hereinafter mentioned, and subject to variation according to the price of wheat or oats, as hereinafter provided.

of such purchase money mentioned and specified in and by such certificate, the said commissioners shall and they are hereby required, in such manner as hereinbefore provided as to the execution of deeds by them, to execute, seal, and deliver a deed of conveyance to such tenant or lessee of the fee-simple and inheritance of the said lands and premises, when the same shall be tendered for execution by the said tenant or lessee, unto and to the use of such tenant or lessee, his heirs and assigns, as he or they shall appoint, subject to such annual rent as aforesaid; and if the said lands and premises so to be purchased shall at the time of such purchase belong to or be held under any archbishop or bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, then and in such case on the production by the said tenant or lessee to the said archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person of the said notice or certificate so delivered by the said commissioners as aforesaid, specifying the amount of such annual rent to be reserved and made payable in and by the said deed of conveyance, and specifying the amount of purchase money to be paid for such purchase as aforesaid, and upon production of such receipt of the said cashier or cashiers for such purchase money as aforesaid, such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person shall, and he and they is and are hereby required and directed to execute, seal, and deliver a deed of conveyance of the fee-simple and inheritance of the said lands and premises to such tenant or lessee, when the same shall be tendered for execution, subject to the annual rent so ascertained as aforesaid; and if such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person shall, on the production of such notice or certificate and receipt as aforesaid, refuse or neglect to execute such deed of conveyance when tendered for execution as aforesaid, for the space of two calendar months after such tender shall have been made as aforesaid, then, upon satisfactory proof being made to the said commissioners of such refusal or neglect, by affidavit to be sworn before any judge, surrogate, vicar-general, master or master extraordinary in Chancery, or justice of the peace, which affidavit or oath they are hereby respectively empowered to take or administer, or upon oath of a credible witness to be examined by the said commissioners, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby empowered and required, to execute, seal, and deliver the said deed or deeds of conveyance in the name of and on behalf of the said archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person so refusing or neglecting to execute the same as aforesaid, and to affix the corporate seal of the said commissioners to such deed or deeds, and to certify the cause of their so executing the same by writing at the foot of or on the back of the said deed or deeds; and such execution of the said deed or deeds by the said commissioners shall be as valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if the said deed or deeds had been duly executed, by the said archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, in pursuance of this act.

“CXXXVII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that the recitals in any such deed of conveyance shall for all purposes whatever be deemed conclusive evidence of the truth of the facts therein stated.

“CXXXVIII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall, and they are hereby directed, at the request of either party, to insert or cause to be inserted in each and every the said deed or deeds of conveyance a statement of the average price of wheat or oats (whichever of the two they shall consider as the corn principally grown in the county or district where such lands are situate) for the period of ten years immediately preceding the first day of May next before the service of such notice by such tenant or lessee as aforesaid, calculated upon the returns advertised in the Dublin Gazette during such period of ten years, which average price the said commissioners are hereby required and empowered to calculate and ascertain from such returns as aforesaid.

“CXXXIX. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that the said tenant or lessee so purchasing the fee simple and inheritance of and in such lands and premises as aforesaid shall seal and deliver a counterpart or counterparts of such deed or deeds of conveyance, one part whereof shall be delivered to the said archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or to the said commissioners, as the case may be, to whom respectively the said annual rent shall be so reserved and made payable as aforesaid.

“CXLV. And be it further enacted, that for the purpose of ascertaining the respective amount of purchase money to be paid by any such tenant or lessee as aforesaid for the purchase of the fee-simple and inheritance of and in any such lands and premises as aforesaid, the said commissioners appointed under this act shall inquire and ascertain, by the issuing of a commission, with the like powers and authorities and subject to the like regulations as any other commission to be issued under this act, or by such other ways and means as to them shall seem fit, the full improved yearly value of the said lands and premises, such full and improved annual value to be taken and estimated according to the usual and accustomed mode of ascertaining and estimating the same by the archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical corporation sole in whose diocese or dignity or promotion such lands and premises shall be respectively situate, and shall estimate and compute, according to the best of their knowledge, skill, and ability, the value of the fee-simple and inheritance in such lands and premises, subject to the annual rent to be reserved and made payable thereout by the deed of conveyance to be executed in manner hereinbefore appointed; and having estimated and computed the value of such fee-simple and inheritance, subject to such rent, the said commissioners shall deduct therefrom four pounds per centum on the amount thereof, and ascertain and declare the amount of such value so reduced; and the said commissioners shall also estimate and compute the value of the interest in such lands and premises possessed by such tenant or tenants, lessee or lessees, under his, her, or their subsisting lease, and shall determine and declare the difference between the value reduced by such per centage as aforesaid of such fee-simple and inheritance, subject to the rent aforesaid, and the value of the interest possessed under such lease, which difference shall be the amount of purchase money to be paid by such tenant or tenants, lessee or lessees, for the perpetuity to be acquired under this act; and the said commissioners shall insert such amount in the certificate of the terms of such purchase to be by them granted to such tenant or lessee as hereinbefore provided: provided always, that in case any such tenant or lessee shall be dissatisfied with the amount of purchase money adjudged payable in manner aforesaid by the said commissioners, the matter shall be referred to three arbitrators, one to be appointed by the said commissioners, another by such tenant or lessee, and the third by the two arbitrators appointed as aforesaid, within ten days after notice in writing to be given by such commissioners, tenant, or lessee for that purpose; and in case of the death or incapacity, or refusal to act of any or either of the said arbitrators, another shall be appointed in his stead by the party by whom or in whose behalf he was so appointed, or by the said two arbitrators appointed by the parties, as the case may be, within ten days next after notice thereof; and the said arbitrators, or any two of them, shall and are hereby authorized and empowered, by actual survey or valuation, or by the examination of witnesses upon oath (which oath the said arbitrators are hereby empowered to administer), and by such other ways and means as they shall think proper, to compute, estimate, and determine, in like manner as the said commissioners are hereinbefore directed, the amount of purchase money payable for the perpetuity to be acquired under this act, and to make their award therein by writing under their hands and seals, or under the hands and seals of any two of them; and such award shall be binding upon the said commissioners, and they shall amend accordingly the certificate of the terms of the purchase to be by them granted to such tenant or lessee, or grant a new certificate in lieu thereof; and the expenses of such arbitration shall be borne by the said commissioners, or by the said tenant or tenants or lessee or lessees, as such arbitrators shall direct.

“CXLVI. And be it further enacted, that the said annual rent so reserved and made payable by any such tenant or lessee or grantee out of or in respect of any such lands and premises, in any such deed or deeds of conveyance thereof as aforesaid, and every such revised and new annual rent as aforesaid, shall be recovered and recoverable by any such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, and his successors, or by the said commissioners and their successors, as the case may be, by all or any of the ways, means, or remedies which, according to any law or statute now in force in Ireland or hereafter to be made, is or are or shall be provided for the recovery of any rent service upon any lease for life or for years executed by any landlord or person seized in fee-simple, and subject to all the like rules and regulations by statute or otherwise, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that if in any action of ejectment to be brought on account of the nonpayment of any such annual rent, pursuant to the statutes in force in Ireland as to nonpayment of rent, judgment shall be had and given for the plaintiff in such action, and execution shall have been executed, and such tenant, lessee, or grantee who shall have so purchased the fee-simple and inheritance as aforesaid of and in such lands and premises, his assignee or assignees, or the person or persons who shall be then entitled to his estate or interest therein, shall not, within six months from the time of such execution executed, do such act or acts or take such proceedings as are or shall be by law necessary for the redemption of the said lands and premises from the said judgment and execution, pursuant to the said statutes, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful for any tenant, under-tenant, or owner of any derivative lease, estate, or interest in the said lands and premises, who shall have contributed to the purchase of the fee-simple and inheritance as aforesaid, his assignee or assignees, within nine months after such execution executed, to do such act or acts or take such proceedings for the redemption of the said lands and premises from the said judgment and execution, and for obtaining relief in respect of the same, as under the said recited statutes any mortgagee of a lease might do or take for the redemption of the said lease, or his estate or interest therein, from any judgment and execution in any action of ejectment for nonpayment of rent, pursuant to the said statutes, and for obtaining relief in respect of the same, and with the like effect to all intents and purposes; and after such redemption the sum or sums of money so paid or advanced for or on account of such redemption, and the costs thereof, shall be and be deemed a lien and charge upon such estate or interest of such tenant or person so failing or neglecting to pay the same, or to take such proceedings for such redemption as aforesaid, and shall be payable, with interest, to such person who shall have so paid or advanced such sum or sums, or obtained such redemption, or the same shall be recoverable by him (at his election) from such person so failing or neglecting as aforesaid, in and by any action of debt.

“CXLVII. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any owner, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, at any time after the passing of this act, upon a division of the lands or premises held by him or them, either by sale or otherwise, (except by lease or demise at rack rent,) to make an application in writing to any archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person under whom he or they shall then hold the said lands or premises, or to the commissioners under this act in case the said lands and premises shall have been vested in and transferred to the said commissioners, signifying the desire of such applicant that the yearly rent or rents then charged or to be charged on the said lands and premises by such deed of conveyance as aforesaid shall be divided and apportioned upon parts of the said lands and premises only; and thereupon in each and every such case such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or the said commissioners, as the case may be, shall and he or they is and are hereby authorised and required to divide or apportion the whole or any part of the said yearly rent or rents as aforesaid in such manner and proportions as by such application may be required, regard being had to the security of the several parts or proportions of the said yearly rent or rents; and in case of any disagreement in respect of such apportionment, then the same shall be made by one or more valuers, to be in all cases nominated by the said commissioners; and the expense of such apportionment shall be in all cases defrayed by the party applying for the same; and such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or the said commissioners, or, in case of such disagreement as aforesaid, such valuator or valuers shall declare what parts and proportions of the said yearly rent or rents respectively shall in future be severally charged upon any part or parts of the said lands and premises, and shall state the names and denominations, the numbers of acres, and the metes and bounds of each portion, and the amount of rent to be reserved and made payable out of each such portion respectively; and after every such apportionment the yearly rents or sums so apportioned shall be reserved and be made and be payable in such parts and proportions, and chargeable only upon such proportions of the said lands and premises as shall be so declared to be liable to the payment thereof respectively; and in case the said apportionment shall be made before the execution of a conveyance of the fee-simple and inheritance, pursuant to this act, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful for such archbishop or bishop, or for the said commissioners, to execute separate conveyances, in the manner herein before directed for executing conveyances, of each such part or proportion of the said lands and premises, subject only to the proportionate rent payable in respect thereof; and in case a conveyance shall have been made or executed by such archbishop or bishop, or the said commissioners, of the said lands and premises, then and in every such case the said archbishop or bishop, or the said commissioners, shall execute, under his or their respective seal, a certificate setting forth the said apportionment, and the amount of the rent to be charged or chargeable upon each portion of the said lands and premises, and shall cause the same to be registered in the registry of the diocese wherein the said lands and premises shall be situate, and also to be enrolled in the rolls office of the high court of Chancery along with and annexed to the enrolment of the deed of conveyance of such lands and premises as aforesaid; and after such registry and enrolment of such certificate the said lands and premises shall thenceforward stand and be charged and chargeable with the said yearly rent or sums in such parts and proportions only and in such manner as shall be specified in such certificate; and a copy of such enrolment, duly compared and attested, shall be conclusive evidence of the amount of rent with which each respective portion of the said lands and premises stands charged and chargeable.

“CXLVIII. And be it further enacted, that immediately upon the execution of such deed of conveyance as aforesaid of the said lands and premises, under the provisions of this act, the said lands and premises in the said deed of conveyance mentioned, and the estates or interests thereby so granted, shall thereupon respectively go to and be vested in, settled upon, and enjoyed by the same person or persons, for the like estate, estates, or interests, and to and upon the same uses, trusts, intents, and purposes respectively, (or as near thereto as the nature of each case and the difference of interest will admit,) as the said lands and premises stood settled or limited to, for, or upon, or such of them as at the time of making such conveyance shall be existing undetermined and capable of taking effect; provided always, that the execution of such deed of conveyance as aforesaid shall operate as and be and be deemed to be, to all intents and purposes, a surrender of all and every the then previously subsisting term or terms of years, estate, or interest in the said lands and premises derived from or under such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or the said commissioners, as the case may be; and the same and every of them shall thenceforth cease, determine, and be for ever extinguished.

“CXLIX. And be it further enacted, that whenever any such tenant or lessee who shall have purchased and acquired as aforesaid the fee-simple and inheritance of and in such lands and premises previously held by him as immediate and superior tenant under such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or the said commissioners appointed under this act, shall, by virtue of any lease, covenant, or contract theretofore made or entered into, be bound to renew to any other person or persons any lease of any such lands and premises, either as often as such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person respectively shall renew the lease of such lands and premises to him such immediate superior tenant, or in any other manner, then and in every such case the conveyance of the fee-simple as aforesaid of and in the said lands and premises as aforesaid to such immediate and superior tenant, (or the payment from time to time of the annual rent out of the said lands and premises to the said archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or to “CL. And be it further enacted, that when the fine to be paid upon the execution of any such renewal as before mentioned shall have been, by such covenant, contract, or agreement for renewal, agreed to be a certain or ascertained proportion of or dependent upon the amount of the renewal fine to be paid by the immediate superior tenant of such lands to such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person as aforesaid, then and in such case, upon and after the completion of such purchase of the fee-simple of and in the said lands and premises as aforesaid, the amount of such proportion of such renewal fine payable by such under or inferior tenant shall be ascertained by reference to the amount of the average renewal fine payable previously to the said purchase, as appearing in the certificate of the said commissioners appointed under this act, registered in the registry of the diocese, and enrolled in the rolls office of the court of Chancery as aforesaid, ascertaining the amount of the average renewal fine payable by the immediate superior tenant of the said lands previously to such purchase and sale of the fee-simple and inheritance therein as aforesaid, and in no other manner whatsoever.

“CLII. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that such fine to be paid upon the execution of any such renewal as aforesaid shall be subject to such variation as may be made in the amount thereof according to the price of wheat or oats in any period of seven years, according to the provisions hereinbefore contained, such variation to be applied for and ascertained in the like manner, and subject to like regulations, so far as the same are applicable, as hereinbefore provided in respect of the variation of the new rents to be reserved under this act.

“CLIII. And whereas such purchase of the fee-simple and inheritance of and in such lands by such immediate superior tenant of such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or the said commissioners, will, pursuant to the provisions hereof, enure to the benefit of all persons having derivative estates or interests in the said lands by virtue of leases containing covenants or contracts for renewal, and it is just that all persons having such derivative interests and claiming the benefit of the provisions of this act should contribute to the expense of such purchase; be it therefore enacted, that whenever any such tenant of such lands, holding the same immediately from and under such archbishop or bishop or other ecclesiastical person, or the said commissioners, shall have purchased the fee-simple and inheritance as aforesaid of and in the said lands and premises at a certain rate of purchase money as aforesaid, pursuant to the provisions of this act, and shall, after completing such purchase, be bound, under the provisions of this act, or otherwise, to renew any lease or leases of any of the said lands and premises to any under or inferior tenant, or any other person or persons, all and every such person and persons having any derivative estate or interest in the said lands and premises immediately or mediately from, through, or under such immediate superior tenant who shall have made such purchase as aforesaid, shall respectively contribute towards the amount of the purchase money thereof, or towards reimbursing and paying of a proportion of the same, each to his own next immediate landlord, according to the value of their respective interests, in manner following; that is to say, it shall and may be lawful for such immediate superior tenant who shall have made such purchase as aforesaid, his executors and administrators, by notice in writing, to call upon and require all and every such his under or inferior tenant or tenants, or persons holding immediately from or under him, as shall be entitled

"CLXI. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in case the value of any new lease or interest so to be granted as aforesaid shall at any time appear to the said commissioners to be increased or diminished in any manner whatsoever, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners to accept or require such greater or or lesser renewal fine or fines as in their judgment may be just and reasonable with regard to such increased or diminished value; provided nevertheless, that if any difference as to the increase or reduction of such average renewal fine should arise between the said commissioners and the tenant or tenants, lessee or lessees claiming such renewal, the same shall be referred to the determination of three arbitrators, to be appointed in manner hereinbefore provided for the appointment of arbitrators to adjust differences between the said commissioners and tenants or lessees applying for the purchase of perpetuities under this act, and with the like powers and authorities so far as the same are applicable; and the determination of such arbitrators as to the amount of such increase or reduction of the said fine shall be conclusive and binding upon all persons whomsoever; and the expense of arbitration shall be borne by the said commissioners, or by the said tenants, or lessee or lessees, as such arbitrators shall direct.

“CLXII. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any archbishop or bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, in any lease or demise of lands or premises to be made by him in right of his see or other spiritual jurisdiction, after the passing of this act, or for the said commissioners, in any demise to be made by them of any lands and premises vested in them pursuant to the provisions of this act, to separate any additional rent or sum reserved in consequence of the change in the liability to the payment of composition for any lease or demise of any such lands and premises made by him or them on or after the sixteenth day of August, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two, from the former and customary annual rent or rents theretofore reserved and payable on such lands and premises, and to reserve such former and customary annual rent or rents in any new lease or demise to be made thereof by him or them after the passing of this act.

“CLXIII. And be it further enacted, that no lease or demise of any lands or premises to be made by any archbishop or bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, after the passing of this act, or by the said commissioners of any lands and premises vested or which may hereafter be vested in them pursuant to this act, shall be deemed or taken to be a letting, setting, or demise of any lands and premises within the meaning of an act passed in the second and third years of the reign of his majesty King William the Fourth, intituled, ‘An Act to amend the law relating to tithes in Ireland, passed respectively in the fourth, fifth, and in the seventh and eighth years of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Fourth, providing for the settlement of Composition for Tithes in Ireland, and to make such Compositions payable as to entitle the lessee or tenant thereof to hold the said lands and premises free from the payment of tithes or composition for tithes.

“CLXIV. And be it further enacted, that whenever any notice required by this act, or whenever any service of any order or other proceeding in any court which shall be required or be necessary for carrying into effect any provisions of this act, cannot be given or delivered to or cannot be effected upon any party or person or persons to or for whom such notice is directed or intended, or upon whom such service is to be effected, it shall be sufficient for the person obliged to give such notice or effect such service to leave such notice, or such order or proceeding, at the last or most usual place of abode of such party or person or persons to or upon whom such notice is to be given or service is to be effected, if the same shall be within Ireland, and if the same shall not be within Ireland, then to serve such notice or such copy upon the agent or receiver of the party or person or persons, and if such agent or receiver cannot be discovered, then it shall be sufficient to publish such notice, or to give notice of such order or proceeding, by publishing notice thereof three times in the Dublin Gazette, and also to give such notice to or make such service upon any principal or person of any of the said lands and premises respectively to which such notice, or such order or proceeding shall relate.

“CLXV. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners under this act shall have power and authority, and are hereby empowered and authorized from time to time to administer an oath to any person or persons who shall at any time give them information or be examined of or concerning any matter or thing relating to the execution of this act, or any way concerning the several powers and trusts in them hereby reposed, and the due execution thereof.

“CLXVI. And be it further enacted, that this act may be altered, amended, or repealed by any act or acts to be made in this present session of parliament.

“CLXVII. And be it further enacted, that the schedules (A) and (B) annexed to this act shall be deemed and taken to be part thereof as fully and as effectually as all intents and purposes as if inserted herein.”

on appeals to his majesty in council and on other matters, and to give such powers and jurisdiction to his majesty in council as hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the president for the time being of his majesty's privy council, the lord high chancellor of Great Britain for the time being, and such of the members of his majesty's privy council as shall from time to time hold any of the offices following, that is to say, the office of lord keeper or first lord commissioner of the great seal of Great Britain, lord chief justice or judge of the court of King's Bench, master of the rolls, vice-chancellor of England, lord chief justice or judge of the court of Common Pleas, lord chief baron or baron of the court of Exchequer, judge of the Prerogative court of the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, judge of the high court of Admiralty, and chief judge of the court in Bankruptcy, and also all persons, members of his majesty's privy council, who shall have been president thereof or held the office of lord chancellor of Great Britain, or shall have held any of the other offices hereinbefore mentioned, shall form a committee of his majesty's said privy council, and shall be styled, 'The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council;' provided nevertheless, that it shall be lawful for his majesty from time to time, as and when he shall think fit, by his sign manual, to appoint any two other persons, being privy councillors, to be members of the said committee.

"II. And be it further enacted, that from and after the first day of June one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, all appeals or applications in prize suits and in all other suits or proceedings in the courts of Admiralty, or Vice-Admiralty courts, or any other court in the plantations in America and other his majesty's dominions or elsewhere abroad, which may now, by virtue of any law, statute, commission, or usage, be made to the high court of Admiralty in England, or to the lords commissioners in prize cases, shall be made to his majesty in council (1), and not to the said high court of Admiralty in England or to such commis-

(1) All appeals shall be made to his majesty in council.—Under this statute, the judicial committee of the Privy Council are not empowered to make an order proprio vigore, for the payment of alimony, until a husband shall obey its decrees for restitution: thus, in Taylor v. Taylor, (2 Eccles. Notes of Cases, 174,) which was originally a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, commenced in the Consistory court of London, by Mrs. Elizabeth Henrietta Taylor, against Mr. John Donnithorne Taylor, her husband: it appeared that, the parties were married in 1830, and cohabited till October, 1837, (six children being the issue of the marriage,) when the parties separated, the husband making the wife a liberal allowance. The following year, Mrs. Taylor brought the suit for restitution, which was met on the part of Mr. Taylor with a plea in bar, that she had withdrawn from his society without cause, and had brought a charge of adultery against him, and, well knowing it was entirely devoid of foundation, refused to retract it. The judge of the Consistory court rejected this allegation, which sentence was confirmed by the Arches court, the case being remitted. Pending the suit, Mr. Taylor was ordered to pay Mrs. Taylor 800*l.* a year alimony, which he did for some time, and the cause having come to hearing, the court decreed that Mr. Taylor should take his wife home, and treat her with conjugal affection. From this decree Mr. Taylor appealed to the queen in council, and also discontinued the payment of the 800*l.* a year, on the ground that, the wife having obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, the suit was no longer pending, and she was no longer entitled to alimony. The appeal came on to be heard, February 10, when their Lordships affirmed the decree of the court below, and subsequently, (July 7,) made an order, that the husband should continue to pay his wife alimony until he obeyed the decree by taking her home, &c., and decreed a monition against Mr. Taylor for payment of the arrears then due. Their lordships' order was served upon Mr. Taylor's solicitor and proctor, Mr. Taylor being abroad, out of the jurisdiction; as also subsequent monitions issued by the Consistory court, but no attention had been paid to them. An application was now made to their lordships to pronounce Mr. Taylor in contempt, "in not having obeyed the said monitions, in order for process of sequestration to issue against his estate, to enforce obedience thereto, under Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 93, s. 2."

It was contended, that their lordships had authority to enforce their former order by pronouncing the husband in contempt, upon which an application would be made to the court of Chancery for a writ de contempte capiendo against the goods of the party. This was the only remedy the wife had in such a case. Stat. 2 & 3 Gul. 4, c. 93, which abolished the old writ de arcecommunicata capiendo, directed that the ecclesiastical court sioners as aforesaid; and such appeals shall be made in the same manner and form and within such time wherein such appeals might, if this act had not been passed, have been made to the said high court of Admiralty or to the lords commissioners in prize cases respectively; and that all laws or statutes now in force with respect to any such appeals or applications shall apply to any appeals to be made in pursuance of this act to his majesty in council.

"III. And be it further enacted, that all appeals or complaints in the nature of appeals whatever, which, either by virtue of this act, or of any law, statute, or custom, may be brought before his majesty or his majesty in council, from or in respect of the determination, sentence, rule, or order of any court, judge, or judicial officer, and all such appeals as are now pending and unheard, shall, from and after the passing of this act, be referred by his majesty to the said judicial committee of his privy council, and that such appeals, causes, and matters shall be heard by the said judicial committee, and a report or recommendation thereon shall be made to his majesty in council for his decision thereon as heretofore, in the same manner and form as has been heretofore the custom with respect to matters referred by his majesty to the whole of his privy council or a committee thereof (the nature of such report or recommendation being always stated in open court).

"IV. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for his majesty to refer to the said judicial committee for hearing or consideration any such other matters whatsoever as his majesty shall think fit, and such committee shall thereupon hear or consider the same, and shall advise his majesty thereon in manner aforesaid.

"V. And be it further enacted, that no matter shall be heard, nor shall any order, report, or recommendation be made, by the said judicial committee, in pursuance of this act, unless in the presence of at least four members of the said committee; and that no report or recommendation shall be made to his majesty unless a majority of the members of such judicial committee present at the hearing shall concur in such report or recommendation: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent his majesty, if he shall think fit, from summoning any other of the members of his said privy council to attend the meetings of the said committee.

"VI. And be it further enacted, that in case his majesty shall be pleased, by directions under his sign manual, to require the attendance at the said committee for the purposes of this act of any member or members of the said privy council who shall be a judge or judges of the court of King's Bench, or of the court of Common Pleas, or of the court of Exchequer, such arrangements for dispensing with the attendance of such judge or judges upon his or their ordinary duties during the time of such attendance at the privy council as aforesaid shall be made by the judges of the court or courts to which such judge or judges shall belong respectively in regard to the business of the court and by the judges of the said three courts, or by any eight or more of such judges, including the chiefs of the several courts, in regard to all other duties, as may be necessary and consistent with the public service.

"VII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said judicial committee, should signify that the party was in contempt, and that thereupon a writ de contempte capiendo should issue; and Stat. 3 & 4 Gul. 4, c. 41, constituting the judicial committee, enacted that the queen in council should have the same powers as the ecclesiastical courts in such cases.

On the part of Mr. Taylor, it was urged, that one objection to their lordships' making such an order as was now prayed for was, that their lordships' former order was made in their own name, and by their own authority, and was not an order of the queen in council, founded upon a report by their lordships. Admitting, therefore, that the statute gave the queen in council the same power as the ecclesiastical courts in such cases, their lordships had no such power proprio vigore, and the former order, not having been confirmed by her majesty, was irregular, and could not be enforced.

Lord Brougham: "Their lordships are of opinion that this objection is well founded. The statute gives the power to the queen in council, and not to their lordships. The consequence would be, that such orders could not be made until a council was held at Windsor or Brighton, or wherever the court might be, when their lordships' report might be confirmed by her majesty. In the present case, the defect might be remedied by obtaining her majesty's confirmation of the former order."

in any matter which shall be referred to such committee, to examine witnesses by word of mouth, (and either before or after examination by deposition,) or to direct that the depositions of any witness shall be taken in writing by the registrar of the said privy council to be appointed by his majesty as hereinafter mentioned, or by such other person or persons, and in such manner, order, and course, as his majesty in council or the said judicial committee shall appoint and direct; and that the said registrar and such other person or persons so to be appointed shall have the same powers as are now possessed by an examiner of the high court of Chancery or of any court ecclesiastical.

“VIII. And be it enacted, that in any matter which shall come before the said judicial committee it shall be lawful for the said committee to direct that such witnesses shall be examined or re-examined, and as to such facts as to the said committee shall seem fit, notwithstanding any such witnesses may not have been examined, or no evidence may have been given on any such facts in a previous stage of the matter; and it shall also be lawful for his majesty in council, on the recommendation of the said committee, upon any appeal, to remit the matter which shall be the subject of such appeal to the court from the decision of which such appeal shall have been made, and at the same time to direct that such court shall rehear such matter, in such form, and either generally or upon certain points only, and upon such rehearing take such additional evidence, though before rejected, or reject such evidence before admitted, as his majesty in council shall direct; and further, on any such remitting or otherwise, it shall be lawful for his majesty in council to direct that one or more feigned issue or issues shall be tried in any court in any of his majesty's dominions abroad, for any purpose for which such issue or issues shall to his majesty in council seem proper.

“IX. And be it enacted, that every witness who shall be examined in pursuance of this act shall give his or her evidence upon oath, or if a Quaker or Moravian upon solemn affirmation, which oath and affirmation respectively shall be administered by the said judicial committee and registrar, and by such other person or persons as his majesty in council or the said judicial committee shall appoint; and that every such witness who shall wilfully swear or affirm falsely shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be punished accordingly.

“X. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said judicial committee to direct one or more feigned issue or issues to be tried in any court of common law, and either at bar, before a judge of assize, or at the sittings for the trial of issues in London or Middlesex, and either by a special or common jury, in like manner and for the same purpose as is now done by the high court of Chancery.

“XI. And be it enacted, that it shall be in the discretion of the said judicial committee to direct that, on the trial of any such issue, the depositions already taken of any witness who shall have died, or who shall be incapable to give oral testimony, shall be received in evidence; and further, that such deeds, evidences, and writings shall be produced, and that such facts shall be admitted, as to the said committee shall seem fit.

“XII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said judicial committee to make such and the like orders respecting the admission of persons, whether parties or others, to be examined as witnesses upon the trial of any such issues as aforesaid, as the lord high chancellor or the court of Chancery has been used to make respecting the admission of witnesses upon the trial of issues directed by the lord chancellor or the court of Chancery.

“XIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said judicial committee to direct one or more new trial or new trials of any issue, either generally or upon certain points only; and that in case any witness examined at a former trial of the same issue shall have died, or have, through bodily or mental disease or infirmity, become incapable to repeat his testimony, it shall be lawful for the said committee to direct that parol evidence of the testimony of such witness shall be received.

“XIV. And whereas by an act passed in the thirteenth year of his late majesty King George the Third, and intituled, ‘An Act for establishing certain Regulations for the better Management of the Affairs of the East India Company, as well in India as in Europe,' and by an act passed in the first year of the reign of his present majesty, and intituled, 'An Act to enable the Courts of Law to order the Examination of Witnesses upon Interrogatories and otherwise,' certain powers are given to certain courts therein mentioned to enforce, and provisions are made for the examination of witnesses by commission upon interrogatories and otherwise; be it therefore further enacted, that all the powers and provisions contained in the two last-mentioned acts, or either of them, shall extend to and be exercised by the said judicial committee in all respects as if such committee had been therein named as one of his majesty's courts of law at Westminster.

"XV. And be it enacted, that the costs incurred in the prosecution of any appeal or matter referred to the said judicial committee, and of such issues as the same committee shall under this act direct, shall be paid by such party or parties, person or persons, and be taxed by the aforesaid registrar, or such other person or persons, to be appointed by his majesty in council or the said judicial committee, and in such manner as the said committee shall direct.

"XVI. And be it further enacted, that the orders or decrees of his majesty in council made, in pursuance of any recommendation of the said judicial committee, in any matter of appeal from the judgment or order of any court or judge, shall be enrolled, for safe custody, in such manner, and the same may be inspected and copies thereof taken under such regulations, as his majesty in council shall direct.

"XVII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said committee to refer any matters to be examined and reported on to the aforesaid registrar, or to such other person or persons as shall be appointed by his majesty in council or by the said judicial committee, in the same manner and for the like purposes as matters are referred by the court of Chancery to a master of the said court; and that for the purposes of this act the said registrar and the said person or persons so to be appointed shall have the same powers and authorities as are now possessed by a master in Chancery.

"XVIII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for his majesty, under his sign manual, to appoint any person to be the registrar of the said privy council, as regards the purposes of this act, and to direct what duties shall be performed by the said registrar.

"XIX. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the president for the time being of the said privy council to require the attendance of any witnesses, and the production of any deeds, evidences, or writings, by writ to be issued by such president in such and the same form, or as nearly as may be, as that in which a writ of subpoena ad testificandum or of subpoena duces tecum is now issued by his majesty's court of King's Bench at Westminster; and that every person disobeying any such writ so to be issued by the said president shall be considered as in contempt of the said judicial committee, and shall also be liable to such and the same penalties and consequences as if such writ had issued out of the said court of King's Bench, and may be sued for such penalties in the said court.

"XX. And be it further enacted, that all appeals to his majesty in council shall be made within such times respectively within which the same may now be made, where such time shall be fixed by any law or usage, and where no such law or usage shall exist, then within such time as shall be ordered by his majesty in council; and that, subject to any right subsisting under any charter or constitution of any colony or plantation, it shall be lawful for his majesty in council to alter any usage as to the time of making appeals, and to make any order respecting the time of appealing to his majesty in council.

"XXI. And be it further enacted, that the order or decree of his majesty in council on any appeal from the order, sentence, or decree of any court of justice in the East Indies, or of any colony, plantation, or other his majesty's dominions abroad, shall be carried into effect in such manner, and subject to such limitations and conditions, as his majesty in council shall, on the recommendation of the said judicial committee, direct; and it shall be lawful for his majesty in council, on such recommendation, by order, to direct that such court of justice shall carry the same into effect accordingly, and thereupon such court of justice shall have the same powers of carrying into effect and enforcing such order or decree as are possessed by or are hereby given to his majesty in council: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall impeach or abridge the powers, jurisdiction, or authority of his majesty's privy council as heretofore exercised by such council, or in anywise alter the constitution or duties of the said privy council, except so far as the same are expressly altered by this act, and for the purposes aforesaid.

"XXII. And whereas various appeals to his majesty in council from the courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at the several presidencies of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay in the East Indies, have been admitted by the said courts, and the transcripts of the proceedings in appeal have been from time to time transmitted under the seal of the said courts, through the united company of merchants in England trading to the East Indies, to the office of his majesty's said privy council, but the suitors in the causes so appealed have not taken the necessary measures to bring on the same to a hearing; be it therefore further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that it shall be lawful for his majesty in council to give such directions to the said united company and other persons for the purpose of bringing to a hearing before the said committee the several cases appealed or hereafter to be appealed to his majesty in council from the several courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in the East Indies, and for appointing agents and counsel for the different parties in such appeals, and to make such orders for security and payment of the costs thereof, as his said majesty in council shall think fit; and thereupon such appeals shall be heard and reported on to his majesty in council, and shall be by his majesty in council determined in the same manner, and the judgments, orders, and decrees of his majesty in council thereon shall be of the same force and effect, as if the same had been brought to a hearing by the direction of the parties appealing in the usual course of proceeding; provided always, that such last-mentioned powers shall not extend to any appeals from the said courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, other than appeals in which no proceedings have been or shall hereafter be taken in England on either side for a period of two years subsequent to the admission of the appeal by such court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

"XXIII. And be it enacted, that in any case where any order shall have been made on any such appeal as last aforesaid, the same shall have full force and effect notwithstanding the death of any of the parties interested therein; but that in all cases where any such appeal may have been withdrawn or discontinued, or any compromise made in respect of the matter in dispute, before the hearing thereof, then the determination of his majesty in council in respect of such appeal shall have no effect.

"XXIV. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for his majesty in council from time to time to make any such rules and orders as may be thought fit for the regulating the mode, form, and time of appeal to be made from the decisions of the said courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or any other courts of judicature in India or elsewhere to the eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, (from the decisions of which an appeal lies to his majesty in council,) and in like manner from time to time to make such other regulations for the preventing delays in the making or hearing such appeals, and as to the expenses attending the said appeals, and as to the amount or value of the property in respect of which any such appeal may be made.

"XXV. And whereas by an act of parliament passed in the fifty-seventh year of the reign of his majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to facilitate the hearing and determining of Suits in Equity in His Majesty's Court of Exchequer at Westminster,' it was enacted that the lord chief baron of the said court for the time being should have power to hear and determine all causes, matters, and things which should be at any time depending in the said court of Exchequer as a court of equity, and that if the said lord chief baron of the court of Exchequer should by sickness or any other unavoidable cause be prevented from sitting on the equity side of the said court for the purposes in the said act mentioned, then it should and might be lawful for his majesty and his successors to nominate and appoint from time to time, by warrant under the royal sign manual, revocable at

"XCI. And be it enacted, that the said court of directors shall and they are required to pay to the bishops so from time to time to be appointed to the said bishoprics of Madras and Bombay, in case they shall be resident in the United Kingdom at the time of their respective appointments, the sum of five hundred pounds each, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of their equipments and voyage.

"XCII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that such bishops shall not have or use any jurisdiction, or exercise any episcopal functions whatsoever, either in the said territories or elsewhere, but only such jurisdiction and functions as shall or may from time to time be limited to them respectively by his majesty by his royal letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom.

"XCIII. And be it enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for his majesty from time to time, if he shall think fit, by his royal letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom, to assign limits to the diocese of the bishopric of Calcutta and to the dioceses of the said bishoprics of Madras and Bombay respectively, and from time to time to alter and vary the same limits respectively, as to his majesty shall seem fit, and to grant to such bishops respectively within the limits of their respective dioceses the exercise of episcopal functions, and of such ecclesiastical jurisdiction as his majesty shall think necessary for the superintendence and good government of the ministers of the united church of England and Ireland therein.

"XCIV. Provided always, and be it enacted, that the Bishop of Calcutta for the time being shall be deemed and taken to be the metropolitan bishop in India, and as such shall have, enjoy, and exercise all such ecclesiastical jurisdiction and episcopal functions, for the purposes aforesaid, as his majesty shall by his royal letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom think necessary to direct, subject nevertheless to the general superintendence and revision of the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being: and that the Bishops of Madras and Bombay for the time being respectively shall be subject to the Bishop of Calcutta for the time being as such metropolitan, and shall, at the time of their respective appointments to such bishoprics, or at the time of their respective consecrations as bishop, take an oath of obedience to the said Bishop of Calcutta in such manner as his majesty by his said royal letters patent shall be pleased to direct.

"XCV. And be it enacted, that when and as often as it shall please his majesty to issue any letters patent respecting the bishopric of Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, or for the nomination or appointment of any person thereto respectively, the warrant for the bill in every such case shall be countersigned by the president of the board of commissioners for the affairs of India, and by no other person.

"XCVI. er enacted, that in every case descent shall be traced from the person from whom the land shall be proved that he inherited the same; and the intent that the pedigree may never be carried further than the person from whom the land shall be proved that he inherited the same; and the land shall, for the purposes of this act, be considered as descended from the person from whom he inherited the same; and the person from whom he inherited the same shall be considered as the purchaser unless it shall be proved that he inherited the same from the last person from whom the land shall be proved that he inherited the same; and in every case be considered to have been the purchaser from whom the land shall be proved that he inherited the same.

"III. And be it further enacted, that when any land shall have been devised by any testator who shall die after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, to the heir or to the person who shall be the heir of such testator, such heir shall be considered to have acquired the land as a devise, and not by descent; and when any land shall have been limited, by any assurance executed after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, to the person or to the heirs of the person who shall thereby have conveyed the same land, such person shall be considered to have acquired the same as a purchaser by virtue of such assurance, and shall not be considered to be entitled thereto as his former estate or part thereof.

"IV. And be it further enacted, that when any person shall have acquired any land by purchase under a limitation to the heirs or to the heirs of the body of any of his ancestors, contained in an assurance executed after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, or under a limitation to the heirs or to the heirs of the body of any of his ancestors, or under any limitation having the same effect, contained in a will of any testator who shall depart this life after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, then and in any of such cases such land shall descend, and the descent thereof shall be traced as if the ancestor named in such limitation had been the purchaser of such land.

"V. And be it further enacted, that no brother or sister shall be considered to inherit immediately from his or her brother or sister, but every descent from a brother or sister shall be traced through the parent.

"VI. And be it further enacted, that every lineal ancestor shall be capable of being heir to any of his issue; and in every case where there shall be no issue of the purchaser, his nearest lineal ancestor shall be his heir in preference to any person who would have been entitled to inherit, either by tracing his descent through such lineal ancestor, or in consequence of there being no descendant of such lineal ancestor, so that the father shall be preferred to a brother or sister, and a more remote lineal ancestor to any of his issue, other than a nearer lineal ancestor or his issue.

"VII. And be it further enacted and declared, that none of the maternal ancestors of the person from whom the descent is to be traced, nor any of their descendants, shall be capable of inheriting until all his paternal ancestors and their descendants shall have failed; and also that no female paternal ancestor of such person, nor any of her descendants, shall be capable of inheriting until all his male paternal ancestors and their descendants shall have failed; and that no female maternal ancestor of such person, nor any of her descendants, shall be capable of inheriting until all his male maternal ancestors and their descendants shall have failed.

LXXXII. STAT. 4 & 5 GULIELMI 4, cap. ix. A.D. 1834.

"An Act to commute for a Corn Rent certain Tithes (1) within the Parish of Kirkby Lonsdale, in the County of Westmorland."

GUL.

(1) Certain tithes.—A question arose under this statute in Fisher (Clerk) v Birrell & another, Commissioners, &c. (2 Q. B. 239), and from the report it appears, that an action of assumpsit was brought by the plaintiff against the defendants on a feigned issue under the above statute; which (sect. 1) states it to be expedient, that a commutation should be made of all tithes, (with exceptions, not material here,) throughout the parish, and recites that it has been proposed to make a valuation throughout the parish of the tithes (among others) of the milk of newly-calved cows when their number exceeds four, the valuation to commence with the fifth cow: and it appoints the defendants commissioners for valuing such tithes, and for carrying the act into execution. Sect. 25 enacts, that, if any person shall think himself aggrieved by any determination of the commissioners, it shall be lawful for him to proceed to a trial at law, in the court of Queen's Bench, of the matters so determined, and that he shall, for that purpose, cause an action to be brought upon a feigned issue against the commissioners for the time being, in cases where the matter of such claim and determination shall be exclusively between such party and the commissioners. Sect. 30 enacts, "That in the valuation of the tithe of milk the said commissioners shall compute the value of the milk of each milch cow upon each farm, commencing with the fifth cow, subject to a reasonable deduction in respect of such milk as may by law be exempt from the payment of tithe, all milk consumed in the family of the occupier, where such occupier resides in a house of husbandry in the same parish being considered as exempt from the render of tithes, a due proportion of the milk of the first four cows being included in the calculation."

The first count of the declaration, and the first plea, raised an issue upon the following question: "Whether, in the valuation of the tithe of milk in the said parish of Kirkby Lonsdale, the said defendants, as such commissioners as aforesaid, duly and properly computed the value of the milk of each milch cow upon each farm, commencing with the fifth cow, subject only to a reasonable deduction in respect of such milk as may by law be exempt from the payment of tithe; all milk consumed in the family of the occupier, where such occupier resides in a house of husbandry in the same parish, being considered as exempt from the render of tithes; a due proportion of the milk of the first four cows being included in the calculation." There were other issues, but not sufficiently important to be stated.

On the trial, before Mr. Justice Coltman, at the Westmorland summer assizes, 1839, it appeared that, the commissioners having made their estimate and determination on the matters submitted to them, the following among other objections was taken by the plaintiff, the vicar of Kirkby Lonsdale, to their decision as to tithe of milk. That, in calculating that tithe, they had excluded from their estimate the milk consumed by calves, as well that given to them by hand and pail as that which they suck from the cow; whereas the vicar was entitled to tithe of all milk consumed by calves, except so much as was sucked by them from the cow. The learned judge, in summing up, stated, as his opinion, that all the milk sucked by the calf was exempt from tithe; so also was the milk that would have been sucked if the farmer had permitted it; and therefore all the milk given to the calf was, in his opinion, exempt. The jury found for the defendants on all the issues. In the ensuing term, a rule nisi was obtained for a new trial on the ground of misdirection on the above issue; and also on the ground that the verdict, on another issue, was against the evidence.

Upon such facts Lord Denman observed, "In this case there were, amongst others, two issues, one as to tithe of milk, the other as to tithe of calves."

"With respect to the first, the learned judge directed the jury, that there should be deduction made in respect of milk given to calves but not sucked by them from the cow. The case of Bosworth v. Limbrick, (3 Gwillim, 1101; 2 E. & Y. 310; 8 C. (in Dom. Proc.) as Cullimore v. Bosworth, 7 Bro. P. C. 57, 2nd ed.) was cited to shew that this direction was wrong; but it does not necessarily go that length. It was further urged, that the principle on which turnips are titheable must govern this case. It is established in numerous cases that, if turnips be drawn and given to milch cows or other profitable cattle, they are titheable; though, if the same cows or cattle had depastured them without their being drawn, the turnips would not be titheable. So, it was said, if calves suck the cows, the milk is not titheable, but, if the cows be milked, that milk is titheable, whether applied to the feeding of calves or any other purpose, except the use of the family.

"The analogy seems to be perfect: yet we should have hesitated to act upon it, because we do not see any sound principle upon which the decisions as to turnips can be justified. But, when we find that the legislature, by Stat. 5 & 6 Gul. 4, c. 75, has done away with the distinction in regard to turnips, expressly providing that turnips severed and eaten on the ground shall be titheable in the manner only as if eaten without being severed, we have a different analogy suggested, upon which we have no hesitation in acting.

"The judge's direction was said to be wrong, because he had not expressly limited the exception of milk given to calves to the period before the calves themselves were titheable. We do not find that any objection, on account of the want of such limitation, was made at the trial, and we have no doubt
